French Abandon Rhine Demands, Agree to Parley

Ready to Discuss Hitler, Other Peace Offers, British Reveal.

Policing of Neutral Zone Is Provided

Action Follows 3-Hour Argument to League Council by German.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 19. — A French agreement to withdraw her demand for evacuation of German troops from the Rhineland and to negotiate on Adolf Hitler's peace proposals at an international security and economic conference was disclosed tonight in high British quarters.

This development, the major one of six days of negotiations and bickering among worried European powers, overshadowed a formal indictment of Germany by the League of Nations' Council today as a violator of the Locarno and Versailles treaties.

The conference probably would be held in May. Germany, however, must consent to international forces policing the demilitarized Rhineland zone during the negotiations.

Other Plans Involved.

At the conference both Hitler's substitute peace proposals, which the French hitherto angrily refused to consider, and others as well, would be considered.

These points were embraced in a tentative plan drawn up by delegates of Britain, France, Italy and Belgium. It was approved tonight by the British cabinet. Anthony Eden, foreign secretary, will disclose full details to the House of Commons tomorrow.

The British emphasized that Germany cannot hope to re-establish peace with Western powers at the expense of Russia or her Eastern neighbors.

Eden summoned Joachim von Ribbentrop, who pleaded Germany's case before the Council today, to the foreign office tonight, and gave him details of the plan, which is 14 typewritten pages long with numerous annexes and resolutions.

Flandin Hastens to Paris.

Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin of France rushed to Paris and placed the scheme before the cabinet which approved it tonight. The Italian and Belgian representatives submitted it to their governments.

Week-long debate, often bitter, by the four ranking Locarno powers in search of a program ended suddenly when the agreement was announced. British diplomats heaved a great sigh of relief.

One high official said the agreement caused "the greatest satisfaction" in view of strained relations of the last 10 days. He said Europe had been living under a possible threat of war, but that the general temperature of the whole continent would drop materially when terms were announced tomorrow.

The British intimated the four powers have now done their part to relieve the strain and it is up to Germany to contribute. The plan, many details of which were kept secret, provides what course will be followed in case of a breakdown in negotiations with Hitler.

Taking Hitler at Word.

A British authority pointed out that the powers are taking Hitler at his word in statements that Germany desires to live in peace and calling for a showdown on his sincerity in offering to negotiate now.

Eden is said to have told Von Ribbentrop there was no chance whatever of making progress unless Hitler agrees to the "mild" security measures demanded by France to cover the period until a new treaty

3 Star Dust Clouds Found in Milky Way

Cambridge, Mass., March 19 (AP).—The Harvard College Observatory announced today the discovery of three gigantic clouds of star dust in the Milky Way, several hundred light years from earth and hundreds of times larger than the solar system.

They are called planetary nebulae and, viewed through a telescope, each appears as a luminous ring surrounding a brilliant nucleus star. They were found by Mrs. Muriel M. Seyfert, research assistant, on photographs made at Bloemfontein, South Africa.

Phone Inquiry By U. S. Agents Asked by F.C.C.

Safety Director of Miami Assails the 'Nation-Wide News Service.'

As the Federal Communications Commission yesterday asked the Department of Justice to investigate activities of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. in furnishing wires and equipment to racing news organizations, the F. C. C.'s exploration of the operations and set-up of the $5,000,000,000 monopoly, largest private business in the world, went on with these developments:

1. Miami's public safety director Andrew Kavanaugh, urged telephone and telegraph companies to refrain from furnishing wires to Moe Annenberg, of the Nationwide News Service, which he said is "rapidly becoming the biggest racket in the country."

2. Rhode Island's attorney general, John P. Hartigan, condemned the furnishing of service by utilities to "people of questionable character," contending such service was now being given to gangsters and racketeers.

3. A. T. & T. General Counsel Charles M. Bracelen said representatives of the company had "gone much too far in doing things they were not expected to do and which I can not approve and which are deplorable."

4. Walter S. Gifford A. T. & T. president, admitted unfamiliarity with the racing-news set-up, described it as a "messy problem," said employes had been shown to be "overzealous," and predicted that such "zealousness would be curbed."

5. Evidence showed that teletypewriters carrying racing news had been repeatedly installed and reinstalled on change of address for two Saginaw, Mich., cigar store partners named Michael Izzo and Michael Duzo, even after Izzo's conviction on gambling charges and over local law-enforcement protests.

The F. C. C. request for an investigation was made by Chairman Paul Walker to J. Edgar Hoover of the Division of Investigation of the Justice Department.

It stemmed from testimony of Wednesday, including assertions that A. T. & T. officials in Massachusetts had reached an "understanding" with Massachusetts State police to be tipped off prior to raids on gambling establishments containing teletypewriter and other equipment so that such equipment could be recovered. This was indicated in correspondence introduced by Samuel Becker, special F. C. C. counsel, conducting the investigation.

President Gifford, informed of the action, said:

"We will be delighted to co-oper-

$150,000,000 Damage Done Through East

Thousands Flee Disease and Hunger; Red Cross Seeks Aid.

Flood Roars Down Ohio Valley; New England Rivers Rising.

By the Associated Press.

The East's greatest flood of this century—its death toll already believed to exceed 130—rolled on unchecked in a dozen States last night with thousands of persons fleeing from newly threatened communities and those in ravaged sections fighting to combat disease, hunger and other perils.

Whole cities, towns and hamlets were battered by the paralyzing force of the greatest deluge in recent history of the Eastern States.

Casualty lists and damage tolls mounted hourly as the flood tides spread desolation over vast areas from the Ohio Valley to Maine. Already the total of wrecked property has passed the $150,000,000 mark.

200,000 Are Homeless.

Red Cross officials estimated 200,000 or more persons were homeless. President Roosevelt joined their appeal for an emergency fund of $3,000,000 to feed, clothe and shelter them.

Pestilence, hunger and widespread suffering followed in the wake of the raging waters.

Convulsed by the flood waters that left Pittsburgh a silent city of disaster, the Ohio River thundered down the West Virginia border, pouring into Wheeling and Wellsburg, W. Va.

The Nation's Capital was menaced by the roaring Potomac. Relief workers labored frantically to throw a cordon of sandbags between the downtown district and the river bank.

To the Northeast, anxious citizens of Hartford, Conn., watched the swift rise of the Connecticut River. They were threatened with a serious flood.

More than half of the total deaths occurred in Pennsylvania, which was swept from border to border.

New York, Jersey Lightly Hit.

New York State and New Jersey suffered, but to a lesser degree.

In the Ohio Valley, terrified thousands fled to the highlands before the river's inexorable rise.

A 55-foot flood crest approached the vicinity of Martins Ferry, Ohio, and Weeling, W. Va.

Parts of Wheeling's business district were under 10 feet of water, and the paralysis that gripped Pittsburgh Wednesday had set in.

Wheeling Island, in the middle of the river, was entirely under water.

In downtown Wheeling panicky residents screamed for help from upper floors. Boatmen toiled frenziedly to remove them.

All schools were closed. Transportation and communication lines were demoralized. Nine persons were drowned as they tried to escape, and four others were killed in an explosion.

At least three were drowned in Wellsburg, where the water was up to the second floors.

Pittsburgh Toll Mounts.

Farther upstream, Pittsburgh was emerging from the wildest flood in its history. But as the waters receded the death and destruction tolls mounted.

Fears were expressed that 35 or more may have lost their lives in the great steel capital and its suburbs. The damage was uncounted, but estimates ranged up to $25,000,000.

More than 15,000 persons were reported routed from their homes in the metropolitan area. The city's 700,000 inhabitants passed their second night of darkness.

The Golden Triangle business district, flooded to the second floors in some places, was under martial rule and almost deserted.

Phone service continued on an emergency basis. Thousands of couriers were dispatched from Red Cross headquarters to carry help to the afflicted.

The search for bodies went on as

President Makes Inspection Tour of Flooded Area

President Roosevelt, accompanied by Secretary Dern, viewed points nearby, where the swollen Potomac was causing damage. At the Virginia approach to Chain Bridge he stopped to chat with Mrs. William Doak, whose husband was Secretary of Labor under President Hoover, and Mrs. Charles Harris (left), of Arlington County, Mrs. Doak's estate, Notre Nid, is on the heights above Chain Bridge.

Water Sweeps Over Wheeling; Death Toll Is 17

Main Street of City Under 15-Ft. Flood; 100 Boats Rescue Islanders.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Wheeling, W. Va., March 19.—The worst flood in the history of this steel-products center of 70,000 persons took a toll today of 17 lives and made thousands homeless after sweeping into the downtown area.

Below the hilltops, to which thousands fled for refuge, lay a spectacle of death, desolation and misery.

Police Lieut. J. E. Stanley, after a survey of the sections hurriedly evacuated, reported 10 persons died trying to escape and four others were killed by an explosion in an inundated home.

Later, officers at nearby Wellsburg, famed West Virginia Gretna Green, reported three persons drowned there.

Spreading devastation for miles in a score of communities on both the Ohio and Pennsylvania side, the river swept up Market street, Wheeling's main thoroughfare, and submerged it under 15 feet of water.

Business places were under water up to the first floor ceilings. Hundreds were marooned in the structures.

Late today the ever-spreading waters, carrying off the overflow of the big Pennsylvania floods, reached a stage of 54 feet, unprecedented in this territory. Flood stage is 36 feet. An official estimate of the probable damage was not obtainable, but rescuers said it would be tremendous.

The most serious situation arose at the little island in the middle of

Roosevelt Delays Florida Trip To Direct Relief in Emergency

President Takes Personal Command, Issues a Call for Country to Contribute $3,000,000 to Aid; Makes Tour of Threatened Area.

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt yesterday took personal command of a hastily mobilized relief organization as reports of increasing flood conditions poured into the White House, itself within plain view of rising waters.

Postponing his trip to Florida, which was to have started yesterday afternoon, the President conferred with his relief committee, headed by Secretary Dern, and then, in a proclamation, appealed to the country to contribute at least $3,000,000 to aid the homeless and suffering.

During the afternoon, accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt and Secretary Dern, the President made an inspection tour by automobile of some of the flooded area, driving as far as the Chain Bridge, where water was splashing over the floor of the roadway.

The Roosevelt party stopped for a short time at the home of Mrs. W. N. Doak, widow of the former Secretary of Labor, overlooking Chain Bridge. Frequent stops were made at points along the river and the President shook hands with spectators who were watching the flood. Traffic was so heavy that the Presidential car moved with difficulty.

In Congress, Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, asked an appropriation of $10,000,000 to be expended by the Red Cross to relieve suffering. Senator Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, had previously asked for $5,000,000. Reports indicated that conditions in the Keystone State were perhaps among the worst in the flooded section of the country.

In appealing for public contributions, which will be dispensed through the Red Cross, Mr. Roosevelt said that 200,000 people in 11 States had been driven from their

Text of Plea

Following is the text of President Roosevelt's proclamation calling upon the Nation to contribute to a Red Cross flood-relief fund:

Flood waters raging throughout 11 States have driven 200,000 people from their homes, with every indication that this number may be materially increased within the next 24 hours. In this grave emergency the homeless are turning to our great national relief agency, the American Red Cross, for food, clothing, shelter and medical care.

To enable the Red Cross to meet this immediate obligation and to continue to carry the burden of caring for these unfortunate men, women and children until their homes are restored and they can return to normal living conditions, it is necessary that a minimum relief fund of $3,000,000 be raised as promptly as possible.

As President of the United States and as president of the American Red Cross, I am, therefore, urging our people to contribute promptly and most generously so that sufficient funds may be available for the relief of these thousands of our homeless fellow citizens. I am confident that in the face of this great need your response will be as immediate and as generous as has always been the case when the Red Cross has acted as your agent in the relief of human suffering.

Gov. Nice Asks Federal Help For Refugees

Potomac Mercy Army Acts to Aid Sufferers; Loss Reaches Millions.

By the Associated Press.

Williamsport, Md., March 19.—A new "Army of the Potomac" was mobilized today in the flood-ravaged valley of the historic river to fight disease and suffering.

An army of mercy and not a war machine, it worked to aid the thousands of homeless along the banks of the stream that separated the North's "Army of the Potomac" from the South's "Army of Northern Virginia" during the Civil War.

At Annapolis Gov. Harry W. Nice requested the Maryland delegation in Congress to secure financial aid from the Federal Government for the flooded areas of Maryland.

The telegram was sent after the Allegany County commissioners and the town of Hancock had appealed to the Governor for aid. The town of Hancock said that $15,000 was needed immediately for food, clothing and other necessiites and that $5,000 was needed for the same purposes in adjacent territory.

Appeal to Governor.

Allegany County sent this telegram to the Governor.

"It is absolutely imperative that the State of Maryland extend emergency assistance to Cumberland and adjacent flood area.

"Conditions are appalling. Many people in dire need. Business and traffic at a standstill.

"Allegany County will appreciate any assistance you may be able to extend at this time."

At least four were dead as the swollen river continued its $5,000,000 sweep through the narrow, mountain-lined valley of Maryland-Virginia-West Virginia and gathered fury to loose on the Nation's Capital.

Seven towns were flooded and virtually isolated, nearly all bridges were swept away or impassable, scores of houses smashed or made

Crest Sweeps Waterfront; 120 Families Are Homeless

Chain Bridge Battered by Potomac; Navy Yard Is Inundated.

Traffic Jammed; Airport Submerged

Dikes Protect Federal Triangle; Tidal Basin Overflows.

By Edward T. Folliard.

The Flood of 1936, as it will be known to history, reached a thundering crest in Washington at 7 o'clock last night and then began to recede.

In its wake the flood leaves a battered water front, damage estimated at more than $250,000, 120 homeles families and a major clean-up and repair task.

The peak of the flood found the Potomac River at Key Bridge 18.5 feet above the normal low level, 1 foot less than the crest of the 1889 flood.

The flood behaved just as Weather Bureau and Army experts predicted it would.

Leaping its banks in the afternoon, the river poured over Potomac Park, the water-front area, the Navy Yard, the Army War College reservation, Bolling Field, the Naval Air Station and the Washington-Hoover airport.

The Tidal Basin, ordinarily a placid pool, went over its walls a little later.

Lashes Cherry Trees.

The water lashed the Japanese cherry trees that encircle the Basin, swirled around the John Paul Jones statue and then swept up Seventeenth street, spreading out to the Lincoln Memorial Pools.

Near Constitution avenue, the yellow overflow collided with the sand-bag dike which had been erected the night before and there halted. Uncle Sam's vast real estate holdings in the Federal Triangle were safe.

The 62-year-old Chain Bridge, closed at the first hint of a flood, swayed and trembled as the mountain-born torrent pounded it, but it was still in place early today.

Arlington County's normal water supply, carried in 8-inch mains under the bridge from the District's Reservoir at Dalecarlia, was cut off at 1 p. m. to ease the strain on the structure. Other sources of water supply were tapped, and no shortage was anticipated.

Highway Bridge, another old structure, was closed at 10:30 a. m., and the result was a traffic jam of major proportions.

For a while Key Bridge was the only local span open to traffic, the Arlington Memorial Bridge having been closed to all but passenger buses and trucks hauling sand to the barricade near Constitution avenue.

Bridge Reopened.

In the afternoon the Memorial Bridge was opened to general traffic, and will continue open today.

The traffic congestion was due not alone to the closing of the Highway Bridge, but also to the curiosity aroused by the flood. The city took on a holiday spirit and thousands of persons flocked to Key Bridge to view the spectacle.

Looking over the parapet of the bridge, they beheld a wild scene—a boiling current, rushing toward the bay, and carrying with it small yachts and houseboats, cottages and shacks, beds and ice boxes, and a pitiful array of drowned animals and birds.

Spectators still lined the bridge last night, some of them using flashlights. Just below they could see water rushing over the second-floor ballroom of the Washington Canoe Club.

K street, also known as Water street, was covered at this point by 6 feet of water. Onlookers chuckled as they saw the water near the tops of "No Parking" signs.

In the Southwest section, the flood waters engulfed the District Morgue, forcing the removal of bodies to private undertaking establishments.

Harbor police headquarters also was inundated, as were the wharves

Hisey Guilty in Girl's Death; Faces 30 to 60 Year Sentence

Charles Frederick Hisey, 53-year-old linotype operator, was found guilty of second-degree murder in the slaying of Virgie Lyttle, roomer in his Rittenhouse street home, by a jury of 12 men in Justice Daniel O'Donoghue's Criminal Court yesterday.

The venire, which had heard testimony that the typesetter was in a drunken stupor at the time of the killing last August, deliberated three hours before returning the verdict.

The verdict carries with it a term of from 30 to 60 years behind the bars.

Hisey appeared calm when he faced the prospect of spending the rest of his life in prison. He did not make a statement, and merely looked through the window of the courtroom at the rain which fell outside.

Throughout the three-day trial he has been represented by Attorneys Nugent Dodds and Neil Burkinshaw. Prosecution has been conducted by Assistant United States Attorney Irvin Goldstein.

Justice O'Donoghue will pass sentence on Hisey Saturday, or, at the latest, Monday. No sooner had he heard the verdict than the prisoner was hurried off to District Jail, where he will be held until final commitment is made.

Hisey's wife, her eyes blinking tearfully behind her glasses, also heard the verdict without emotion. Throughout the trial she sat in the courtroom. She served as one of the principal witnesses for the defense.

Be Generous

President Roosevelt has asked the people of the country for $3,000,000 for the Red Cross to assist flood sufferers, homeless and stricken.

The need is great, immediate action imperative. The efficient Red Cross will function without delay.

Residents of Washington have experienced a taste of what the raging floods have done in other communities, but only a taste.

Be generous in responding to the appeal of the President. No catastrophe in recent years has been more widespread, or the need for help greater.

Give today. Donations may be made at National headquarters on Seventeenth street, between D and E streets; at the local headquarters at 1730 E street, or at The Washington Post.

17 Marooned on Potomac Isles Rescued by Coast Guard Crew

By a Staff Correspondent.

Leesburg, Va., March 19.—Coast Guardsmen from Baltimore made several rescues on the Potomac River near here today, battling raging currents, they saved 17 persons marooned on three small islands since sundown Wednesday.

In the effort to rescue Andrew Athey and his family from Harrisons Island, near Balls Bluff, the boat containing the guardsmen and Mrs. Athey crashed into a tree and was crippled for an hour and a half before repairs could be made to reach shore safely.

At Point of Rocks, Md., Fairfax Miskell, his son, Minor; John Odin and James Lyres refused to leave a house on Wheelers Island. The flood waters had reached the second story, and about 20 head of livestock swam safely to the Virginia shore. Miskell's wife and eight children were taken ashore Wednesday night, but he stayed with his house until after the water started to subside.

At Masons Island the rescuers found Enos Jenkins [illegible] eight children cowering in the attic of their home, which was flooded to the second floor. Jenkins was determined to stay with the house, but the guardsmen prevailed upon him to accompany them.

Andrew Moorman, 70, veteran riverman, refused to be disturbed by the waters flooding his home. Moving his belongings to a point on the mountainside, he sat patiently in a rocking chair, and watched the ate with Mr. Hoover. There has been nothing illegal about our activities, as far as I know. Our record is an open book."

Kavanaugh, public safety director of Miami, is also president of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, and was for some time chief of police at Rochester, N. Y.

Cites His Protests.

He testified that many times he had protested to telephone company officials in both Rochester and Miami of cases in which they were furnishing telephones, teletype machines, wires and equipment in quantities to known gambling establishments. He said the company managers had admitted knowing the character of such establishments, their operations and character of business. In evidence of this he pointed out the large deposits, ranging from $25 to $500, required by the telephone companies of persons of questionable character ordering service.

Stresses Service's Size.

He repeatedly criticized the company's furnishing service to the Nationwide News Service, which he had said was "becoming the biggest racket in the country today." He said a racket war over control of this class of business was developing, stemming from a past war between Moe Annenberg, of Nationwide, and one of his lieutenants, named only as "Lynch." He said his information, corroborated by that of chiefs of police throughout the country, showed that Annenberg's income is approximately $6,000,000 yearly, and that since repeal many racketeers have concentrated on this source of funds. (Nationwide Service, sixth largest private long-lines subscriber of A. T. & T., operates in 34 States, over 200 cities and in Canada.)

Hartigan, after identifying a number of photographs of raided gambling places in which phones and other A. T. & T. equipment were illustrated in place, said:

"I feel a public utility ought not to give service in the manner indicated here to people of questionable character. The service should not be put in hideaways, attics or cellars, which in itself should indicate reluctance of subscribers to admit the purpose for which such equipment is used, since most such phones are given to gangsters and racketeers. The elimination of such service would do much to cut down the gambling vice."

Cites New England Co.

He had testified concerning cases in which the New England Telephone Co., A. T. & T. subsidiary, had known of questionable records of subscribers, yet had furnished as many as 19 phones, with other equipment, to a single subscriber of such type.

Gifford, on the stand in the late afternoon, said he "had never heard" of this phase of the private lines service, and that most of the testimony was "news" to him. He said, however, that he has known of the problem as a whole as "a big, difficult and messy problem," although it had never been discussed by the board of directors. He said the company "does not want illegal business and wants to get rid of it."

Getting rid of it he then described as an almost insuperable problem. He thought it very difficult to discriminate among subscribers, since the company cannot refuse service legally.

Problem Called Difficult.

He made the point that while "getting rid of this business would be a great blessing to us," he knew of no way to rule on the character of subscribers without setting up an espionage service in the telephone company, which he said would be "intolerable."

When told of the $550,000 A. T. & T. revenues from Nationwide News Service alone in 1935, he admitted surprise, but added that he couldn't be expected, in conducting a billion-dollar-yearly-income business, to know details of a phase in which such a "small percentage of the whole" was involved as this half-million dollars.

The day's highlight was the Izzo-Duzo case, details of which came out in a long series of letters from Frank Quigley, formerly Cleveland division attorney for the A. T. & T., and now A. T. & T. counsel assigned to the F. C. C., to Frederick R. Elsasser, of the legal office of the Long Lines division of the A. T. & T.

Quigley, on the stand, identified the documents, but refused to draw any conclusions whatsoever from their contents, which showed that Michael Izzo, of Bridgeport, Mich., a suburb of Saginaw, had been arrested for maintaining a gambling place in which A. T. & T. teletype-writers had been seized, had pleaded guilty and had been fined.

Quigley, the correspondence indicated, had then written Elsasser repeatedly to determine how service could be resumed to Izzo without involving the company in any legal responsibility. Izzo, the letters said, was sponsored by one Thomas Tierney, of Saginaw, who was "closely associated" with the town's mayor, George Phenix, and who urged that service be restored him. After a letter in which Mr. Quigley mentioned "hypersensitive local authorities," there were others showing that a teletype machine had been installed for Michael Duzo, Izzo's partner, at a new place of business. Izzo's machine was seized by police after several years, and he was forced several times to move his place of business, it was shown in the letters.

In an Evansville, Ind., case in which a gambling place containing A. T. & T. equipment had been raided, Quigley had co-operated with "both sides," the prosecution and the defense, he later admitted, before the trial.

Roosevelt Messages Show No Progress Yet in Battle for Relief of Unemployed.

By Franklyn Waltman

ADDRESSING Congress January 4, 1935, President Roosevelt asserted that there were "approximately 5,000,000 unemployed now on relief rolls," and explained that, of this total, 1,500,000 were unemployables who should be cared for by local communities, while the remaining 3,500,000 were described as employable people, for whom the Federal Government should provide.

In his relief message to Congress Wednesday, President Roosevelt asserted that "there are at present approximately 5,300,000 families and unattached persons who are in need of some form of public assistance—3,800,000 families and unattached persons on the works program, and 1,500,000 on local and State relief rolls."

Thus a comparison of the President's last two relief messages to Congress—separated by an interval of more than 14 months—demonstrates the alarming fact that in this battle for relief of the unemployed, the Nation has not gained a foot—if anything, it has lost.

A comparison of the requests made by the President for relief funds, on the two occasions, points to the same conclusion. Fourteen months ago Roosevelt asked Congress for $800,000,000 to carry the relief burden from January to July 1, 1935, and $4,000,000,000 for the next two fiscal years. Congress appropriated these funds as requested, giving the President an absolutely free hand in their expenditure.

It is now estimated that, on June 30, Roosevelt will have unexpended $1,103,000,000 of the $4,000,000,000 fund. Thus relief of the unemployed in this fiscal year will cost, in round figures, $2,900,000,000.

For the fiscal year, which starts July 1, the President requests an additional $1,500,000,000, which, along with the $1,103,000,000 balance at the end of this fiscal year, will give him for relief in the 12 months starting July 1 a total of $2,603,000,000. In addition, the President included in the regular budget requests $220,000,000 for the CCC and $228,000,000 for increased public works—items covered by relief funds this year. So the comparable figure totals $3,051,000,000.

Thus the country is confronted with an expenditure for relief in the next fiscal year greater than the sum spent this year. And the prospect exists that as long as the present Federal relief system remains unchanged there will be little decrease in these expenditures for several years.

During the period in which the relief picture has remained substantially unchanged, there has been a gradual increase in employment. The Bureau of Labor Statistics index figure for factory employment, based on the 1923-1925 average, moved from 78.8 in January, 1935, to 83.1 in the same month this year. The bureau's index figures for factory pay rolls advanced from 64.3 in January, 1935, to 72.2 for the first month of this year.

The only explanation offered for the static condition of the relief rolls, in face of upward, even though small, re-employment, is that there is a lag between unemployment and destitution—that during the initial period the jobless person lives on his own—or his family's—resources before going on relief rolls; and that reduction in relief rolls must necessarily lag behind decrease in unemployment.

Such an explanation has been projected for several years, and to the lay mind it would seem that there should be at least some reduction in relief rolls corresponding to the pick-up in employment—unless a large number of those on relief do not want real work, but are content to live on the sums they receive for the light tasks assigned them by the WPA.

Recent revelations seem to indicate that the relationship between unemployment and relief is not so close as has been contended. Charges that hundreds of thousands of dollars have gone, not to the needy, but to a truck-hiring racket in New York; that WPA workers have become Democratic-runners, bringing voters to register in a Missouri county, and that relief funds are being used to build up political machines in West Virginia and Pennsylvania, create the disquieting thought that part of the relief fund is being used for purposes other than relief of distress.

While a comparatively small sum is involved in the specific case, the WPA allotment of $75,000 for a so-called "educational project," embracing radio broadcasts under auspices of the Office of Education, is an illuminating illustration of bureaucracy running wild. Within the week it has been developed that a substantial part of this money is going to artists and technicians who already are enjoying living wages—and not to the needy, for whom it was intended.

Incidentally, if this project cannot be justified on the ground that it alleviates relief, it certainly cannot be justified as an educational project, unless those in charge—with their questions about why-monkeys-scratch, where-to-buy-goobers and how-many-feet-has-Scotland-Yard—assume we are a nation of morons.

These disclosures, charges and counter-charges of politics, inefficiency, waste and crazy undertakings make necessary a thorough, non-partisan and objective investigation of the Federal relief system. The burden of proving that the existing administration of Federal relief is as economical as it can be rests with the Administration, and Congress should force the responsible authorities to meet that test, before further funds are appropriated. Harry Hopkins' "whitewash" and "holier-than-thou" statements are not sufficient.

Townsend Plan, EPIC Disputes Arouse Coast

Struggle Between Hoover, Merriam Supporters in G. O. P. Forecast.

This is the fifth of a series of dispatches on State political situations in the light of the approaching national campaign.

By the Associated Press.

Sacramento, Calif., March 19.—A triangular Democratic battle and the maneuvering of Hoover, Landon and Borah forces have quickened the interest of California voters in the May 5 Presidential primary.

While Democrats generally professed loyalty to President Roosevelt, they are fighting bitterly over whether the "end poverty in California" forces led by Upton Sinclair or the "regulars" headed by Senator McAdoo shall rule the party.

The situation has been complicated by the entry of a third slate pledged to support the Townsend old-age pension. Representative John McGroarty, poet and author of Townsend Plan legislation, was named as the nominal Presidential candidate.

On the Republican front loomed the possibility of a struggle between Gov. Frank F. Merriam and a group friendly to former President Herbert Hoover for control of the State G. O. P. organization.

Merriam for Landon.

Turning a cold shoulder on Hoover's advocacy of uninstructed delegations to the Cleveland convention, Merriam recently came out for Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas after having permitted mention of his own name for a time.

Another group proclaimed its intention of putting Senator William E. Borah's name on the Presidential ballot.

Landon, following a policy of avoiding State primaries, remained silent on whether he would permit his entry into the race. Borah said he had authorized the circulation of petitions so as to be prepared in case he definitely decided to enter.

The State law permits entry of a candidate's name on the ballot unless he repudiates the sponsors. The dead line for filing tickets is March 26.

Observers described the Merriam move as a bid for a greater measure of control over the State G. O. P. organization, now directed largely by men friendly to Hoover.

In line with the former President's wishes, another group of Republican leaders remained committed to the idea of an uninstructed delegation.

The California Republican Assembly, a group of younger party leaders, Sunday reaffirmed its stand for an uninstructed delegation, and requested Gov. Landon to renounce a slate his southern California sponsors have announced.

Prognosticators said Merriam apparently figured his own organization, with the support of William Randolph Hearst, newspaper publisher, who also is backing Landon, could wrest a victory out of the primary.

Merriam polled more than 1,000,000 votes in 1934 to snatch State victory from the majority Democratic Party, led by Sinclair.

Even President Roosevelt failed in a recent attempt to close California Democracy's 1934 wounds. Acting as conciliator between the Sinclairites and the "regulars" the President selected a list of convention delegates.

Sinclairites Bolt.

Senator McAdoo, foe of Sinclair, was given control of the delegation. Eight Sinclairites bolted and the EPIC organization selected a separate delegate list to oppose those named by the President.

The EPIC slate nominally is pledged to Sinclair who, despite many rebuffs in Washington, continues to assert his loyalty to Roosevelt. Sinclair has stipulated that if his primary ticket is elected, it will vote for him on the first ballot and for Roosevelt thereafter. EPIC delegates are pledged to work for a production-for-use plank in the Democratic platform.

Since both EPICS and "regulars" are for Roosevelt, their differences lie in the situation at home. Culbert Olson, an EPIC leader, is State chairman. McAdoo is national committeeman and has had the lion's share of the patronage from Washington.

Despite their internal troubles, the Democrats outnumber the Republicans almost 3 to 2 in registration figures thus far reported.

The Democratic predominance has failed to daunt Hoover. Recently he predicted next November would find California "safely Republican."

Senate to Back WPA Inquiry, Lewis Predicts

Speedy Approval of Davis' Resolution Seen; Holt to Ask Investigation.

By the Associated Press.

Speedy Senate approval of the Davis resolution calling for a broad investigation of the Works Progress Administration was predicted last night by Senator Lewis, of Illinois, the Democratic whip.

The Senate Expenditures Committee, of which Lewis is chairman, reported the resolution yesterday, after Senator Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, had charged that Democrats were making a "political football" out of relief.

Senator Holt (Democrat), West Virginia, who on Wednesday demanded a Nation-wide investigation, said he was drafting a resolution to investigate relief operations and expenditures, not only of WPA, but of the old CWA and FERA as well.

"I believe," Holt said, "that we are going to have the relief problem with us for a long time. I think we should see just what has been done in this and other countries, so as to develop a definite national policy for taking care of the destitute."

To Take Up Request.

At the same time Chairman Buchanan (Democrat), Texas, said his House Appropriations Committee next week would take up Roosevelt's request for an additional $1,500,000,000 for the WPA after next July 1.

Davis told the Expenditures Committee he did not want to "smear" Harry L. Hopkins, WPA Administrator, but that he did want to find out what "political men" in relief work "were getting from $1,200 to $10,000 a year."

Hopkins was defended by Lewis, who asserted that if conditions about which Davis complained actually existed, they were due to local conditions.

"This task of Hopkins," Lewis said, "is one of the most difficult in America. I've yet to see a man who would take his place."

Suggests Starting Point.

Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), Indiana, suggested the inquiry, if voted by the Senate, should start with complaints that political funds had been solicited from relief workers in Pennsylvania.

Davis said he had no particular investigation plan in mind at this time. He added he had received numerous complaints from many States. His resolution calls for $5,000 to start the inquiry.

Holt said he would not oppose the Davis resolution, but would seek to have his own substituted. He has made repeated floor attacks on Hopkins, and has called Hopkins' investigation of politics in the West Virginia WPA Administration a "whitewash."

In announcing his committee would take up the President's relief request next week, Buchanan said he wished the sum could have been held to $1,000,000,000.

Discussing reports that efforts would be made to have the appropriation earmarked for specific WPA projects, the Texan said it would take six months to do that.

Bryan's Political Aims Held Still 'Unfulfilled'

Lincoln, Nebr., March 19 (AP).—Speaking at a memorial program to the late William Jennings Bryan, Gov. Clyde L. Herring of Iowa said tonight Bryan's "great plans" remained unfulfilled. The Iowan described the aims of "The Commoner" as "the emancipation of the American farmer and American labor from the grip of the financial oligarchy."

He paid tribute to Bryan's leadership in the cause of world peace. Among the guests at the meeting—which marked the seventy-sixth anniversary of Bryan's birth—was Mayor Charles W. Bryan, a brother of the three-times Democratic Presidential candidate.

Danville, Va., March 19.—City Treasurer E. H. Marshall yesterday made the largest deposit of funds in the city's history when he placed to the credit of the city a check for $1,603,872, the proceeds of a sale of $1,513,000 electric revenue bonds sold recently.

Opinion Sought On Tobacco Plan

By the Associated Press.

Legislation to approve interstate compacts for tobacco control was referred to Senate committee lawyers today for a ruling on its constitutionality. Chairman Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, said a majority of the Senate Agriculture Committee approved the measure.

Under the compact plan, tobacco growing States would enact similar tobacco legislation to regulate tobacco growing, with Congress passing a ratifying act. The Virginia Legislature already has passed the State compact bill and it now is under consideration by the South Carolina Assembly.

Woodall Trial Friday In Death of Mechanic

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., March 19.—The trial of Clyde Woodall, Danville auto mechanic, charged with the murder of James Bryant, a former county officer, has been set for Friday in the Pittsylvania County Circuit Court at Chatham.

Judge Turner Clement has appointed Posie J. Hundley to represent the defendant. The State contends Woodall deliberately ran down Bryant while he was questioning occupants of a parked car on the South Boston road.

Sadler Absolved In Traffic Death

James R. Sadler, 20, of Seat Pleasant, Md., was exonerated yesterday by a coroner's jury after an inquest into the traffic death of Burton Weare, 28, of Capitol Heights, Md.

Weare was struck while walking on Sixty-first street, between Blaine and East Capitol streets northeast, Tuesday night when struck by an automobile driven by Sadler. He was taken to Casualty Hospital, where he died Wednesday of a fractured skull.

At the inquest, witnesses testified Weare was walking in the middle of the roadway and not on the sidewalk. Sadler told the jury the street was very dark, and he did not see Weare until it was too late.

Woman Is Rescued From Flooded Isle After 16 Hours on Roof Top

Two Boatmen Battle Potomac To Save Widow

Navy and Coast Guards Fail in Attempts to Reach Island Resident.

After a 16-hour vigil with the Potomac a few feet off, Mrs. Eva Dell Myers, 50, was rescued yesterday from a rooftop refuge on the northern tip of Sycamore Island, near Glen Echo, Md.

Her rescuers, W. E. Swainson, of Swainson's Island, and John McCann, took Mrs. Myers from the top of an outbuilding in a 15-foot river skiff. They put out from Swainson's home, 3 miles above Glen Echo after Naval and Coast Guard crews abandoned hope of saving her and efforts to shoot lifelines across the building top failed.

Landed safely at Sycamore Club bridge, Mrs. Myers went first to the home of a Glen Echo friend, Dr. Beatrice A. Bickel. After a vain wait for the friend to return, she went to Walter Reed Hospital.

Mrs. Myers, widow of Lieut. Karl Myers, Army aviator, killed in a plane crash, had been warned of the approaching flood, but refused to leave her home on the island. She was saved in February, 1935, from a similar predicament.

Wrapped in wet blankets, she shiveringly told of her experience. "Last evening at 8 o'clock the water got up to my first floor so I went out and climbed on the roof of the outbuildings," she said.

The home from which she fled, a small bungalow type building, afterward was swept several hundred feet downstream.

During the night her German police dog, Fritz, kept swimming out to her and back to the mainland. Mrs. Myers, unable to lift the 80-pound animal to the building top, finally made him understand he was to remain on the mainland.

"It was in great part Fritz's barking which helped me during the night," she continued. "Although I couldn't see him, I could hear him and it comforted me. I felt he understood what I was going through."

When dawn came and she saw the strength of the current, Mrs. Myers said she gave up hope of rescue. During the 16 hours on the roof she had only biscuits to eat.

Swainson, the riverman who made the rescue, lost five houses from the island.

Roosevelt

homes, and added that there was every indication that the number would increase.

During the afternoon, Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the American Red Cross, made a Nation-wide appeal by radio for funds. The President and Admiral Grayson both stressed necessity for promptness in making contributions.

Active direction of flood relief was centered in the council room of the War Department, where activities resembled those of wartime. On a huge map the activities of the Army, Navy, Coast Guard, CCC and groups of Works Progress Relief workers were outlined as the Red Cross and other agencies reported developments.

Picture Changing Momentarily.

"The flood picture is changing momentarily," Grayson said. "With water receding at Johnstown and several other points, our workers report a rapidly approaching crisis in many other areas. The situation in West Virginia is becoming acute and New England States face general devastation from the rising of the Connecticut River."

Red Cross relief workers were sent to the scenes of flood suffering as rapidly as they could be moved. Meanwhile, 3,700 workers began an active appeal for funds from coast to coast. The Red Cross relief force was described as one of the largest that ever has been sent out. In Pittsburgh alone 12,000 families were under care of the Red Cross.

The Works Progress Administration announced that $16,000,000 had been allocated to flood work and all State administrators were ordered to use their forces at their own discretion. It was estimated that 50,000 WPA workers were fighting floods.

The Red Cross was planning to drop food and supplies from Army bombers in some sections of Pennsylvania inaccessible by other means. It received a report that 2,500 persons were in distress at Renova, Pa., on the Susquehanna River.

In a special press conference, President Roosevelt explained details of his emergency flood organization. He divided the organization into four groups.

In the first he placed what he termed the division of relief, composed largely of the Red Cross and the Public Health Service, assigned to provide food, clothing, lodging and medical supplies to refugees.

The second division comprises the Civilian Conservation Corps, which Army officials have said is one of the outstanding agencies in the flood work. The CCC boys are engaged in building dikes, restoring and protecting water supplies, repairing sewers and power and telephone lines.

In the fourth division, the President placed the Army with rescue work as its principal duty.

President Roosevelt was uncertain as to when he would leave on his vacation, but he said that if conditions are sufficiently improved he may depart today. He had an appointment to attend exercises at Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla., tomorrow. If he leaves today, the President probably will go directly to Florida, abandoning previous plans to stop at Warm Springs, Ga., on his way down.

Capital Waterfront Flooded

of the Norfolk & Washington Steamboat Co. When the steamer Southland arrived in the morning, the passengers had to be ferried ashore in rowboats.

The steamer Northland left in the afternoon for Norfolk and a safer berth. On board were only the officers and crew, passengers and freight having been forbidden. Regular service is expected to be resumed today.

The Washington-Hoover airport, long denounced as inadequate, was the only important flying field in the flood area to go out of commission. Air mail had to be routed through Baltimore and trucked here.

American Airlines also shifted their operations to Baltimore. Passengers booked in Washington are being driven to and from that city.

The flood in the Navy Yard was so serious that fire engines were summoned to pump water away from valuable machinery.

Power Plant Threatened.

Flood waters from the Eastern Branch, seeping through a sand-bag barricade, threatened to flood the plant of the Potomac Electric Power Co. at Benning, the city's main source of power.

In case the plant had to be abandoned, plans were complete for bringing power here from Baltimore or Safe Harbor, on the Susquehanna River.

The Army War College, located on a peninsula, was among the first points to feel the flood. Last night the water was dangerously near a warehouse in which are stored the Army's draft records of 1917-18.

Robert Preston Butler, 29, of 408 K street northwest, exhausted from working all night removing equipment from gravel and cement plants at Twenty-seventh and K streets, fell into the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal at Thirty-first and K streets northwest. He was saved by fellow workers. He was taken to Emergency Hospital for treatment for exposure and cold.

Capt. Howard F. Clark, senior assistant engineer commissioner, after inspections of the flooded sections, put the damage at $250,000.

That figure, Capt. Clark said, was preliminary, and more careful checking of damage done when the waters recede may raise the estimate.

Capt. Clark's estimate was in response to an inquiry during the absence of Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, who was making a personal survey of the flood.

Worst damage, from a monetary standpoint, Capt. Clark said, probably was along Water and K streets in Georgetown. The Park Service had available $75,000 with which to erect dikes and do other work incident to the flood.

How many of the houses along the river and canal banks had been washed away on the District and Virginia shores officials did not know. Neither has any accurate estimate been made of their value.

In several places the flood cut through the banks of the canal and these cuts may prove expensive to repair. Damage also was done to the abutment of the railroad trestle over the canal at Weaver terrace and Canal road.

Full amount of the damage could not be estimated, it was said. The surging waters continued their work of destruction through the night.

In Montgomery County, Maryland, Health Officer V. L. Elliott warned residents not to drink muddy water without boiling it.

More than 120 families lost homes on the banks of the Potomac from Brookmant, on the District line, to Cabin John, Md. Last night men, women and children, their household goods bundled together hastily, were being cared for in firehouses and in the homes of neighbors. The Red Cross was giving aid.

Realizing that traffic congestion was inevitable with Highway Bridge closed, President Roosevelt gave orders that Government employes living in Virginia and Maryland be dismissed at noon.

Mile-Long Traffic Jam.

Nevertheless, the city experienced a traffic snarl, particularly in the Georgetown section. The jam extended a mile from Key Bridge.

Cab companies received thousands of calls from residents—particularly women—who wanted to be taken to some point where they could "see the flood." Some of the callers wanted to go as far as Chain Bridge.

Hundreds flocked to the Washington Monument to view the spectacle from its top.

What some of the spectators saw over the railing of Key Bridge was not altogether wholesome. In the afternoon a drowned horse, still hitched to a wagon, crashed against one of the abutments.

Fourteenth street cars and Seventh street cars were halted at Pennsylvania avenue and the passengers transferred to shuttle buses. These, farther south, frequently had to run through 2 and 3 feet of water.

Most of East Potomac Park, including the big golf course, was under water. Boats were being rowed across the Washington-Hoover Airport, and Bolling Field and the Naval Air Station in Anacostia also were inundated.

Memorial Boulevard Covered.

The Memorial Boulevard, which skirts the Potomac from a point opposite the Lincoln Memorial to Mount Vernon, was covered with water in many places as far as Alexandria.

The John Paul Jones statue at the edge of the Tidal Basin was submerged to a point where, if its subject should suddenly come to life, he would have no trouble swimming.

The sandbag dike extending from the Washington Monument Grounds to the west end of the Munitions Building was completed early yesterday.

Thereafter the 3,000 park employes, CCC youths and WPA workers were assigned to building additional dikes along Constitution avenue as far east as Fourteenth street.

The tourist camp in Potomac Park was completely submerged, but by the time the water arrived all tourists had departed.

At the Navy Yard the swollen Anacostia overflowed its banks, flooding the wharves and spreading rapidly to the nearby buildings. By 10 o'clock the water was 7 feet above its normal level and the yard commander had been compelled to disconnect the alternate electrical current, the steam and heat.

Power Plant Menaced.

When the water spread to the boiler room, imperiling the direct electrical current which, if disconnected, would have deprived the yard of all power, six fire engine pumps were set to work. Throughout the early afternoon the pumps were worked at full force. At 3:30 Lieut. Comdr. L. S. Perry announced that the pumps "were holding their own."

All employes of the Navy Yard save selected crews in each of the gun ships were ordered home at noon, not to return until Monday. Work in the shops was suspended, the available men being kept on hand in event of emergency.

The water spread into nearly all of the buildings, the lower floor of the supply department, the forage shop, the radio laboratory, No. 1 gun shop, the diving school, and the powder magazine. By early afternoon the commandant's office was surrounded by water.

Considerable damage was expected by Commander Perry, chiefly to machinery which could not be moved. Similar damage was expected in the Alexandria Naval Torpedo Station, with which Perry was in telephone communication.

Throughout the day the naval officers could do little but watch the progress of the flood, taking periodic soundings and inspecting the grounds to see that all objects that could be washed away were secured. The rough surface of the yard made impossible the building of a dike and by late afternoon the water was coming in over the 6½-foot seawall at the west of the yard.

Trolley Cars Running.

Save for a general slowing up in schedules, street car operations were affected only at three points, the Capital Transit Co. reported. The Rosslyn line going to Georgetown via the Key Bridge was delayed considerably because of the jam, while both the Seventh and Fourteenth street lines were run only as far as Pennsylvania avenue. From Pennsylvania avenue shuttle buses were used to transport the passengers to the Bureau of Engraving and as close to the flooded streets as was possible with safety.

The Washington Rapid Transit Co. had similar trouble with its bus lines to Potomac Park and Lincoln Memorial, both of which were in the center of the restricted area. Here, as in the cases of the shuttle buses, the passengers were let out within a block or two from the customary stops.

Buses going to Alexandria, Arlington, Fairfax and other neighboring Virginia towns were rerouted with the closing of the highway bridge over the Memorial Bridge. Hundreds of Alexandrians paid 15 cents to ride from Alexandria to the Memorial Bridge to look at the flood and paid another 15 cents for the trip back.

The Washington-Virginia-Maryland bus company running buses to Virginia over Key Bridge reported no interruption of traffic, but considerable delay.

Although the waters in the Capital continued to rise through the day, reports from up the river indicated that the crest of the flood had passed there and that "normalcy" would soon return. Westbound bus lines operating out of this city announced late yesterday that they would resume all westbound schedules to Pittsburgh, through most of the areas that were affected by flood in the days previous. Bus services to the West cities had been interrupted for more than a day and a half.

Although the peak of the flood was reported to have shifted from the Pittsburgh area, railroad communication still was cut off last night. The Pennsylvania Railroad reported that westbound traffic farther than York, Pa., was held up; while the Baltimore & Ohio rerouted its trains over the Southern and Chesapeake & Ohio Railroads to Cincinnati.

The usual commuting service of the B. & O. from this city to Brunswick, Md., was cut short at Dickerson, Md., because of flood conditions at Harpers Ferry and other up-Potomac towns.

The demoralization of transportation to the West resulted in a "damming" up of travelers, many of them bound north from Florida, in the city. All of the leading hotels reported a number of guests who were forced to stay in the city. Since a number of people who had made reservations were unable to reach Washington, none of the hotels were pressed in providing accommodations.

Flood waters from the Eastern Branch last night seeped through a sand-bag barricade at the Benning plant of the Potomac Electric Power Co., and flowed into the engine room to a depth of 8 or 9 inches.

Twenty-pumps were being used to eject the water and plans were complete to assure the city of electric power in the event the plant has to be abandoned. The company has an arrangement whereby power can be brought from a power plant in Baltimore. Another high-power line is rigged up with Safe Harbor on the Susquehanna.

Richmond Gas Supply Cut Off By Rising River

Water Laps at Top of 6-Ft. Dike and Threatens City Power Plant.

By the United Press.

Richmond, Va., March 19.—The James River, roaring at its highest crest in 60 years, lapped at the top of a 6-foot sandbag levee here tonight after cutting off Richmond's gas supply.

With the river already near the top of the levee, the crest was not expected until midnight.

Three deaths were confirmed in Virginia and disrupted communication lines prevented check of rumors of additional deaths up the James and Shenandoah Valleys.

Kenneth Patterson was drowned attempting to rescue marooned families at Lynchburg, where property damage aggregated $100,000.

C. M. M. Boston, of Richmond, was drowned near Buena Vista. Louis Wells, Negro, was drowned near Staunton.

Reserve Tanks Low.

The Richmond gas plant was inundated by swirling waters of the James River tonight. Reserve containers on higher ground held enough gas to meet needs only until early evening.

The water here stood at 26.5 feet, setting a 60-year record. More than 1,500 CCC and WPA workers completed 2,000 feet of the 6-foot-high sandbag levee, only to have the river rise to near its top in a few hours. Officials said that city power plant will be inundated if the river reaches 27 feet—only half a foot higher than its stage at 5 p. m.

Virginia Surveys Damage.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 19.—While the State Capital moved hurriedly to protect itself from the swirling waters of the James River, rising toward the highest mark in decades, other sections of Virginia tonight began to survey the ravages of flood waters that have swept through the State the past two days, inflicting heavy damage, as yet unestimated, and bringing death to four.

Many riverside plants in Richmond suspended operations as the crest of the flood moved seaward, leaving damaged highways and flooded towns and cities in its wake.

Waters were receding in many localities, however, and the State highway department reported most thoroughfares open to traffic. Damage to the roads had not been estimated, but was expected to approximate that of the winter snowfall and freezes that will necessitate a repair bill of about $1,000,000.

Huge Snow Adds to Peril.

Winter joined in contributing to the sudden havoc that paralyzed traffic, imperiled lives and homes and brought distress to many throughout the State. Snow drifts reaching depths of 10 feet in the western sections, which were melting today under a warm sun, added new threats of high waters.

The Potomac River, running 35 feet above normal during the day, continued on its rampage, though relief was in sight as the crest had passed.

The highway department reported all bridges across the James River west of Richmond, except one at Bremo, closed with some washed out.

Richmond's gas plant turned to its reserve supply as the generating plant was shut off by the high water. It was estimated the supply was sufficient to carry the city through the evening.

Fifteen hundred CCC workers aided in raising dikes in anticipation of a 27-foot crest.

Shenandoah Recovering.

The Shenandoah Valley, meanwhile, was gradually recovering, reopening roads and pumping water from homes and other structures. The valley was one of the first sections to feel the full effects of the floods that followed torrential rains.

While train service was more nearly normal, the James River division of the Chesapeake & Ohio continued out of commission, and the Southern branch between Front Royal and Harrisonburg was partially covered by water.

Main line trains were reported getting through to Cincinnati and the West, after some interruption of service on Wednesday.

The Seaboard Air Line ran no trains either North or South out of Richmond tonight as the flood rendered its bridge here across the James River unsafe. Hull Street Station, terminus of the Southern Railroad, was under water, and trains to the southwest were started from Sixth and Perry streets, South Richmond.

Highway Rowboat Sinks, Owner Saved

Swept into a creek when his rowboat capsized on flooded Highway No. 1, near Roaches Run, Va., last night, Lloyd Penrose, Washington Airport radio operator, was succued by friends.

He clung to a tree beneath a bridge for 25 minutes. He was taken to Emergency Hospital by the Jefferson Rescue Squad. Physicians treated him for exposure.

Penrose's mishap occurred as he was on his way to his home at 1900 South Hayes street, Virginia Highlands.

New England Floods Sweep On, Leaving $50,000,000 Damage in Wake; 19 Dead

Guards Patrol Towns; Relief Work Is Pushed

Loss in Life and Property Mounting; Connecticut River Still Rising.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, March 19.—New England's flood swept relentlessly seaward tonight, leaving in its wake a constantly mounting toll of life and property damage.

There were 19 known dead, including 11 who perished at the onset of the disaster last week. At Hatfield, Mass., one of the hardest hit communities along the swollen Connecticut River, Massachusetts' public safety commissioner, Paul G. Kirk, expressed the belief today many more were missing.

Estimated property damage ranged as high as $50,000,000, with Gov. James M. Curley forecasting upon his return to Boston today from an all-night survey of conditions in western Massachusetts that this State alone had suffered to the extent of between $12,000,000 and $15,000,000.

Thousands were homeless in the six States. Other thousands lived precariously in second stories of their water-swept homes. Entire communities were without public services and others faced with their prospective loss. National Guard companies patrolled the streets of more than a score of communities. Coast Guardsmen, rushed inland from the Atlantic Coast, toiled side by side with other relief workers.

Survey of Main Areas.

A quick glance over the six States showed these focal points:

Hartford, Conn.—Hundreds homeless; trolley service gone and telephone service threatened; Connecticut River at a new record level of more than 31 feet, as compared with a previous record of 29 attained in disastrous floods of 1927. Gov. Wilbur L. Cross orders out National Guard and seven Coast Guard vessels ordered to the stricken area.

Springfield, Mass.—Third largest city in the State, 5,000 estimated homeless, many of whom were being cared for in city schools. Only half of the city's industries operating; Connecticut nearing peak, all National Guard companies in city mobilized and 5,000 National Guard cots rushed here.

Concord, N. H.—Electric power gone; gas company reports only few hours supply left and no immediate prospect of resumption; 15 feet of water going over the power dam at Sewell's Falls in the Merrimack River, as compared with slightly more than 12 in 1927; two-thirds of city reported under water.

Maine—Numerous manufacturing plants along river fronts closed; thousands out of work; two major bridges over turbulent Androscoggin closed as huge ice field flows down stream; many western Maine towns isolated, nine without light or power; water supplies of Saco, Cornish and Pittsfield inoperative; Gov. Louis J. Brann visits Biddleford and Saco and promises State will provide for destitute.

Lawrence-Lowell, Mass., area on the Merrimack River in eastern Massachusetts—Situation reported worse.

Near High at Dam.

Warwick, R. I.—Scores forced to flee as Pawtucket River overflowed banks and mill dam at Lippitt gave way sending stream on rampage. Four relief stations manned by Red Cross workers or members of the ambulance corps of Rhode Island National Guard thrown into action; many mills along banks damaged.

Blackstone River valley, R. I.—Many mills closed at Woonsocket and Pawtucket; thousands out of work, but river seemingly under control.

Rutland, Vt.—Gov. Charles M. Smith orders four Guard companies to duty at stricken points—Windsor, Brattleboro, Bennington and Bellows Falls; Rutland Railroad completely tied up with wash-outs on all divisions; main service at standstill.

Vernon, Vt.—Million-dollar dam saved by legionnaires, National Guardsmen from Keene, N. H., and others who toiled through the night to reinforce it.

Brattleboro, Vt.—Water up to roofs of some houses; community without lights and using candles.

turbulent river. He declared "the waters of 1889 were bad, but this had it beat by at least 2 feet." For years his father operated a ferry between Virginia and Maryland at this point.

Seven of the nine spans on the bridge at Point of Rocks have been swept away by the high waters, forcing the closing of the James Madison highway.

The river is estimated to be about 2 miles wide at Point of Rocks. The highway is flooded in many places, isolating the Maryland town. The Baltimore & Ohio tunnel is flooded to within 6 feet of the top. The Washington Junction of the railroad is at least 6 feet under water.

Residents of Leesburg and vicinity suspended activities, and gathered at the river to give assistance to the homeless. Schools yesterday started a drive for funds to aid the flood victims.

workmen feverishly sought to clear away the mud and slime deposited in the streets by the flood.

Police said fruit cars were being looted in an inundated produce market. One hundred carloads of provisions were ready to enter the city today.

State Is Tragic Panorama.

Outside of Pittsburgh, the State of Pennsylvania was a panorama of death, desolation and disease. Many communities still were isolated and the extent of their casualties was unknown.

The second Johnstown flood was subsiding and the refugees were straggling back from the surrounding hills to reclaim their mud-filled homes. The death toll here may reach 16.

The Potomac River, galvanized by heavy rainfalls, surged toward Washington. Behind it stretched a 100-mile trail of devastation in Maryland.

The situation in other sections:

New England.

National guardsmen were mobilized in five of the six New England States as a steady rainfall swelled rivers to new flood levels. Weather observers said no let-up was in sight.

Eight deaths were added in the last two days to the toll of ten taken in last week's floods. Upward of 10,000 persons were homeless and almost all valleys were under 3 to 1 feet of water.

Highway travel was impossible in Massachusetts, Vermont and New Hampshire. Bridges all along the Connecticut River were smashed and dams were crumbling. State police ordered "all persons in the Connecticut Valley to move out at once" when a dam at Vernon, Vt., threatened to give way.

Railroad traffic was disorganized. Boston feared a milk shortage. Food supplies grew scarce even in communities not affected by flood waters.

More than half of the drinking water supply of Worcester, Mass., was filled with mud. Similar conditions were reported elsewhere.

Throughout New England's great river valleys families were forced to flee their homes with whatever possessions they could carry and seek shelter on higher ground.

Approximately 75,000 persons were made idle by the closing of nearly 100 factories.

Hundreds of Smith College girls, released for their spring vacation, were marooned in Northampton, Mass.

Red Cross officials reported that the situation was rapidly approaching a crisis, with many towns in the Connecticut Valley endangered. Field workers were sent into the area.

New York State.

Four thousand were temporarily homeless and many cities partly inundated as New York's swollen streams began slowly to recede. The State's death toll was two.

As the Red Cross, Salvation Army and WPA rushed relief supplies into the devastated communities, the Governor and the Legislature took action to extend the full cooperation of the State in the emergency.

The State highway department warned all persons to avoid motor travel. Many roads were blocked and railways were still operating under difficulties.

At Binghamton, where the situation was most serious, the Susquehanna and Chenango Rivers had fallen slightly, but the city of 80,000 was faced with a drinking water shortage.

The city's pumping plant was still under water and the supply in the reservoir was rapidly diminishing. City officials, however, said the situation was "not alarming yet."

Many hotels and restaurants were serving milk and beer instead of water, and hospitals were using water from private wells.

The Troy, Green Island, Watervliet and other Hudson Valley cities were partly inundated, but the river was receding. The Mohawk, which flooded low sections of Schenectady, also was falling.

Communication was partly restored at Ithaca, Hornell and other cities isolated Wednesday by a sleet storm.

An outbreak of colitis was reported at Sidney Center, 40 miles northeast of Binghamton. This was the only report of disease attending the flood.

Gov. Earle, returning from an aerial survey of damage along the Susquehanna River, said damage in Williamsport appeared to be almost as extensive as that in Johnstown.

"The greater part of the town is under water," he said, "and rescues by means of boats continue."

The Governor said that "Lock Haven is hard hit," and Sunbury "is in terrible condition."

Eastern and Central Pennsylvania.

State officials estimated 50,000 were homeless in eastern and central Pennsylvania and property damage ran into "the millions."

Many cities were still isolated and had not been heard from since Wednesday morning.

S. T. Remsnyder, a telegraph operator who had been marooned in Williamsport two days, said flames destroyed six buildings in the business section Wednesday night when fire engines were stalled in water.

He said 600 homeless were huddled in schools and other buildings. Some families, he said, had been without food or water for 36 hours.

The situation was still critical at Wilkes-Barre, although the Susquehanna had stopped rising. Adding to the terrors of the residents, gas fumes were escaping from broken mains, overcoming 20.

Rail traffic was suspended on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, over which trains of the Pennsylvania and the Baltimore & Ohio lines have been running.

Twenty-two cases of scarlet fever and 10 of measles were reported by the Red Cross at Sunbury, where 5,000 were homeless. Fire destroyed two homes.

Five firemen, who set out on a rescue mission from Milton, were reported missing.

Two were drowned at Towanda.

Three farmers were believed drowned near Lewistown while trying to save some cattle.

The village of Livermore was completely submerged by the Conemaugh River, leaving its entire population of 350 homeless.

The Kiskemintas River was receding after driving 2,000 persons from their homes and causing two deaths.

Altoona, Harrisburg, South Harrisburg, Steelton and many other cities were partly inundated.

Steamer Founders With 7 in Sound

Norfolk, Va., March 19 (AP).—Seven persons were aboard the steamer Isle of Surry when it sank in Alligator River, Pamlico Sound, it was reported today to the Norfolk division headquarters of the Coast Guard. Whether anyone was lost could not be learned.

The Coast Guard cutter Pamlico sent the message, which stated that the cutter was on its way to aid the Isle of Surry.

The name of the owner was given as Preston Mooney, Lake Landing, N. C., with Elizabeth City as the home port.

Army to Feed Pennsylvania Flood Victims

All Available Equipment of 3d Corps Area Sent to Stricken Towns.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, March 19.—All available Thirds Corps Area resources were marshalled today by the Army to carry relief to flood-stricken regions in Pennsylvania.

Maj. Gen. A. J. Bowley, corps commander, acted in response to a request from Gov. George H. Earle for cots, blankets and other supplies for flood victims in the Wilkes Barre, Johnstown and Pittsburgh areas.

All available Army supplies and equipment, Bowley informed the Army Chief of Staff in Washington, were placed at the disposal of local authorities for the establishment of a hospital station at Johnstown.

Troops Take In Food.

Depots were set up at Chambersburg, Williamsport, Jersey Shore, Loch Haven, Dubois, Renovo, Westport, Johnstown and Sunbury to aid the distressed.

Lieut. Col. A. S. J. Tucker was dispatched with several hundred soldiers of the Sixth Infantry to the Chambersburg zone. The men carried food, tents and other supplies in a fleet of 100 trucks. They had orders to remain until the waters subside.

While men and supplies were being rushed into the flood-driven territory, Gen. Bowley praised the Civilian Conservation Corps radio organization as the only agency to maintain full communication with the outside during the disaster in Pennsylvania.

The corps commander singled out Operator Irvin L. Mericle, of Company 1397, Johnstown, for commendation. This company, composed of war veterans, is stationed on an elevation overlooking the flood scene.

Mericle, Gen. Bowley said, remained at his key throughout the night sending message after message for State authorities, the Army and the Red Cross. Most of his reports dealt with what was going on, the last dispatch ending with the terse statement:

"Still raining like hell."

Fish Wander

Invade Porch, Tool Shed in Waynesboro.

Waynesboro, Va., March 19 (AP).—Fish found themselves in unaccustomed places in flooded Waynesboro today.

C. R. Brooks caught an 8-pound carp on his water-covered front porch while workers at a creosote plant captured another inside a tightly locked tool shed. In the midst of the flood a mule and a cow were seen floating through the heart of the city.

Many Hungry At Johnstown After Deluge

City Scene of Despair and Suffering as Workers Start Cleanup.

By the Associated Press.

Johnstown, Pa., March 19.—Prostrated by the worst flood since the disaster of 1889, the city of Johnstown tonight was a scene of despair, hunger and suffering as relief workers started clearing away debris and wreckage that filled streets and buildings.

As the bedraggled refugees struggled back to their flood-wrecked homes after a sleepless night in emergency shelters, Army officials estimated the death toll at from 7 to 16. There were five known dead.

The suffering city, still without normal lighting service and with heating systems badly crippled, was cheered by the arrival of a few truck loads of food, but hundreds had nothing to eat but dry bread, and sickness was spreading rapidly.

Snowstorm Strikes.

The heating situation became acute as a snowstorm struck the city, accompanied by falling temperatures.

National Guardsmen, State police and local officers patrolled the muddy streets to prevent looting and vandalism as the city continued under martial law.

The Conemaugh River, which poured 16 feet of water over a square mile of the city's business and residential area Tuesday night, was well back in its channel.

A dance pavilion high on Westmont Hill above the city became a cheerless makeshift hospital for 653 sick and destitute refugees, including 253 children.

Three babies were born there.

Dr. H. T. Kahle, in charge of sick relief, cared as best he could for his charges in the unheated refuge.

He said the danger of disease was growing hourly and ordered special health precautions.

While businessmen and householders aided WPA workers with shovels and brooms in clearing out 2 feet of mud from downtown buildings, partial power service was restored.

Dr. Kahle said there was plenty of bread and other food for the sick and the Salvation Army was sending two carloads of food. Trucks came in throughout the day with foodstuffs.

Rowboat Patrol.

In some parts of the main business section, however, flood waters still stood on the streets and officers continued rowboat patrols past the darkened stores.

Fears that the big Quemahoning Dam, 12 miles above Johnstown, might collapse were largely dissipated by reports that the flood gates had been opened, relieving the pressure. It was reported that the dam had broken that sent the residents, panic stricken, fleeing from their homes yesterday. New rumors today caused some confusion for a time.

Communications were partially restored today, but only emergency messages could be carried on the limited facilities.

George Fuller, manager of the Bell Telephone Co., described the situation as the worst since the flood of 1889, which took more than 2,000 lives.

"It's horrible," he said. "It's terrible. To see these damaged buildings and homes is to see something that can never be forgotten.

Dry Bread Eaten.

"There are lots of sick around. People are eating dry bread.

"Dr. Harold Kahle wants an appeal broadcast for bread and jellies to help those who are living on a bread diet alone.

"As far as I can tell now nearly everyone is cared for as regards shelter, although our lights are gone and there is the worst kind of suffering."

An officer at Red Cross headquarters, where thousands of the refugees were cared for last night, said:

"Families are reporting many of their kin missing and we won't be able to tell just what the total loss of life is until the residents return to their homes."

A representative of the Army Engineers reported to Maj. William D. Styer at Pittsburgh that the death toll might be as high as 16.

Maj. Styer said he was making efforts, in conjunction with police and other authorities, to check the reports.

Many refugees, returning from the emergency shelters, found their homes unhabitable or destroyed. They went to schoolhouses, fire stations and private homes until the damage could be repaired.

It will be days, maybe weeks, officers said, before Johnstown is restored to normal. Property damage was estimated at from $3,000,000 to $10,000,000.

Fire Trucks Remove 900 Marooned Pupils

Burlington, N. J., March 19 (AP).—More than 900 pupils of the Wilbur Watts High School here were removed in fire trucks and buses this afternoon when flood waters from the Assiscunk Creek surrounded the building.

Tourist Camp Evacuated In East Potomac Park

With rising waters coming dangerously close, the Tourist Camp in East Potomac Park was evacuated yesterday. The last itinerant guest departed around 10 a. m. Seventy persons were in the camp, most of them in cabins and the remainder in automobile trailers, when the order to evacuate was given late Wednesday night.

Most of the guests were overnight travelers homeward bound from Florida. The management said that the camp probably would be reopened tonight.

Flood Dead in Pittsburgh Feared More Than 30 as City Begins Rehabilitation

Water Recedes, Power Plants Begin Service

Damage Put at 25 Million; City Dark for 2nd Night; Looting Is Reported.

Copyright, 1936, by The Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, March 19.—In darkness for the second night, flood-stricken Pittsburgh took determined steps tonight toward rehabilitation as Army engineers and other agencies sought to check metropolitan death toll, which may exceed 30.

Maj. William D. Styer, United States district engineer, said his engineers reported 20 persons probably perished in the suburban Etna district.

Deputy Coroner H. Allen said his information was there was one known dead and 20 missing in Sharpsburg. A previous Red Cross report to the morgue said there were six bodies in the suburb.

A check of all available sources placed the dead in the metropolitan area at 24, half of them unidentified. Rescue workers reported the deaths of seven persons in suburban McKees Rocks.

The startling reports of heavy death toll shocked Pittsburgh's 700,000 residents, and the 15,000 homeless spurred relief efforts to the utmost, but there was perceptible brightening in the air of despair about the city.

Flood at 35 Feet.

The wates were back to 35 feet, only 10 feet above flood stage, from a high of 45.9.

The Golden Triangle, the billion dollar business district, will be almost clear of water by morning. Forty acres were covered at the time boiling currents poured through the north side and suburbs, creating some of the most terrifying scenes in the memory of any resident.

The total reported dead in western Pennsylvania was 45, with an estimate of at least 16 in Johnstown, where 10,000 were forced out of their homes.

Damage in Pittsburgh alone was estimated roughly at $25,000,000.

With a dozen or more populous communities still cut off from telephone communication, it was feared the loss might go beyond $100,000,000. It was believed between 30,000 and 50,000 persons in the western end of the State had to leave their homes.

Tales of heroic rescue of women, children and aged ones were so many they became commonplace. Rescue workers still were busy tonight trying to reach thousands marooned in many communities.

A thousand National Guardsmen patrolled the Pittsburgh flood area and 500 more controlled darkened Johnstown.

There were reports of looting in both cities and police were called to Western Penitentiary at Pittsburgh after private citizens attempted to commandeer food being taken to convicts.

There were some bright spots to the metropolitan picture.

Power Supplied Hospital.

Sufficient electric power was brought into the city to supply hospitals and emergency agencies.

Food by the carload was on the way from the West and 100 carloads of produce were ready to be unloaded in the morning.

Trucks were made ready to distribute it all and fear of food shortage subsided.

Emergency telephone service was established, although it was still impossible to make normal local calls.

A few street cars began running again.

Thousands of workmen began the gigantic task of clearing out silt and debris in the business area.

The legal holiday proclaimed by Mayor William N. McNair was still in force and only authorized persons were permitted to pass the National Guard ring.

The limited resumption of power allowed pumping stations to operate again, avoiding a possible water famine except in the South Hills residential secton where water remained off.

Waters Sweep Wheeling

the broad Ohio, where most of the 10,000 inhabitants were trapped in their homes by the avalanche of water. Houses were ripped from their foundations and tumbled pell-mell downstream.

Observers reported two of them carried two men gripping to the roof tops.

Rescuers estimated at the emergency headquarters set up in the courthouse that approximately 6,000 persons had been taken from ravaged homes in the City of Wheeling, including the island, which is the city's seventh ward. The island is situated about a half-mile from each shore of the Ohio.

From hilltop vantage points it appeared that the flood waters had completely covered homes in the lower part of the island.

The rescue teams, operated by police and volunteers, did heroic work. They carried babes, men and women from the second floors and made their way back to safety with great difficulty against a tremendous current.

100 Boats Aid Rescue.

More than 100 motorboats took part in the work.

Col. C. B. Hopkins, of the Reserve Officers Training Corps, and Frederick Libbey, both of Wheeling, were credited with making about 100 rescues in their 20-foot powerboat.

Battling the tide on the island streets, the pair encountered waters so high they propelled their boat by pulling themselves along on a trolley wire after the motor failed on one occasion.

Among the thousands rescued were about 20 children, ill with measles, and four expectant mothers. One crippled woman was lifted bodily through a second-story window.

The rescue workers reported some of the victims seemed more concerned in saving their cats and canaries and other pets than in being saved themselves.

An accurate estimate of the homeless was impossible, but some observers placed the figure as high as 20,000.

Cling to Their Homes.

Although the river rose somewhat higher tonight, some of the island dwellers clung to their homes. They moved from the first floor, then to the second and third. Police estimated about one-third of the residents preferred to stay, but all those living on the fringe had been removed.

Names of most of the 17 dead could not be learned.

Lieut. Stanley, of the city police, said:

"Ten people drowned during the night, three of them over the creek in South Wheeling, three more on the island and the others scattered around.

"One little girl fell off a porch into 8 feet of water. Two men drowned when their boat upset." Details were unavailable.

Four others were killed by a gas explosion that blew their home into the air and sank it in deep water. Police attributed the blast to accumulation of gas in the basement.

The City of Wheeling lies between the Ohio River on one side and Little Wheeling Creek on the other.

Waters from the creek, normally a small stream, backed up flood waters 7 miles and circled a part of the community. About 10,000 live in the area.

The army of homeless took refuge in churches, schools and other public buildings, all warm because the power and light plants remained secure despite the inundation. Gas service was gone, however. Some citizens showed a holiday spirit as the waters continued to rise.

Officials said there was no actual food shortage, but there was inability to cook it. Bread and other foodstuffs were being sent to the city from nearby Washington, Pa.

Transportation was demoralized, highways blocked and only one train operating—between Wheeling and suburban Elm Grove. The water rose this evening to within 75 feet of the relief headquarters, but was expected to reach its crest soon.

Scores of establishments were inundated and merchandise ruined.

The water rose to the first floor of the Windsor Hotel on Market street. The Baltimore & Ohio station was flooded. J. E. Blackford, a member of the editorial staff of the Wheeling News, said over the phone that the water covered the first floor. More than 100 workers, he said, were marooned on the second floor. The News was unable to publish.

Office workers and others in many other downtown buildings faced a similar predicament. Boat traffic moved freely, however, with scores of private skiffs being operated by their owners in addition to the 100 or so employed by police and volunteers. The American Legion called 100 legionnaires to help in the relief work.

120 Residences Are Wrecked Along Potomac

30 Houses Near Brookmont Engulfed; Fire House Provides Shelter.

More than 120 houses were wrecked yesterday along the Potomac above Chain Bridge, and hundreds were homeless as the river reached its peak.

A group of about 30 houses bordering on the river near Brookmont, Md., were swept into the torrent or filled with water, and families were driven to take refuge with friends or in the Bethesda Police Station, where relief workers were caring for them.

Among those who lost their houses are Guy MacDonald and Dick Guzzard, of Danville, Va.; John Walters Craemer and his wife and four children, who are staying in the Bethesda Police Station, and Evans Angel, who evacuated a large collection of pets not in the manner of Noah—in an ark—but by taxi.

A few miles upstream, above Glen Echo, about 40 families were driven out of their homes, and many of these were finding temporary shelter in the Glen Echo firehouse. Mrs. John Reeping told a story of how she and her husband carried their seven small children to safety, and then returned to see what was happening along the river by their house.

They crossed to their home by the canal towpath. They were there for about half an hour and when they started to return the flood had backed up so fast that the towpath was under 2 feet of water. Reeping was forced to carry his wife through the swirling water to safety.

Others who were staying in the firehouse included Mrs. Elise Nauck, who had left Morning Glory Island the previous night with her son and a baby, Ralph Burton Michel, 7 months; Mrs. Parks Tuckey and her son, Alfred; William Keene and his son, John; Boyd Hickman, Beverly Carter, Van Buren Hewitt, Phil Simpson and Cecille Shaffer.

Further up, at Swainsons Island, Mrs. Fayne Hays told another story of destruction. She had been working with Swainson all night in an effort to save their livestock. She told of how he had lost five houses and many chickens, two litters of kittens, several cats and other animals. She pointed to the ducks swimming over the roof of her house, and then to the mark which the 1924 flood had made.

"At 11 o'clock last night the flood reached the 1924 mark," she said, "and it isn't far from the 1889 mark now."

Dozens of houses were destroyed or partly demolished near the island.

Meanwhile, at Chain Bridge crowds had gathered to watch the debris float by. Refrigerators, chairs, parts of houses and every sort of object came floating down. Several people discovered a large turtle which was caught in rubbish along the shore, and they fished for him with a pole. Others tried to rescue hives of bees floating near the bridge.

The families in the houses directly above the bridge hoisted their furniture on saw-horses.

Reckford Directs Relief in Maryland

Annapolis, Md., March 19 (AP).—Gov. Nice today placed Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, adjutant general of Maryland, in charge of the flood situation in Western Maryland.

He said Gen. Reckord would be in complete charge of all National Guard activities in the flood zone and would use his discretion as to the use of troops, units to be called, their assignments and duties.

After conferring with Gen. Reckord, the Governor previously had ordered the Cumberland and Hagerstown National Guard units on duty.

The Governor also signed a proclamation extending the bank holiday in Allegany County through today. He notified the State bank commissioner and Tasker Lowndes, of Cumberland, of his action.

Albino Deer Reported.

Frederick, Md., March 19.—An albino deer, one of nature's freaks, has been seen by William G. Benner on the game preserve of Lancelot Jacques, near Catoctin Furnace. The deer, a 3-year-old doe, was described by Benner as being pure white, with black eyes.

New York Is Grappling With Refugee Problems

Rehabilitation Of 4,000 Taxes Relief Agencies

Disease Outbreak Feared as Waters Subside; Roads Still Blocked.

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. Y., March 19.—Floods receded slowly in New York State tonight, leaving a tremendous problem for relief agencies trying to aid 4,000 homeless.

In addition, the fear that disease outbreaks may occur was expressed in some quarters, and the State health department reported an outbreak of colitis at Sidney Center, 30 miles northeast of Binghamton.

In the Binghamton flood area, Red Cross fed and clothed hundreds of flood victims. The water supply was exhausted and a fire hazard developed. The southern tier industrial city continued to face the greatest flood problem of all.

Meanwhile, Clement V. Conole, district director of the Works Progress Administration, reported that the greatest danger to Binghamton was from an epidemic. A State sanitary expert was sent to the city from Albany, and the WPA prepared to disinfect streets and basements with chlorate of lime.

At various points the WPA and Salvation Army assembled vast quantities of supplies to be distributed by truck as soon as roads can be reopened.

Some of the more than 4,000 estimated temporarily homeless in the Albany-Binghamton-Syracuse triangle returned to houses which were cold and mud-stained.

Water Still High.

But for the most part rivers still flowed so high in Binghamton's first ward and in the low streets of Albany, Troy and other upper Hudson Valley communities that hundreds of homes were still too deep in water for occupancy.

One man was found drowned in a pool near the overflowing Chemung River, near Elmira. Another drowning was reported at Waterford, but the report was later discredited.

The Hudon reached its highest level in 23 years when it flowed three blocks inland to Broadway, Albany, and partly surrounded the Union Station and the new Federal building.

More than 1,000 families hastily left their homes in the nearby communities of Troy, Watervliet, Rensselaer, Waterford, Green Island and Cohoes the Troy Record reported. Police removed many in boats. Public kitchens were opened and cots set up in public buildings.

A critical situation threatened at Green Island when half the village was inundated and all bridges to the mainland except a railroad bridge were flooded. Police warned the 7,000 inhabitants to be ready to leave their homes, and many departed in rowboats. But later today the water began dropping slowly.

Lehman Acts.

Gov. Herbert H. Lehman told the State Assembly this afternoon he had ordered every State facility put at the disposal of flood-damaged communities and had appealed to President Roosevelt for co-operation. The Assembly directed its ways and means committee to see if a $20,000,000 fund set aside for permanent construction could be used for flood relief.

While conditions improved slightly in eastern New York, rain and melting snow created new but apparently less serious flood hazards in western counties.

The Allegany River was within a foot of overflowing into low sections of Salamanca and was still rising. The Chadakoin River threatened to overflow at Jamestown.

In Buffalo, helplessly crippled and without snow-removal funds after a record-breaking late winter snowfall, schools were ordered closed tomorrow because pupils cannot reach schools by automobile, bus or trolley car.

Statesmen to Confer.

Vienna, March 19 (AP).—Four central European statesmen left together today for conference with Premier Mussolini of Italy. They were Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg and Foreign Minister Egon Berger-Waldenegg, of Austria, with Premier Julius Goemboes and Foreign Minister Kolomon von Kanya, of Hungary.

Houses at Seneca Afloat in Potomac

Farmhouses, a hotel, and more than a score of summer cottages at Seneca, Md., 30 miles up the Potomac, yesterday became bobbing specks in a vast lake that spread nearly a mile inland from the river.

Cottages that were not entirely submerged were pitched at crazy angles and floating. Scores of chickens and a number of horses and cattle were drowned. A bull trying to swim the Potomac River was rescued.

All but the third floor of the capacious Riverside Inn was submerged, but Mrs. Hattie Griffith, the manager, whose husband is confined to his bed by illness, declined to leave the premises. Furniture had been placed in boats or piled on the roof.

Sager's general store was entirely under water.

Potomac Mercy Army Acts to Aid Sufferers; Loss Reaches Millions.

uninhabitable and miles of roads washed out in the 100-mile stretch from Cumberland to Point-of-Rocks, where 200 inhabitants were left without homes and food today as the flood waters of the Potomac River began to recede.

Food Supplies Lost.

Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Frederick, said 200 cots and blankets were needed immediately, together with food sufficient for 150 people for at least 10 days.

All the food supplies in the town's stores were lost in the flood which reached its highest point late yesterday. The homeless residents were said to also be short of clothing. Relief agencies started sending needed supplies here late in the day.

State police closed the highway leading into Point of Rocks after a heavy traffic of curiosity seekers had delayed the movement of relief supplies.

The National Guard, the Red Cross, county health units and relief and volunteer agencies mobilized all along the flood-front to aid the sufferers. No outbreak of disease had been reported and every precaution was being taken to prevent it.

1,000 Homeless in Cumberland.

More than 1,000 were homeless in Cumberland alone, Maryland's second city of 40,000 being now completely crippled. It was at the head of the flood and receding waters left its streets slimy with mud in which men's suits, women's finery, jewelry, furniture, groceries and other articles from battered stores mingled with debris of every kind.

A 35-foot wall of water today forced the Potomac River from its banks at Leesburg and carried destruction through the Loudoun County lowlands and islands.

Losses in property and livestock were estimated in thousands of dollars.

The bridge over the Potomac at Point of Rocks was torn from its moorings and hurled into the swirling waters, completely blocking Route 15.

The crest had been reached, it was believed, but families in the lowlands fled to the hills for safety. Cattle and other stock trapped on the islands and low areas were carried away in the flood waters. Upturned houses bobbed down stream.

Homes Endangered.

Rescue parties battled the currents to reach those marooned, some of whom had climbed trees to escape the torrent. Many homes with water touching their eaves were in danger of being swept away.

The flood waters spread over an area a mile wide on the Virginia side of the Potomac.

Elsewhere in the State, particularly along its northern and southern borders, thousands made frantic preparations to receive the full force of raging waters just reaching the lowlands. Other thousands already rendered homeless in western Maryland sought the aid of National Guardsmen and relief workers to salvage some of their property.

Electric power along both sides of the river was shut off last night as the muddy torrent roared toward the sea and engulfed villages and towns in depths greater than those of 1889, year of the Johnstown disaster.

Troops Patrol Streets.

At Cumberland dead-tired troopers patrolled the streets to prevent looting of hundreds of stores and homes. For blocks not a plate-glass store window was intact.

Commerce was dead and devastation commonplace here. Four of the banks in the city were inundated and all stores were closed. Approximately 1,200 residents were driven from their homes.

At Hancock, east of here, town officials took precautions against disease, and State health department anti-typhoid serum was requested.

One-third of the population fled their homes last night, the huge three-span bridge into West Virginia was torn out, and all water and electricity cut off.

Rail Yards Flooded.

Brunswick, farther down the Potomac, was heavily hit early today as the fast-moving flood crest swept the river 1,000 feet from its normal banks. One of the Baltimore & Ohio's largest yards was entirely inundated, as was the town's business section.

In northern Maryland, along the Susquehanna River at Port Deposit, all residents on either side of the waterway were ordered by State police to abandon their homes in the face of peak flood waters expected today at noon.

Forty of the 54 flood gates at the Conowingo Dam were opened, State police said.

Although accurate estimates of the damage could not be had, business men estimated losses in Cumberland would range between $1,500,000 and $3,000,000. Before the flood has run its course further down the river the figure was expected to mount around the $5,000,000 mark.

Log of Flood

River-gauge readings by District engineers at Key Bridge yesterday showed in figures the advance of the flood on Washington.

In a final bulletin last night, the Weather Bureau, which has kept a constant watch on the Potomac during the period of its rise, said the flood crest had been reached at Sycamore Island, Md., near Glen Echo, about 5 p. m. The reading at that time, the Bureau reported, was 28.5 feet.

Two hours later the flood was beginning to roll off to sea. The reading then, according to the bureau, was 28.4 feet.

The crest stage was reached at Key Bridge at 7 p. m. with a top reading of 18.5 feet.

A Reminiscence.

Long before the sixteenth century, when that first Spanishman nosed timidly around Lookout, the Powhatans had known me. They were good neighbors. But John Smith wrote finis to their story when he took it into his head to have a look at my lower reaches. I turned him back at Indian Head but it did no good. Others followed him and soon I was overrun with heavy salt-water craft, tacking as they pleased against every rule of wind and current. Blue Fields, St. Elizabeth's, Duddingtons, Bealls Levels—those were the new names they gave to my shores, parceled out to them by some Lord Baltimore.

They seemed to take particularly to my little cousin, Rock Creek. Soon there was Georgetown, a tight little commercial center where they loaded their tobacco on the big ships. I was sorry to have to shift the channel to the opposite shore when the ice jammed up in the winter of 1780. It threw the shipping business to Alexandria, but it couldn't be helped.

For a time they used ferries: George Washington, coming up from Hunting Creek, used to row over just below Analostan. There was a smart man—he was the first to build a canal to move barges around Great Falls. Then in 1797, just below Little Falls, they built their first bridge. But it was a poor job and in a few years it collapsed of its own weight. They put up a second in 1804 but the big rains came and I soon removed that. The first chain bridge in 1808 looked stronger but it, too, was soon beaten down. Now they use steel: steel is hard for me to combat, so I accept it, generally.

No one was sadder than I when Fort Washington surrendered almost without a shot and the British under Capt. Gordon sailed right up to Alexandria. That was when they burned the White House. I remember it well, for the next year they brought "the Washington" down from New York, the first steamship ever seen in these parts. And then there was the canal they dug down from Cumberland—I was glad to have the responsibility for the upper river shipping taken off my shoulders. And it was up in that Cumberland region—Harpers Ferry, I think—that the next war started. John Brown, his name was. After him there was no peace, not with Stuart and Early criss-crossing the fords above Washington like otters. Those were dark days.

Life has been pleasanter since. Most of the commercial traffic has gone, of course. Canoes and other pleasure craft are my main concern now. They may have stripped my shores and dirtied my waters, but they're a good lot nowadays. They land planes in the inlets now—that's how ingenious they are. It's too bad they had to move their airport the other day when the flood warnings came. But it is nothing: merely a spring stretching. The waters will go down again, never fear.

For I am the Potomac. As it was before, all will be quiet again. All will be quiet.

Rigid Control Over Liquor.

More rigid control over liquor sales in the District is foreshadowed in the investigation ordered by Commissioner Allen, and the vote of the Board of Commissioners to issue no more Class A retail licenses until the number has been reduced to 300. Having already inaugurated a reasonable regulatory system, the Alcohol Beverage Control Board is attempting to eliminate every potential cause of abuse. It is pleasing to note that it has the support of the Commissioners in that endeavor.

Some of the worst features of the pre-prohibition saloon were attributed to control exercised by wholesale dealers over retail outlets. That tie-up led to all manner of devices to force liquor into consumption and weakened the regulatory efforts of local governments. Rational wets and drys alike are united in determination not to permit recurrence of the sordid situation resulting from such loose methods of regulation.

The extent to which wholesale liquor dealers are "carrying" retailers in Washington through the extension of credit is a subject of controversy. The law permits reasonable credit arrangements between dealers and supply houses. Nevertheless, the charges coming from one group of retailers are sufficiently serious to call for investigation. If unreasonable risks are being taken by wholesalers to keep their liquor flowing into consumption channels, vigorous remedial measures may be anticipated.

Likewise, the board's policy of reducing the number of Class A retail licenses from 400 to 300 is in line with the public interest. Three hundred liquor stores will certainly give Washingtonians every reasonable opportunity to buy intoxicants. To issue licenses without limit would carry some dealers close to the verge of bankruptcy, thus encouraging violation of the law and greatly complicating the task of regulation.

Impossible—For The New Deal.

In the annual budget message, as transmitted to Congress on January 3, there was no appropriation for relief. The item was not immediately necessary because the $4,880,000,000 emergency relief appropriation act of 1935, which became law less than a year ago, made funds available until June 30, 1937. And a further reason for postponing further relief estimates, as stated by the President 11 weeks ago, was that: "To make today a formal budget estimate of the amount necessary for work relief would be of necessity a difficult task."

The task which seemed too difficult for Mr. Roosevelt on January 3 remained too difficult on March 18. His current message, asking for a further relief appropriation of $1,500,000,000, makes no analysis of relief needs, submits nothing that can be called a relief policy, conveys no reliable information whatsoever on the unemployment situation. As a constructive attempt to confront a critical national problem it fails utterly.

In two respects, however, the message seeks to discount its pitiful inadequacy in the field of leadership. By palpable juggling of figures it seeks to sustain the ridiculous thesis that the new relief appropriation provides "for the third successive year a reduction in the deficit." To this rather shopworn alibi the only appropriate comment is that the country will soon be ruined if such "reductions" in the deficit continue to be made.

The second excuse introduced by the President in his message of Wednesday demands more extensive examination. For there can be no acceptance of the assertion that "because of the impossibility of an exact definition of what constitutes unemployment, no figures which purport to estimate the total unemployed in the Nation can be even approximately accurate."

To speak of "the impossibility" of an exact definition of unemployment is simply to betray abysmal ignorance of the world's experience in the field of unemployment relief. For at least a quarter of a century such a definition has been the basis of the treatment of unemployment in other nations, and has more lately been approved by the International Labor Office as an effective guiding principle for every country. The "exact definition" which Mr. Roosevelt thinks impossible to attain is simply this: "An unemployed person is one who, although out of work, willing to work and capable of work, is yet unable to obtain employment."

Working on the basis of this simple definition the Employment Exchange System of Great Britain—as merely one foreign illustration—is able to estimate the total unemployed in that country at any given time with an accuracy regarded by statisticians as virtually perfect. Yet, to Mr. Roosevelt, what Great Britain, Germany and other industrial nations have actually accomplished is an "impossibility."

For this there is a very simple explanation. Unemployment relief in this country, as directed by Harry Hopkins, is in the hands of well-meaning, emotional social workers who have demonstrated that they know nothing and care nothing about the technique of scientific unemployment relief.

As long as no work test is applied to applicants for relief our national effort to cope with this problem will continue to be wasteful, inefficient, encouraging to graft and malingering and a ghastly farce in the eyes of all who have really studied the technique which other countries have developed over a long period of years. We shall begin to make progress in this direction when the applicant for relief draws his dole only through a public employment exchange where both he and the availavle jobs, public and private, are registered. As long as the dole, disguised or not, is in effect handed out on the applicant's statement that he can't find work, retrogression rather than progress will be apparent.

This Administration, pledged to scientific social advancement, has been in office over three years. At the end of that period the President solemnly tells Congress that it is an "impossibility" to do what most of the other important industrial nations have already accomplished. And that is a very good measure of the ability with which the New Deal is paying something more than lip service to the cause of social progress.

Victory For Law Enforcement.

Excessive punishments decreed on the basis of insufficient evidence breed a contempt for the law as demoralizing as the opposite extreme of mild penalties for heinous crimes. For that reason, rather than from any emotional sympathy, all upholders of law and order will welcome the news that Edith Maxwell has been granted a review of her case by the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals.

All contributors to The Post's defense fund have been interested in seeing that justice is done to this young woman who was tried, and judged guilty of murdering her father, seemingly without due regard for extenuating circumstances. Even if there were no other ground for asking a review of the evidence, public opinion would regard it as justified by the severity of the sentence imposed.

Statesman-Adventurer.

However the effects of his lifework may be ultimately appraised, Eleutheros Venizelos was a genius. Few other leaders of these times so brilliantly and bafflingly combined the qualities of the local politician with those of the great statesman, and none had a more spectacular career.

He was the last survivor of a type which once made and unmade the European map. He brought to the twentieth century the ancient vision of a Byzantine Empire, which he modernized merely by seeking to give it a republican form of government. More: he all but realized his ideal, and through his many ups and downs he was sustained, to the last, by a spirit that success could not soften, and that failure was powerless to break.

This spirit brought him out of Crete to the control of Greece while yet all Hellas nursed its ages-old suspicion of that island. It turned the country to the Allied cause in the World War—turned it, also, out of the paths of monarchism—and won for Greece, at the Peace Conference, magnificent concessions, only to lose the best of them when England's traditional support was withdrawn in England's traditional manner.

Even at the end—even after the extinction of his 1935 revolution—the aged leader went abroad with that spirit still aflame, and competent observers saw his Anglophile hand in the overthrow of king-maker Kondylis, the friend of Italy. Certainly the latest Greek election won Venizelos and his partisans the right to return home and the right to hold office after their return.

What though the price of these favors was a promise from the Venizelist republicans to "tolerate" the monarchy? Useless now to speculate whether such a promise would have been kept. He makes his exit while still superbly playing the role which he played throughout his whole life: the romantic role of the statesman-adventurer.

Industry's Responsibility.

In his relief message to Congress President Roosevelt stressed his favorite theme of industry's responsibility for increasing production and reducing unemployment. "Federal assistance, which arose as a result of industrial disemployment," he said, "can be terminated if industry itself removes the underlying conditions." And certainly it would follow logically from acceptance of this premise that the "ultimate cost of the Federal works program will thus be determined by private enterprise."

The measure of truth in the President's admonition, however, is so mixed with economic fallacies as to make its conclusion close to absurdity. Unquestionably, industry has a deep-seated interest in finding jobs for the unemployed, if for no other reason than that the very existence of our present economic order is endangered when a large proportion of those willing to work are doomed to chronic idleness. Private enterprise finds its chief social justification in the effectiveness with which it can utilize labor and capital and satisfy the wants of the masses. Prosperity, moreover, is based upon the purchasing power of workers who create demands for produced goods. Hence, the President is right in emphasizing the ultimate obligation of our industries to absorb the unemployed, if they wish to be free from fettering governmental control.

At any given time, however, there are quite definite limits to the extent to which forward-looking employers can respond to appeals to hire more men and increase output. They are not free agents; few possess resources that permit them to make extensive outlays in the mere hope of eventual compensating returns. The NRA experiment in reducing hours and raising wages broke down, for example, long before the decision in the Schechter case, because of the inability of many employers to stand the costs of the work-spreading experiment.

The most likely avenues for absorption of the unemployed are opened up by investments in plant and equipment, development of new industries, and better provision for meeting existing wants. In other words, industrial expansion, financed either by appeals for investment funds or utilization of surplus on hand, is needed to give impetus to re-employment, especially in the heavy industries. Yet an Administration which emphasizes industry's obligation to enlarge its operation in order to create jobs is at the same time pressing for punitive taxation of corporate surpluses. Such surpluses have not only enabled many companies to continue to operate in periods of depression but they have also provided funds with which to pay for repairs and improvements that give widespread employment.

It is both inconsistent and futile to enlarge upon industry's responsibility in the present crisis if private enterprise is to be simultaneously harassed by restrictive regulatory policies and discriminatory tax levies. To destroy incentive to plan for expansion is a curious way to assist industry in taking on more workers.

The way to cure hiccups, we read, is to frighten the patient. You might tell him, for instance, that hundreds of people die of hiccups each year.

Letters To The Editor.

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

On Mr. Pinchot's Letter.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of March 18 is a letter written by former Gov. John H. Bartlett, which takes to task former Gov. Pinchot's statement, saying that he (Mr. Pinchot) will not support President Roosevelt for re-election. The letter goes on to say that, since Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Bartlett are both Progressives, the latter will support the former.

Does anyone know what a Progressive is? If Franklin D. Roosevelt is a Progressive, what then was Teddy Roosevelt? By no sense of the imagination could one favorably compare the two. The difference between the so-called Progressive of the present day and the Progressives of the Teddy Roosevelt type is this: Where the former is willing to stake all on one throw of the dice, the latter type was content to hold something back that they might play again tomorrow. Which course is the safer when the future life of a Government is at stake?

Are boon-doggling, repudiation of contracts, circumventing the Constitution, excessive taxation, snooping in private affairs, piling up debts, lowering of tariffs, political graft (i. e., the contention of Pinchot, Holt and others), the handling of relief by back-room politicians, gagging of press, radio and witnesses, and countless others I could name—are all these Progressiveism? If it takes all these and more to give us this so-called Progressive government of "Security in their daily lives," "recognition" and "assistance they never knew before," then come on Fascism, and let's get the pain over with as quickly as possible!

The NRA was considered by Mr. Roosevelt as being the very keystone of the New Deal, but since the Supreme Court gave it a sound kick in its southern exposure, business has gone along with little or no chiselling, and in most cases an increase in wages (See Mr. Roper's report to Mr. Roosevelt)—a case where the horse and buggy turned out to be Rolls-Royce.

Neither will I vote for any Republican that might happen to get the nomination. Election day will be my fishing day, if the Republicans nominate such a man as Norris, Johnson, etc. And I will have to do a lot of thinking before I support Mr. Borah, if nominated.

HORACE RUSH.

A Plea For Franchisement.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Probably the greatest blessing to be derived from a democratic government is its ability to develop and elevate the masses of the people, to stimulate interests and trust in the workings of the Government and to foster public initiative in education and business. These things are requisite in the promulgation and progress of any government whose sovereignty rests in the hands of the people.

Democracy, being a government by the people and for the people, is dependent upon a high average degree of intelligence, a constant interest in public affairs and a broad knowledge of other peoples and their governments. In our dealings with international affairs we cannot be sectional for our very existence in a complex world of commerce and trade rests upon the necessity of our knowledge of our competitors and neighbors.

Education is the very life blood of any democratic government, for the government under such conditions can only be as good as the people make it. These things being essential, it is of vital importance that we eliminate from our duly constituted authorities such men as Blanton and Fries. Their philosophy, as I see it, can only be a block in the furtherance of peace and good will.

Give the people of Washington their long-deserved franchisement so that they themselves will have a voice in the education and molding of their own citizenship.

BENJAMIN R. STICKNEY, Jr.
Washington, March 18.

"Too Puerile."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You've got to excuse a lot from college students as every college-town resident knows. (I speak of real college towns, like Princeton.) Re the Vets-of-Future Wars-idea; there's something about the college life that does things to the brain, as witness the brain-trusters. Their brain pans seep with brilliance, growth is in the wrong direction. At a mature age they'd hold it in.

These Princeton samples are just leftovers from Juvenalia, to go no further in the estimate, delighted with the publicity they are receiving. Personal publicity, I mean; the college may think differently. And this is just one of many angles, too puerile to be an insult.

F. H. KLING.

Still Section 213.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A few days ago an editorial in The Post on the Government leave bills included the following statements: "President Roosevelt's signature to these measures, which is confidently expected within the next few days, will eliminate the last bit of restrictive legislation pertaining to Federal workers under the economy act."

The editorial reflects The Post's consistently sympathetic attitude toward the Government workers and their problems and needs. It is, therefore, not in a spirit of criticism that I bring to your attention the fact that one other provision of the 1932 economy act which affects very seriously a certain class of Government workers still remains on the statute books and in force. I refer to Section 213 (the "married persons' law"), which requires that in any necessary reduction of personnel married persons whose spouses are also in the service shall be dismissed first and that in future appointments preference shall be given to persons who do not have husband or wife on the Government pay roll.

Under this law approximately 1,900 married persons have been discharged, regardless of their efficiency or length of service, a clear violation of the merit principle of the civil service and a crime against honest hard-working citizens, who, having entered the Government service through open competitive examinations and discharged their duties efficiently, had every reason to expect permanency in their positions and had planned their lives and taken obligations upon themselves on that basis.

Their dismissal has resulted not only in the gravest consequences to these individuals and their families, socially and financially, such as loss of homes, the forcing of dependents onto relief rolls, separations, divorces, postponed marriages, but it has left in the minds of these workers an intense bitterness—a feeling that in doing this to them the Government has violated a principle of the Constitution in that it has without cause confiscated their earning power and therefore their right to pursuit of happiness.

I hope you will take the first available opportunity to correct the evident, though I am sure unintentional, misstatement in your editorial.

A bill (H. R. 5051) which would repeal Section 213 is now before Congress. The support of The Post toward its passage would go far in helping to bring this about.

ABBIE OWEN.

A Courteous Conductor.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Getting on street car No. 1057 from Rosslyn Va., at Twenty-fifth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, about noon hour March 18, and riding east to Eighth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, where I transferred to the Navy Yard car, it was interesting to notice how polite and cautious the conductor was to each passenger (and especially to the ladies) upon entering and leaving the car.

It was raining and the traffic was congested on Pennsylvania avenue. The rain was blinding to those leaving the car and it was necessary to be careful to prevent running into an automobile in crossing the street. But the conductor was on the alert and suggested the necessary precaution to each passenger on leaving the car: "Be careful now and watch for machines in crossing the street."

I thought the precautionary measure suggested by the conductor was a very fine thing and if practiced by all of the conductors and motormen, would in a great measure prevent many accidents. Usually the conductors and motormen on the Washington street car lines are courteous and accommodating, but this conductor seemed to be unusually so.

The Theater And The Color Line.

To the Editor of The Post:—Sir: Anent your editorial of March 18 entitled "The Play's the Thing," I am taking this opportunity to make a few observations. From the tone of your editorial, I gather that the City of Washington has been unjustly treated by the theatrical tycoons who control the production of first class drama, operetta and revue. You cite the per capita buying power of the city, and then venture to say that this is the best "show town" in America outside of New York.

All of this may be true. But do you realize, even further, that fully one-quarter of this city's population and about one-sixth of its buying power must be discounted in the matter of theater census? Washington's theaters are 100 per cent closed to 130,000 of its citizens. The theatrical producers in New York know this, and reckon with it. They know that for approximately six months of the year the National Theater is dark; that the Belasco was forced to abandon the legitimate stage after years of suffering; that the Rialto has been deserted for years, and stands as a grim monument to Washington's ability to support even a first-class movie house.

There are nearly 1,000 colored public school teachers in this city. There is a faculty of several hundred more at Howard University. There is a small army of professional men, including physicians, dentists, lawyers and business men. And finally there are thousands more well employed in the Government service. All of these people would be welcome—nay, sought after—by the theaters of any other national capital. Here in Washington they are ruthlessly excluded from the local theaters. Why?

Go out to Griffith Stadium any afternoon, you will see colored people of culture and refinement sitting anywhere they want to in the stands, and nobody takes offense. The same was true at the Watergate Symphony concerts last summer, as well as the concerts in Constitution Hall. There are more colored people in Greater New York than there are white people in the City of Washington. Yet the colored people in New York create no problem for Broadway. Go down any evening, and you'll see the races mingling good-naturedly in the streets, theaters and night-clubs. Nobody takes any offense.

Race prejudice is on its way out in enlightened communities. It's the badge of mediocrity and stunted growth. It may still be rampant in Chickville and Corner Lots, but it has no place in the life of a city that aspires to be metropolitan. When Washington's theaters open their doors to all of its citizens, regardless of race, or creed, then and only then will it become a really first-class "show town." Thanks for the editorial that prompted these few observations in a spirit of real helpfulness.

The Post Impressionist

"Another Helen."

Post Office, Friday.

MOST people admit that there comes a time in each man's life when mundane duty should be sacrificed to some spiritual obligation. The Post-Impressionist would amend this by saying that there is scarcely ever a time when such a sacrifice isn't either immediately required or else just around the corner. Anyhow, an occasion of the sort is upon us today.

In defiance of The Post's editorial policy supporting archaeological research, and in contempt of our own rule against columnar interference with matters political, we are compelled to protest further extension of those excavations which the University of Cincinnati is conducting beside the bed of the Scamander—and to ask the State Department to rebuke the Honorable Robert P. Skinner, American Ambassador to Turkey.

Not that the University of Cincinnati has ever intentionally injured the Post-Impressionist: it has not even refused him a degree. With Mr. Skinner, moreover, our relations have heretofore been of the pleasantest: we are still grateful to him for favors done us while he was wartime Consul-General at London.

No, the injury we here complain of is universal:

The University's spade-man and the State Department's Anatolian missioner are trying to persuade the world that Helen of Troy was mere moonshine.

Some while ago, the University sent Prof. Carl W. Blegen to Asia Minor, for more digging-up of the nine superimposed—and already too much dug-up—cities of Priam, his predecessors and successors. The professor had been favorably known as a staunch supporter of classic tradition: once arrived at Ilium, Carl Blegen, traditionalist, behaved like Karl Schriftgiesser, iconoclast.

A few weeks since, Ambassador Skinner visited Dr. Blegen. Mr. Skinner had been tenderly remembered for his negotiation of that treaty with Ethiopia which has enabled the United States to take such good care of Haile Selassie. Mr. Skinner writes in the current issue of the American Foreign Service Journal:

"Arising out of the work at Troy is the melancholy news that the legend of Helen . . . was all a myth."

And what though the Ambassador quotes the professor as bemoaning summary disposition "of such a wonderful story as Homer has given us?" The very terms of his regret involve Dr. Blegen. Between them, these otherwise estimable gentlemen would, "like another Helen, fire another Troy," and not even restore to Menelaus' arms the lovely lady who "turned crowned kings to merchants"—would, in fact, toss her upon the top of the pyre.

Well, the Post-Impressionist—and he hopes he is one of an irresistible legion—won't accept any evidence anybody can produce to the unreality of Helen:

We believe in her because she has been seen by so many of our betters;

We believe in her because we ourselves have seen her;

And we believe in her because she is still visible to the happy eye of youth.

Can anybody read Homer and yet contend that this thesis wasn't his and that the blind beggar's clear eye of faith failed to envisage the daughter of Zeus and Leda?

And can anybody read any subsequent poet and doubt the accuracy of that poet's similar vision—poet great or small?

Shakespeare shared in the glimpse, and Rupert Brooke; Dryden, and Frederic Lawrence Knowles. Ernest Dowson saw Helen wearing the uniform of a waitress; Marlowe could even find in a tavern-wench

"The face that launched a thousand ships
And burnt the topless towers of Ilium"— though that ability cost him a knife between the shoulders.

The Post-Impressionist has seen Helen every time he's been in love. And if there breathes a man "with soul so dead" as never to have seen her—why then, quite simply, there breathes a man who has never been in love.

She's in the day-dreams of the boy—those dreams so much more authentic, so much more expressive of his true self, than anything he will ever achieve. She's in the mirror of every girl—not the mirror that merely shows her as others see her, but the secret, the veracious mirror that reflects the girl she wants to be . . .

* * *

Won't you join in our protest against the iconoclasm of Messrs. Ambassador and Professor?

Won't you say with us that "Helen's lips" aren't "drifting dust?"

Won't you echo Lizette Woodworth Reese's really undeniable assertion that "the fight for Helen still goes on?" When you were a little boy or girl, how did you answer Peter Pan's appeal about a faith in fairies?

Don't YOU believe in Helen?

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

The Cool Parisians.

Paris, March 19.

THERE have been more planes than usual in the air over Paris since Hitler moved the army of the winter Olmpics up to their positions along the Rhine, and the sound of motors overhead naturally starts a certain train of thought among the citizens.

For years now sentimental pacifists and flying generals—both groups lopsided on the subject of the next war from the air—have been co-operating in a fear campaign, so it is interesting at this writing to note the cold indifference of the Parisians. Bombardment is no new experience to most of them, and they seem not to believe the ballyhoo of the last 15 years about huge bombs which will blow the Bourse to powder with one large noise and gas bombs which will destroy thousands of civilians in conditions of great discomfort. They have heard all that before.

To be sure, experience taught them that it was not good hygiene to stand in exposed positions when the bombs were popping, so the city is now prepared to dive underground when the raiders come. But they have not bought many gas masks, and sales at the Galeries Lafayette during the last week amounted to just ten.

• • • •

THE masks are expensive equipment, running from 80 to 120 francs, or approximately $5.60 to $8.40, reduced from 300 francs, or $21. At the old price the gas masks were obviously a luxury for the well-to-do, but it can hardly be said that this equipment has been brought within reach of the masses even now. They are said to be good for 24 hours of continual use, after which the chemicals in the snout must be replaced at a cost of a little less than $3.

To a man with a large family and small wages protection on these terms is not very interesting, and the popular idea seems to be that if the peril from gas were really serious the government would have done something long ago to place the equipment in every home.

There are said to be gasproof garments, too—something like the ones which marine divers wear—but the young woman at the gas mask counter at the Galeries Lafayette said they didn't have any. She could get one on a definite order and what size and color would Monsieur like?

• • • •

DRUG STORES and other shops in town also have masks for sale, and there was a window display some time ago of a chemical which, if scattered on the floor of a room, will neutralize certain kinds of gas but not all kinds.

That suggests another problem of individual defense. A man may buy a whole armful of assorted masks for his family at great expense and issue them around, only to discover that the stuff in the snout is not the right formula to resist the particular gas with which the family circle is being bombarded at the moment.

The only way he can tell which gas it is and thus determine which snouts to use, is to smell the gas first. Having done that he just needn't bother to put on the mask. It is too late then, according to the pacifists and the flying generals, whom he, fortunately, does not believe.

• • • •

THE attitude of the civilians who cannot possibly get out of town or safely underground in time for one of the great horrible raids which have been predicted for years is something like that of the British Tommy toward body armor during the big war. The loving parents or the wife or children of the British Tommy might sacrifice many little desires in order to buy him a sort of false belly made of steel—in three sections, like the shell of an armadillo—and present it to him at the hour of his going to the front. He would accept it with affectionate gratitude and half an hour later would be tossing it out of the window of the train because it wasn't regulation. It was too heavy, and, finally, it set his comrades to asking him what the hell—did he want to live forever?

To be sure, if the air raids in the next war should justify the stories of the fear campaign there will be great indignation among the citizens of France, who will feel that the army should have known and the government should have issued civilian protective gear.

Just now, though, they can hear the sound of motors over the city, think their thoughts and remain quite calm, for enemies have been wiping out Paris and the French nation for hundreds of years, and here they are today.

Mexican Insurgents Slay Seventh Teacher

Mexico City, March 19 (AP).—Dispatches from Puebla reported today that a group of insurgents had attacked the town of Zacatlan and killed a Socialist school teacher.

Afterwards the insurgents sacked stores and homes. They fled when troops approached. The teacher was the seventh killed in Puebla this month.

Unconfirmed reports from Villa Vallarta in Jalisco declared that police had fired on Catholic women staging a demonstration in front of the municipal building and had wounded several of them.

Contempt Move Is Filed In Home Schooling Case

Joliet, Ill., March 19 (AP).—A petition requesting that Josiah Watson, former school teacher who has refused to send his children to the public schools, be held in contempt of court was filed today by John Cowing, school board attorney.

Watson has maintained that modern educational methods are inefficient and has insisted he and his wife can give their two children better instruction at home.

Judge George Blott set March 27 for the hearing.

Is Landon Liberal?

Record Of Kansas Governor Reveals Him A Progressive Aligned Since T. R.'s Day With "Boss-Busting" Tradition of State.

By Hilding Siversen.
Special Correspondence of the Post.

Topeka, Kans.

SENATOR BORAH'S recent observations concerning the Standard Oil Co., which have been construed as being an indirect attack on Gov. Landon, have raised the question of Landon's standing as between the stand-pat and progressive elements of the Republican Party. Back in 1912, while Senator Borah cast his lot with President Taft and the stand-patters in the most spectacular fight the two factions of the Republican Party ever staged, Alfred M. Landon cast his lot with Theodore Roosevelt and the Bull Moosers. However, in order to understand the deeper substance of Gov. Landon's political rearing and background, it is necessary briefly to review the situation that existed in Kansas from 1904 until 1934.

During three decades the fight within the Kansas contingent of the Republican Party was probably the most picturesque, bitter, prolonged and vindictive that has been seen in any State. This fight served to put more men into the national limelight than anything else that has happened in the State. At first it was known as the "Boss-Buster" insurrection, and it was a honey.

The germs of the fight really are found in the Populist tradition, for the Boss-Busters were the spiritual heirs of Sockless Jerry Simpson, Mary Elizabeth Lease, Senator Peffer of the long whiskers and many another radical crusader on the side of The People as against Wall Street and the Vested Interests.

• • • •

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE, who, believe it or not, was on the stand-pat side in Populist days, became one of the most forward-looking of the forward-lookers. Henry J. Allen ran a parallel course. Victor Murdock had a conservative background but became one of the most enthusiastic baiters of "Uncle Joe" Cannon and the reactionary crowd, along with Norris and the other insurgents.

Fragments of the old Populist uprising were gathered together after the turn of the century, and on the progressive side were other men, such as Ed Hoch, Walter Roscoe Stubbs, Richad J. Hopkins, Joseph L. Bristow, Frank Grattan, Gomer Davies, Clyde Reed and many other outstanding men, some of whom became nationally famous.

On the stand-pat side the "Long machine" ruled with astuteness and aplomb. It was headed by former Senator Chester I. Long, who had been an opponent of Jerry Simpson in Populist days, and who, until his death about two years ago, practiced law in Washington. With Long were such able leaders as Dave Mulvane, Orrie Morse, Mort Albaugh, Farmer Smith, Jim Simpson, Sam Fitzpatrick, F. Dumont Smith, Billie Morgan and Jim Stewart.

There were stalwarts on both sides, and beginning about the year 1904 there ensued a walleping, ding-dong fight which involved railroad legislation, the anti-pass law, the direct primary, popular election of United States Senators, the initiative and referendum and other issues. In 1908 Joseph L. Bristow opposed Long for the United States Senate, and defeated him. Gov. Stubbs, Gov. Capper, Gov. Allen and Gov. Reed were elected in various Progressive sweeps. In 1912 came the great Bull Moose row, and Allen ran for governor and Victor Murdock ran for United States Senator on the Bull Moose ticket. Both were defeated that time, but Allen came back as a Republican in 1918 and won by a large majority. He was in France during the entire campaign and returned just in time to be inaugurated. A picturesque scene occured in the initial stages of this campaign when Gomer Davies shook hands with Mort Albaugh and everybody thought the old breach between the standpat and progressive wings had been healed. But later, when Clyde Reed moved into the situation, the old row broke out with renewed virulence and again the fat was in the fire.

• • • •

BACK in 1912 Alfred M. Landon was a beginner in politics, but he and his father broke with Taft and supported Theodore Roosevelt in a campaign which was almost religious in its intense fervor. Kansas takes its politics seriously, and the factional fight was wild and full of thrills.

Considering all this background, it is plain silly to accuse Landon of being a standpatter or an emissary of Wall street. All his political upbringing was the other way. He worked as a laborer in the oil fields and by sheer ability got himself into the oil business, as an independent. At one time, he engaged in a brisk fight with Standard Oil, which is the only way in which his name was connected with that large corporation. No one has successfully demonstrated that it is worse to make money in the oil business than in any other business, and it is not likely that the effort to smear Landon with the taint of corporate influence will get anywhere. A genuine Progressive can make money in oil as well as a stand-patter, and that is about all the algebra there is to that equation.

When Landon became Governor he began to heal the breach between the two factions and was completely successful. It dawned on the Kansas people that much of the fight had consisted of personal misunderstandings and conflicting personal ambitions, and anyhow the whole State had moved on into a new arena of politics. The old days of special privilege, corporate domination and fixed conventions were gone forever, and under the new dispensation all the Republicans, with exceedingly scarce exceptions, saw eye to eye. There were new problems to be attacked—grave problems of national import. The matter of governmental economy was uppermost. Relief had to be handled. Good roads, education, crime problems, and other issues were constantly appearing.

PERHAPS out of Kansas will come a restatement of liberalism. The State has always been liberal in truth. It has always been on the side of the under-dog. Nobody but a genuine liberal could be elected Governor of such a State.

The great trouble nationally has been too much labeling. Certain politicians have claimed monopoly on the name "liberal" or "progressive" when, in fact, they may be as illiberal and reactionary as the standpatters. In recent years a "liberal" seems chiefly to be a person who is liberal with the money of the taxpayer. Now, in Kansas, there has arisen almost as intense and religious a fervor as existed in the Populist and Boss-Buster days, except that now this fervor represents a protest against Federal dictatorship, bureaucracy, wild extravagance and debauchery of the civil service.

Governor Landon consistently raised his voice against this reactionary bureaucracy, even in the days when the New Deal seemed to have everything its own way. Little by little his type of liberalism has made headway. The old battles between LaFollette and the railroads, or Norris and the water-power trust, or Pinchot and the lumber interests, or Brookhart and Wall Street, have become more or less sham battles, for more momentous issues have emerged upon which to base an estimate of the forward-looking statesman.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT had little use for the La Follettes and Brookharts in his day. By inference, at least, he called them "the lunatic fringe" of the progressive movement. The growth of Gov. Landon has been organically consistent with the trends set in motion by Theodore Roosevelt, and it is pretty certain that if Theodore Roosevelt were living today, he would be staging such a fight on his fifth cousin Franklin that it would be worth going miles to see. And he would not, by a long shot, have to line up with the reactionaries.

In 1916 Theodore Roosevelt believed that world problems far outshadowed the progressive-standpat factional fight, and for that reason he got back of the Hughes candidacy, in an effort to defeat Woodrow Wilson, whom he distrusted as a world statesman. It is an entirely logical theory that he would now be supporting a man of Landon's type, along with William Allen White, Henry J. Allen and other progressives, to ward off the greater danger of national bankruptcy, destruction of morale and domestic disintegration.

Outlaw Saws Steel Bars, Escapes in Oklahoma

Ardmore, Okla., March 19 (AP).—Asa (Ace) Pendleton, 39, notorious Southwestern outlaw, and Delbert Davis, 19, held for the fatal clubbing of an aged school teacher, broke from the county jail here today.

Davis was captured a few minutes after the break, but Carter County officers found no trace of the fleeing Pendleton.

Pendleton escaped by sawing his way through steel window bars.

Flood Causes

By Karl Schriftgiesser

All Answers Here.

WHAT—besides water—causes floods? This is a question a lot of people have been asking the past few days. Well, Washington is the place to find the answer. There are any number of experts in this city who know more about floods than Noah.

Scientists who have looked into the matter of big and little waters are of the pretty general opinion that, if they had their way, the river would stay away from your door. It seems to be mostly a matter of this thing called soil erosion and, if the scientists were running things, this would be the basis of a land management program that would make anything attempted in Russia look silly.

H. H. Bennett, chief of the soil conservation service, said yesterday: "Much of the flood is man-made, and man can remedy that." According to Mr. Bennett all that has to be done is to keep the water where it falls. It's water that doesn't stay put that causes all the disburance. If it were checked, so that it just seeped down the hillsides, then all would be well. But man, in his greed, had bared the hills and trees and in his hunger, burned out the soil with his gardens, so that the water just comes tumbling down in an awful hurry.

• • • •

SINCE the average annual flood loss is placed somewhere near $35,000,000 it would seem that the scientists ought to be allowed to have their way. And, in part, they are. The Government has recently launched a 30-year program for the purpose of flood control through land management.

As Mr. Bennett explained what the scientists hope to do is to see that steep slopes, gashed by erosion, are taken out of cultivation and either re-forested or re-sodded. This would hold the water longer, for one thing, and it would also stop the valuable top soil from being washed away.

But this alone will not stop the floods. There will have to be thousands of small dams built on small creeks and rivers to hold back the waters after the spring freshets, which man can do nothing about unless he finds a way to stop the snow! Dams in these out of the way places are almost more important than those on the big rivers, for they would keep the main streams from becoming too swollen and flooding the cities on their banks. This achievement, though, would not eliminate the continual need for vigilance on the Army engineers, under whose control is the handling of flood stages in the larger streams, through the building of levees, the deepening of channels and the like.

CO-ORDINATION of all these activities is necessary. Since experts have figured it out that soil erosion alone costs the Nation $400,000,000 a year, the cost of financing a large-scale river and soil control program would not be excessive. Mr. Bennett says it might even come to less than the annual loss at present.

The Government already is doing something about this matter in Missouri and in Oklahoma, and will soon start in New York State. Those like Dr. Paul Sears, Oklahoma soil erosion expert now in Washington, who have seen erosion at work, say we Easterners don't know anything. He believes we should think back of the present devastating floods to their causes, and not act uppity and talk about costs when some wild and woolly Westerner gets excited about the matter.

Dr. Sears said yesterday that engineering on Eastern rivers is not at fault. He blames the floods on erosion, and says that a great deal more soil is being washed away in the Eastern part of the country than most people know anything about. Here in the East there are not so many gullies, but the damage is just as bad. Dr. Sears, who wrote a book once on this subject called "Deserts on the March," believes that reforestation and the planting of grass to "tie down" the topsoil is the answer.

• • • •

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELTS National Resources Board has a water planning committee, which warns that flood losses have been greatly increased by the "unwise encroachment of settlement and industry upon many lowlands subject to inundation." This amazing discovery that cities down low are apt to get wet when the snow melts is bolstered, however, by some suggestions that seem to a layman like your correspondent to be pretty wise.

Aside from protective enginering which, the board says, not only helps eliminate floods but aid navigability of streams and help irrigation, but also supply power "and otherwise serve human needs," it suggests four definite control methods. These are storage reservoirs, retarding basins, channel improvements, and levees. Of these storage reservoirs are the most effective.

So it seems that if a nation wants to keep its streets dry and its farms from being washed away all it has to do is do it. The ways are there. It's all a matter of getting the means.

Mechanic Suffers 15,000 Volt Shock

H. W. McCammon, an electric sign repairman, yesterday suffered a 15,000-volt shock 20 feet above a downtown sidewalk and suffered nothing more serious than a slightly burned finger.

He was working on the advertising sign at Lansburgh's furniture store, 907 F street, when the current was automatically turned on by a time clock control. At the moment, McCammon had the end of a high tension wire in his hand.

The fact that his feet were locked in the ladder rungs saved McCammon from being hurled to the sidewalk by the force of the shock. After holding onto the live wire for about 90 seconds, unable to pull himself free, he succeeded in letting go and walked down the ladder.

McCammon lives at 943 Maryland avenue southwest.

Witness Calls Lobby Inquiry 'Pole Cat' Unit

Head of Taxpayers' League Angered by Query of Swellenbach.

"Polecat committee" was the epithet hurled yesterday at the Senate lobby investigation, of which Senator Hugo L. Black is chairman, by its only witness, J. A. Arnold, head of the American Taxpayers' League. Besides calling the committee names, Arnold contended that he alone had made the Nation "tax conscious."

Many important industrialists helped him finance his "league," Arnold testified. Andrew W. Mellon contributed $1,000, and "two or three" du Ponts gave $10 apiece, but Arnold said he "couldn't get a rise" out of J. P. Morgan. His revenues have dropped sharply in the last few years, he said. Once they were $200,000. Now they are only $45,000 annually, the witness explained.

Arnold contended he was not a lobbyist, and the mere use of the word seemed "distasteful" to him. He was engaged, he insisted, in "molding public opinion." Senator Swellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, asked him if he did not have a "sucker list."

Arnold paled at the question. He leaped to his feet, glared at Swellenbach, and shouted:

Question Resented.

"I resent that. This is a polecat committee."

"We are not going to have any more talk like that," Chairman Black shouted at Arnold. "If we do, we'll report it to the Senate and see what will be done."

"All right," Arnold replied, returning to his seat, "but I didn't start this."

Swellenbach reverted to the "sucker list," and asked Arnold if he had not used Poor's Manuel in soliciting funds.

Arnold agreed that he had several sources for names.

"We also had a list of contributors to the Democratic Party—that's the place to get a real sucker list," Arnold said, smiling.

Questioned by Senator Black, Arnold told of a meeting of a number of organizations, including the Crusaders, the Sentinels of the Republic and the American Manufacturers' Association.

New Tangles Arising.

It was held, he said, at the Racquet Club. There was a burst of laughter.

"Oh," Arnold said, irritated, "not the kind of a racket you have in mind."

Senator Gibson (Republican), of Vermont, referred to the report of the Caraway lobby committee of five years ago, which branded Arnold's activities as reprehensible. Gibson charged that Arnold was "back at his same old game."

Meanwhile, new legal tangles faced the committee as a result of its practice of subpenaeing telegrams. It was learned that suits of William Randolph Hearst to end such activities might be supplemented by suits brought by other newspapers, notably the Times Publishing Co., of Wichita Falls, Tex., which opposed a PWA municipal power plant. The newspaper's private and business telegrams have been ordered sent to the committee for investigation, it was learned.

Files of the two dailies and three farm papers of W. H. Cowles, of Spokane, Wash., also have been subpenaed.

Borah Outlines Policies in Bid For Support of Ohio Delegates

Calls for 'Stable Dollar, Complete Neutrality, at Youngstown.

By the Associated Press.

Youngstown, Ohio, March 19.—Opening his Ohio Presidential campaign here tonight in the center of the Nation's steel industry, United States Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, declared himself in favor of a "stable dollar" and "complete and effective neutrality." He was making a bid for Ohio delegates to the Republican National Convention.

Striking at the New Deal policy of curtailing production as a means of relieving agriculture, Senator Borah said he did not "believe in the philosophy of scarcity."

"So long as millions are hungry I would not curtail production. I would rather pay the farmer to produce than to destroy," he said.

Lists Policies.

Among the national policies enunciated by Senator Borah were the following:

"I favor a policy of complete and effective neutrality on the part of this Government as to all political controversiers and war in Europe.

"I believe in living up to and obeying the Constitution as it exists at any time. People may amend it, but as it is amended or as it exists, it should be strictly observed by both the people and officials.

"I favor complete independence of the Federal judiciary."

"I am opposed to monopoly in all its forms."

"The destruction of monopoly is the first step in the restoration of the purchasing power of the masses.

Would Bar Imports.

"I favor the co-operative system in agriculture thoroughly established to enable the American farmer to control distribution of his products until they reach the markets of the world. In this connection, I favor speedy enactment of a commodities exchange bill now before Congress.

"I believe the American market belongs to the American farmer to the full extent of his ability to supply. I am opposed to any policy opening our markets to any foreign competition so long as our farmers are able to supply."

"I would like to see bureaucratic government reduced to a minimum and the elimination of all unnecessary bureaus and commissions which are placing unbearable tax burdens on our people."

"We should make every effort in administering relief to eliminate all party politics. Money appropriated for the needy should go to the needy with as little cost as possible in administration."

"I favor removing Government from private business. Of course, under present circumstances there are fields into which Government must enter, but ultimately Government must retire from all private business."

"I favor an adequate old age pension."

"I am not in favor of inflation and neither do I favor deflation. I should like to see a stable dollar."

Knox Accuses President.

Springfield, Ill., March 19 (AP).—Col. Frank Knox, campaigning for the Republican nomination for President, said today that President Roosevelt was seeking $1,500,000,000 more for relief purposes "solely to insure his re-election."

Knox told an audience of Republican leaders of the Twenty-first Congressional District that the President "has plenty of funds on hand now if it's relief alone he's after, for there is more than $5,000,000 at his command now."

Hoffman for Landon.

Trenton, N. J., March 19 (AP).—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman said today he would support Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas when he files as a candidate for delegate-at-large to the Republican National Convention.

The Governor said he understood there was an agreement among the four candidates for delegates-at-large, who were urged by the Republican State committee yesterday to enter the primary campaign, to file for Landon.

Leaders of Girl Scouts To Plan for Training

Girl Scout leaders and field captains of Region 3, which combines Virginia, Pennsylvania, Maryland and the District of Columbia, will hold a conference at Girl Scout headquarters tomorrow. Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, scout commissioner for the District of Columbia, has invited the group to have luncheon at her home.

The group will discuss steps to give the necessary trained leadership to the scouts. It was pointed out that there are 2,000 Girl Scouts enrolled in Washington, while there are 10,000 more girls who are eligible for membership if leadership were available.

Doris Boal Elected Choral Society Head

By the Associated Press.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 19.—Miss Doris Boal, music teacher in the county schools, was elected president of the Martinsburg Choral Society for the coming year last night. Gerald Sloan was named vice president; Miss Dorothy Hoffman, secretary, and Morris Young, treasurer.

The club is preparing to present Haydn's "Creation" in May in cooperation with the Hagerstown and Boonsboro (Md.) choral societies. It will also present a vesper service in First United Brethren Church next month.

Increase Forecast In Virginia Crops

Richmond, Va., March 19 (AP).—A 15 per cent increase in tobacco acreage was forecast, Henry M. Taylor said here, in reports his Federal State crop reporting office has received from Virginia farmers. Soybeans and barley will be decreased in acreage, the survey showed.

Corn acreage will be increased about 2 per cent over last year's planting, while potato growers will plant approximately 3 per cent less than last year.

Peanut growers plan to plant about the same acreage they did last year, Taylor said, but oats for harvest will be sown to a 10 per cent larger area. Hay will be grown on the same acreage as last year—some 10 per cent above the five-year average to that crop.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Noted Handicapper Makes Good.

("The biggest daily double of the season at the greyhound oval, paying $1,043.80 for a $2 ticket, was won by Mrs. H. I. Phillips, wife of the columnist."—Miami Herald.)

• • • •

Still quite pale, but doing as well as could be expected, Mr. Phillips refused to permit Mrs. Phillips to give any interviews today, insisting that he deserved all the credit as the originator of the Hi Phillips Ultimately-If-Not-This-Year Handicap System, which did the trick. (Voice: Were you in on the winnings with the wife? Answer: Well, yes and no.)

• • • •

The Phillips' system has as its basic idea loyalty to an underdog. "Its success in the above instance," Mr. Phillips said modestly, "was due to the fact that these dogs were so far under nobody else had the perseverance to dig that deep." (Voice: Does the wife recognize you as the originator of the system and for how much? Answer: There is such a thing as gratitude, is there not? Or is there not?)

• • • •

The system worked like this: On the morning in question Mr. Phillips arose early, went into an immediate study of the greyhound entries and came out with the deduction that the daily double would be won by the 2-and-4 combination. At 12:10 he was switched by the mail man who delivered a letter and whispered, "It looks like three and four tonight."

• • • •

That afternoon he met a noted philosopher, who appeared to be deeply absorbed in Aristotle. "Well, what do you make of the European situation?" asked Mr. Phillips. "It looks to me as if the seven and eight dogs were a kick in the pants," replied the student of world affairs. Switched again!

• • • •

(Question: But, did the wife give you the customary 50 per cent? Answer: It begins to look as if the matter would go to the Supreme Court on the meaning of the word "customary.")

• • • •

But to get on. At dinner that night the waitress handed Mr. Phillips a racing chart instead of a menu and said, "the frogs' legs are very nice with the two-eight combination, but I like breast of chicken with the one-four." On the way to the track the Phillips' auto was crowded off the street by three motorcycle policemen doing 80 an hour. They apologized, explaining they were in a hurry to get to the oval and play the eight-eight combination.

• • • •

This complicated matters, but Mr. Phillips, never easily diverted from his convictions, insisted that the wife march right to the window and play seven and one. She thanked him with the usual smile and bought a ticket reading "one and five."

• • • •

"Didn't I tell you!" exclaimed Mr. Phillips as the one and five dogs won, paying the $1,043.80 daily double.

(Voice: Lissen, did you or did you not get any part of the money? Answer: Please drop that subject; I had to.)

The Moron Situation.

Some concern is being shown shown over the charge that a moron has been driving an automobile in New York City. It is hard to see why anybody should be surprised. You have to be a moron to enjoy driving in big cities.

Elmer Twitchell, in fact, says only those who are certified morons are allowed the motoring freedom of the city, although a man who gives promise of becoming one will always be given every consideration.

"I will not sacrifice the honor of Germany."—Mr. Hitler. It would be a good trick, even if he didn't do it.

His Error.

Hi:

We were motoring through Jacksonville on the way North. I was in the rear seat with Mrs. Blank, who was discussing the advisability of stopping to ship something back home to a friend. "I think it would be nice to send some fruit and nuts," she was saying.

Mr. Blank, a little hard of hearing, who was driving, caught only fragments of the conversation and bellowed a little peevishly, "What?"

"Nuts," replied Mrs. Blank ever so sweetly.

"Nuts to you, too!" thundered Mr. Blank savagely. F. H. G.

Sanctions' End Italians' Price To Halt Combat

Committee Members Say Rome Will Reveal Its Offer Today.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

London, March 19.—If the League of Nations lifts sanctions against Italy, Premier Benito Mussolini will cease hostilities against Ethopia, the League's Committee of Thirteen was reported to have been informed tonight.

The reported communication, transmitted to the committee—the Council minus Italy—was in supplementary response to its appeal to Italy and Ethiopia to negotiate peace.

Members of the Committee of Thirteen said Italy would officially announce her willingness to cease hostilties while peace with Ethiopia is negotiated, after the committee's meeting tomorrow. The offer, however, is made conditional upon the lifting of sanctions against Italy.

To Study Sanctions' End.

League officials said the Italian communication would lead to meetings of the Committee of Eighteen and the Committee of Fifty-two to consider cancellation of sanctions.

(The Committee of Eighteen is the League body appointed to devise and enforce sanctions against Italy. The Committee of Fifty-two comprises all members of the League. The Committee of Thirteen was appointed especially to appeal to Italy and Ethiopia for peace.)

At a private meeting of the League Council today it was decided to convoke the Committee of Thirteen for 3:30 p. m. tomorrow to hear answers to the appeal to Italy and Ethiopia to negotiate peace within the framework of the League.

Battle Reported.

Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, March 19 (AP).—A desperate battle was reported in progress today near Amba Alaji. Emperor Haile Selassie, it was said, was personally directing a series of Ethiopian counter-attacks against Italian columns whose objective was Lake Ashangi. The losses on both sides were said to be heavy.

French Cabinet Accepts Rhine Mediation Plan

Hague Court Would Rule on German Arming; 'Police' Provided.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 19.—The French cabinet approved tonight a four-power plan to compel Germany to accept a decision by The Hague Court on the Reich's right to remilitarize the Rhineland.

After a 3½-hour session, the cabinet issued a communique saying the agreement reached by the Locarno signatories, not including Germany, at London today, had been submitted by Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin and approved unanimously.

The plan also involved the placing of international police in the German Rhineland.

Accords between the general staffs of France, Belgium and Britain would immediately be drafted and be effective until the conclusion of negotiations over Adolf Hitler's peace offers.

Troops Are Symbol.

Small detachments of British and Italian troops would be installed in front of France's Maginot line as a symbol that Berlin is willing to demilitarize the frontier.

British and Italian guarantees would be given France and Belgium that the Locarno defensive agreement would be maintained until after The Hague Court decision. If the decision is favorable, France guarantees to become a permanent part of any accords growing out of Hitler's offers.

Officials said Hitler's "prestige" probably would not permit him to allow international troops in the Rhineland. Whether the League is willing to use force to make Germany accept the proposed plan, an official said, is "left for the future to decide" but France sticks to her original stand that she is willing to employ military measures if the others do.

Implications "Grave."

"Ramifications and implications of the agreement" drafted in London, said a government spokesman, are "so grave" that the negotiators decided they did not warrant committing their governments immediately.

One point to be ironed out in the accord, it was said, was whether British and Italian troops in the Rhineland would be under the authority of the League or of their own governments.

Britain was reported to have held out for league authority, but France, fearing the possibility of delays in case of conflict, advocated that they be directed from London and Rome.

A resolution was introduced in the Senate today asking the government to submit a bill making military preparations obligatory for all school children in France.

Josef Kaspar, Noted Teacher And Orchestra Director, Dies

Violinist Was Identified With City's Musical Life for Many Years.

JOSEF KASPAR.

Josef Kaspar, 78, of 1217 M street northwest, veteran teacher of the violin and for years conductor of the Georgetown Amateur Orchestra, died yesterday afternoon in his home after a brief illness.

Born in Prague, Bohemia, he studied music in the conservatory of his native city, taking violin lessons from Bemevitz, the teacher of Sevcik. Coming to the United States, he settled in Washington in 1880, and from that time on was actively identified with the city's musical life. His second annual pupils' recital was given in Ford's Opera House.

For several years he conducted a theater orchestra and was in charge of the music during the engagements of Salvini, the great tragedian, and Joseph Jefferson. In 1888 he founded the Wilhelmj Club, a string orchestra of 25 players. At the first concert of this organization on May 1, 1888, the soloist was his pupil, Leonora von Stosch, now known in the literary and artistic world as Lady Leonora Speyer.

For 14 years Mr. Kaspar conducted the Georgetown Amateur Orchestra of 70 men and women. In addition to his orchestral work, he also conducted the Choral Society of Washington for some ten years, producing Handel's "The Messiah," Haydn's "The Creation," Mendelssohn's "St. Paul," and other oratorios.

His summer home, beautifully situated atop the Blue Ridge above Bluemont, Va., he called Mont Salvat, and his vacations were spent in laying out the grounds in fanciful resemblance to a mountain symphony. To his friends and visitors he would point out its three movements: Maestoso—a formal park with stately trees; symphonia domestica — the modest homestead, where two springs united, and finale allegro—a rugged stretch of ground through which a winding path led to Valhalla and a Bruennhilde Rock overlooking the Shenandoah Valley.

A sincere and idealistic artist, kindly and generous in character, Mr. Kaspar was beloved by a wide circle. During his long career of more than half a century of teaching here he had sent out so many young violinists into the musical world that he may well be called the Leopold Auer of Washington.

Surviving Mr. Kapar are his wife, Mrs. Minnie Brouse Kaspar; a daughter, Mrs. Franceska Lawson, wife of Dr. Huron Lawson; a son, Henry Kaspar, prominent pianist, and brothers Anton, of Washington and Charles and Frank, of Baltimore.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed late yesterday.

Lamson Slaying Case Goes to Jury Today

San Jose, Calif., March 19 (AP).—A blood-spattered bathroom disputed th edefense accidental-death theory, Prosecutor A. P. Lindsay told the jury in closing arguments today at the third wife-murder trial of David A. Lamson, former Stanford University publicity director.

The body of Mrs. Allene Thorpe Lamson was found in the bathroom of her campus cottage May 30, 1933. The State charges Lamson killed her with an iron pipe and placed the body in the tub to support an accidental-death story.

The case will go to the jury tomorrow. Lamson was convicted at his first trial and sentenced to die, but the State Supreme Court granted him another hearing. The jury in the second trial disagreed.

6 Boats to Clear River Of Floating Oil Tanks

Hartford, Conn., March 19 (U.P.).—Six Coast Guard patrol boats and cutters were sent here tonight to clear the Connecticut River of three mammoth gasoline storage tanks, by bombing them if necessary.

The tanks, which were swept into the river by flood waters, have a total capacity of several million gallons of gasoline. They were said to be partly filled and a menace to life and property. The Coast Guard boats were dispatched from the New London base to Hartford, at the request of Adjt. Gen. William F. Ladd.

Doubt Irks Crucifix 'Victim' in Florida

Ocala, Fla., March 19 (AP).—George Timmerman, bitter because nobody believed his story of being nailed to a wooden cross, left a hospital here today after 30 hours of treatment and went home.

His parting shot at officers who branded his tale of horror as a "fake" perpetrated for notoriety, was "I've told them the truth and if they don't believe it, they can go hang." Timmerman said he was crucified by a band of men who waylaid him.

Officers did not seek to prevent his departure because Sheriff S. C. M. Thomas said "I don't know anything I could charge him with."

James M. White, neighbor and friend, found Timmerman nailed to a cross in a wooded section near his house yesterday as he was on his way to work.

U. of M. Seeks Right To Sell, Buy Land

Two bills, one authorizing the University of Maryland to sell lands, the other to condmn property for the development of the institution, will be introduced into the Legislature.

President Harry C. Byrd said the university would sell to the Federal Government 270 acres on which the Beltsville experimental farm is located. Negotiations for the sale are virtually complete, the Government having earlier acquired an option for the purchase price of approximating $100,000. Legislative approval of the sale is required.

Byrd said this fund would be used to acquire more land adjacent to the university campus. He did not disclose what property was under consideration.

Harry Kelly, Comedian, Dies of Heart Ailment

New York, March 19 (AP).—Harry Kelly, comedian, whose stage career of half a century included appearance in productions from "Peck's Bad Boy" to several editions of the Ziegfeld Follies and of "Artists and Models," died today. He was 63.

Kelly had been ill for nine days with a heart ailment. He was a son of Edward C. Dobson, once billed as champion banjo player of the world, but changed his name to Kelly after his mother remarried John T. Kelly, an actor.

is effected. He emphasized how reasonable the French and Belgium positions were in view of previous demands for withdrawal of the German troops.

Germany also would be asked to submit the Franco-Soviet mutual defensive pact to The Hague Court for a decision as to whether it violated the Locarno Treaty, as Hitler claimed. Von Ribbentrop had told the Council today Germany was unwilling to take this step.

The international conference would consider all security proposals, together with limitation of armaments, economic questions and raw materials, in an attempt once and for all to repair weaknesses of the Versailles Treaty and restore security to disordered Europe.

In League Covenant.

Any new peace treaty would be incorporated within the framework of the League Covenant. The British specifically pointed out that any new treaty affects the security of all powers of Europe and it was believed this amounted to a warning to Germany that Russia must be included.

When the first few details of the agreement of the four Locarno powers leaked out a spokesman for the German delegation here called them "wholly unacceptable," but at that time it was not known that an international conference to consider Hitler's proposals was envisaged.

The Council heard a spokesman for unrepentant Germany defend her remilitarization of the Rhineland and then unanimously adopted a resolution condemning her for violation of the Locarno and Versailles treaties.

Family portraits of the German ancestors of Great Britain's royal family looked down upon the tense scene in Queen Anne's drawing room of the Palace of St. James' as the diplomats official affixed the stamp of guilt upon a second major European power within six months. The Council indicted Italy for aggression against Ethiopia last fall.

The verdict came within three hours after Ribbentrop appeared before the Council table—the first German appearance since she quit the League in 1933. Diplomatically, Von Ribbentrop hammered home Der Fuehrer's reasons for marching his troops into the Rhineland zone.

These contentions were unanimously rejected—even by Italy, which itself has a major grudge against the League for condemning her for violation of the Covenant.

German's sole "nein" was the only opposition registered in the quiet drawing room as Stanley Bruce, of Australia, president of the Council, called the roll of nations. This vote did not count, nor did those of France or Belgium, which brought the charge against the Reich.

Argentina, Great Britain, Denmark, Italy, Poland, Portugal, Rumania, Spain, Turkey and Russia voted for the resolution. Chile abstained and Ecuador's representative was absent.

DISTILLED DIRECTLY FROM GRAIN...

the Time-Honored Method

Fleischmann assures you a smooth-mixing gin by controlling every step from grain to bottle...

IF you were to visit the great Fleischmann distillery at Peekskill, N. Y., you could actually watch every step in the making of Fleischmann's Gin—from the unloading of the grain—to the filling and the sealing of the bottles.

You could see the huge "cookers," the fermenting tanks, the giant columns 3 stories high where the distillation takes place.

All of this equipment, costing millions of dollars, has been installed by Fleischmann in order that 100% control can be maintained through every manufacturing process.

No spirits are bought. Since 1870, it has been Fleischmann's belief that without this unbroken control—a distillery cannot consistently produce a well-balanced gin—free from impurities. The Fleischmann Distilling Corporation, Peekskill, N. Y.

Romantic Comedy of Frozen North Revives Importance of "Wireless" to Drama

Stage Play Has Been Made Into Co-Stellar Film

Montgomery and Loy Star; Lampkin's Anniversary; Amusement Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Years ago, when Signor Marconi's uncanny invention was just beginning to prove its practicability as a safeguard of ships in distress at sea, there was produced a melodramatic bit of "theater" known as "Via Wireless." It was one of the sensational novelties of its season.

Now, a quarter-century or so later, "wireless," which has come to be known by the shorter name of "radio," again is made the basic dramatic element of a play that expresses itself in lights and shadows on a motion picture screen.

Even if it is not the star, the invisible lightning of wireless telegraphy at least is a featured factor in the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of "Petticoat Fever," soon to be seen in the Capital.

With all the action taking place in Labrador, and two-thirds of it in the narrow confines of a remote wireless station, radio provides the threads which weave drama about the ice-bound locale.

Operator Has Callers.

Robert Montgomery is the wireless operator who is first seen playing chess by radio with an operator aboard a ship at sea—the same ship that is returning his unwanted fiancee to the forbidding coast. Next, by means of wireless, two fliers—Myrna Loy and Reginald Owen—find their faltering way to this lonely tower.

On this basis, made possible by radio, the comedy-drama begins to unfold—Montgomery holding his fascinating guests prisoner, first by physical, then by emotional, force—until the arrival of his own fiancee upsets his plans and changes the whole course of the comedy-drama toward an abrupt and smashing climax. Without the stimulus of the miracles of radio, "Petticoat Fever" probably never would have been written.

Authored by Mark Reed, the play was a huge success on the Broadway stage and later served as one of the most engaging offerings of the National Theater Players with Roy Roberts in the role which will be taken in the picture by Robert Montgomery.

George Fitzmaurice directed the picture and with such able players as Montgomery, Miss Loy and Reginald Owen in the cast it should prove one of the most delightful bits of romantic foolery to reach a local screen this season.

The postman only had to ring once to make delivery of the photomailer, bearing in the upper, left-hand corner the name of "E. Lawton, 784 Park avenue, New York," as sender. And what do you think? The "E. Lawton," turned out to be Evelyn Laye Lawton, star of "Sweet Aloes," the Jay Mallory play that had its premiere at the National Theater in this city and now is playing at the Booth Theater in New York. What the photomailer contained was a stunning picture of Miss Laye and her husband, Frank Lawton, the young English actor who played the grown-up David Copperfield in the picture of that name and opposite Diana Wynyard in Galsworthy's "One More River." It had been promised when both were here for the opening of "Sweet Aloes." There also was a most cordial note of which modesty forbids the publication.

Yes, Mr. Farley, the photomailer was sealed and bore first-class postage, so the inclosure of that note was strictly according to Hoyle and your postal laws and regulations. And a thoughtful and friendly gesture it was, too.

Phil's Fourth Anniversary.

Four years ago this Saturday, Washington observed the advent of spring and the arrival of Phil Lampkin upon the podium at Loew's Fox Theater. Both were booked for about the same length of time—short engagements of only a few weeks. Spring played the date and moved on, but Prof. Lampkin stuck and has bounded about on the conductor's platform at the F street cathedral ever since.

During his four-year occupancy of the "guest" conductorship at the Fox, Prof. Lampkin has introduced many musical innovations over and above swishing his bamboo baton with the south, or fork, hand. There was a time when the professor's gymnastics were a bit annoying to some in the audience who felt that an orchestra could be efficiently directed without the aid of the physical "bounce" of an acrobat on a bounding net. That eccentricity now has been left largely in the past and Prof. Lampkin has assumed a dignity quite equal to his musicianship and finesse.

Until recently he was featured once a week over WRC in what many deemed the finest radio program originating in Washington. He is now presiding over a tri-weekly broadcast feature over WJSV.

Phil Lampkin is a native Californian and has been conductor of some of the country's foremost motion-picture theater orchestras. He is a close friend of both Abe Lyman and the pummeled Rudy Vallee.

For his "birthday" overture, Phil will present a special arrangement of melodies from the Strauss operetta of "The Chocolate Soldier."

Lends Grace to Impending Revue

Well known to Washington audiences by reason of her frequent appearances on local motion picture theater stages—frequently as a partner of that other fast-stepping youngster, Hal LeRoy—Mitzi Mayfair now returns to the Capital as one of the featured members of the cast of "At Home Abroad," the Howard Dietz-Arthur Schwartz "music hall revue," starring Beatrice Lillie and Ethel Waters. That is to say, Miss Mayfair will return to this city Monday night, when "At Home Abroad" opens in the National Theater for a single week's engagement.

Alexander Korda, production executive of London Films, has advised United Artists, distributor of his product in this country, that the recent fire in his company's new Denham studios in London, will cause a delay of about two weeks in the production schedule of his organization. One of the stages was partially destroyed, but will be usable again within a fortnight. Progress is being made rapidly on two other stages, neither of which was touched by the blaze. These will be completed early next month.

Dolores and Doug.

For leading woman in his second independent screen production, to be made in London, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., has chosen Dolores Del Rio, one of the most beautiful stars of the cinema, as those who remember her personal appearances at the Columbia some years ago will attest.

Miss Del Rio will appear opposite Fairbanks, fil, in a picture bearing the title of "To You My Life," an adaptation of a French story originally titled, "Accused, Arise."

The adaptation to the uses of the English-speaking screen has been made by Zoe Akins; Thorton Freeland will direct.

Fairbanks sailed for England aboard the Berengaria on Wednesday and Miss Del Rio will follow him to the London studios of Criterion Pictures next week on the Aquitania. This will be her first trip abroad in several years and accordingly she will supplement her appearance in "To You My Life" with a holiday on the Continent. Miss Del Rio will be accompanied by her husband, Cedric Gibbons, one of Hollywood's foremost art directors.

"To You My Life" is scheduled to go before the cameras early next month. The first Junior Fairbanks production, in which he also is star, is "The Amateur Gentleman," soon to be released in this country through United Artists.

As its initial excursion into the field of murder drama, the Cue and Curtain Club of George Washington University brings to Washington the London and Broadway stage success, which also scored heavily at the National Theater in this city, "Ten Minute Alibi," written by Anthony Armstrong. The play departs from the mystery of the traditional detective story to become the closely knit theatrical presentation of "the perfect crime."

The Cue and Curtain production will be presented tonight and tomorrow night in the auditorium of Roosevelt High School, Thirteenth and Upshur streets northwest, under the direction of Marvin Beers, one of the Capital's ablest resident actors who is developing into an ace director of the talents of others. Edward Stevlingson, veteran group performer, will be the featured member of the cast, as Colin Derwent, homicidal hero. The support will be led by Lawrence Beckerman, previously starred over the radio as the villain-victim, and Maxine Kahn, star of such successes as "Cock Robin" and "The Torch-Bearers," as Betty Finden, the feminine lead. Others in the cast include Milton Freedman, John Kendrick, Thomas Dobson and Joseph Klein.

Miss Pickford Goes West.

Mary Pickford left New York on Wednesday of this week for a leisurely trip back to the West Coast to see the second film of the Pickford-Laskey schedule go into production. This is "The Gay Desperado," boasting Nino Martini as its star and Rouben Mamoulian as its director.

It was Mr. Mamoulian, it will be recalled, who directed the stage production of George Gershwin's folk-opera, "Porgy and Bess," now on view at the National, with flashes of sheer genius and a thorough-going skill that set him a little apart from others of his craft.

Miss Pickford expects to make a number of stops on her way West and will not arrive in the film capital until early next week.

"The Gay Desperado" is an original story by Leo Birinski, and is being adapted to the screen by Jane Murfin. Although her identity is not disclosed, it is said that one of the screen's foremost actresses is slated for the leading feminine role opposite Martini. It is not made known at this time, either, whether or not the star will be permitted to sing in this subject. The supposition, of course, is that he will.

The first Pickford-Lasky production, "One Rainy Afternoon," has just been completed, with Francis Lederer and Ida Lupino in the principal roles.

In addition to the background and consequences of the recent Japanese militarist revolt, the twelfth release of "The March of Time," which will be added to the bill featuring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in "Follow the Fleet," at RKO-Keith's today, will include an extensive footage devoted to Devil's Island, the French penal colony in French Guiana, and an exposition of the growing traffic in escapes from servitude at 20,000 francs each—success guaranteed or your money back. This "racket," as it would be called in this country, has reached such proportions that Devil's Island may be abandoned as the Alcatraz of the French government.

"Fisheries" is another topic with which the new "March" will deal. It has to do with the hardy fisher-folk of Gloucester, who go down to the sea in tiny boats—and have for the last 300 years. There is romance and color in this subject—not to mention adventure and thrill.

"The March of Time" has carved out a distinctive niche for itself as a unique feature of any motion-picture program.

Mrs. Temple explained that Shirley has never seen a stage play.

• • • •

Shirley and Odets were soon exchanging autographs . . . Shirley has an autograph book, and in it Odets wrote: "I don't know anyone who has so many real friends all over the world" . . . Shirley wrote "With love" in Odet's notebook . . . It was not a forced conversation, and they both seemed at ease talking about movies and children . . . After the "impossible interview" was over Odets said that he got more pleasure meeting Shirley Temple than any actress, and that he had met practically all of them.

• • • •

William Powell started to collect a library of the dullest books he could gather, and now he finds that he's really interested in reading the books . . . A prominent actress is annoyed because people are nice to her . . . "Why does every one smile at me?" she asked. "I don't want to smile back to electricians."

• • • •

Katharine Hepburn, looking at the rushes of her flicker, "Mary of Scotland," in the projection room makes comments about herself on the screen, saying: "Watch Aunt Katie now" . . . Billie Hilerman, a waitress at the commissary at Fox, gets more attention from the actors than the actresses dining there . . . Tess Slesinger is now laboring on a scene for the flicker, "The Good Earth," in which she must give an ox character . . . The boy selling magazines in front of the Warner studio is a super salesman . . . When you say "No," he says "Thanks just the same" so sincerely you purchase a magazine.

• • • •

Gregory La Cava, who directed "She Married Her Boss," has been known to come on the set, hold some of the scenario and say: "This is what we are supposed to do today," and then tear up the pages . . . But he has memorized them . . . Ernst Lubitsch never sits down while directing, he tires himself out . . . Whenever Frank Capra gets ready to make a new picture, the property department prepares for a rain sequence . . . Capra manages to put a rain scene in every picture he directs . . . Frank Borzage, his latest flicker is "Desire," is known as the quietest director in Hollywood . . . Raoul Walsh, he did "Klondike Annie," seldom looks at a scenario on the set . . . Henry Hathaway, his latest is "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," always puts the cigar he is smoking into his pocket when ready to shoot the scene . . . The pocket often catches on fire.

• • • •

Clark Gable, the big lover, merely looks amused when a director tries to show him how to play a love scene . . . Ernst Pascal, the writer, owns an antique shop in Glendale . . . The Fox-Twentieth Century studio is so large that there are hitch hikers . . . Mae West has been furniture shopping, especially for chairs . . . She said to the clerk: "The chair doesn't have to be stylish. I want comfort" . . . An actor summoned to Jesse Lasky's office said: "I'll be glad to do it" to a request . . . After he left Lasky said: "Poor guy. He'll never amount to anything in pictures."

Auto Permit Revocations Ruled Legal

Driver Loses Out in Test Case on Technicality; Appeal Planned.

Court Asserts Plaintiff Should Have Gone to Commissioners.

Revocation and suspension of drivers' permits was upheld as legal yesterday by Justice Jesse C. Adkins, of District Supreme Court, in a test case.

His ruling, however, was based on a technicality and did not touch upon the merits or the constitutionality of the legislation involved.

H. Mason Welch, attorney for Calvin B. Hartman, of 1556 Sheridan street northwest, announced the decision would be appealed to the United States Supreme Court, if necessary.

"We're determined to test this decision," he said. "We will raise the same issues in an entirely different case if that is necessary to have the constitutionality issue decided."

Procedure Stressed.

On the outcome of the court battle will hinge the authority of the Board of Revocations and Restorations of operators' permits to rule fast and careless drivers from the streets. Hundreds of permits have been suspended in recent weeks.

Adkins dismissed Hartman's petition in a memorandum opinion.

"Under the statute," he ruled, "the plaintiff had the right to make application to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to review the order suspending his operator's permit.

"Such application would have operated as a stay of the order of suspension until the decision of the Commissioners.

"Therefore, it was the duty of the plaintiff to avail himself of this administrative remedy before bringing suit in court."

To Carry Case Higher.

Welch said he would press for a court test because the present law does not provide for an absolute stay of action pending adjudication of a case, does not assure a right of a hearing and does not fix a criterion on which penalties would be based.

"I'm not criticizing the present board," he said, "but the law doesn't prevent some future board from suspending your permit or mine because they don't like us.

"The present law empowers officials to arbitrarily crack down on motorists. It is clearly unconstitutional, because it does not provide due process of law and because it permits delegation of legislative authority."

While Welch was reluctant to discuss Adkins' ruling, he pointed out that in virtually all cases it has been the policy of the Commissioners to sustain suspension orders of the board as a matter of course.

Hagood Showdown Scheduled Today

By the Associated Press.

A final showdown in the case of Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, whose reference to WPA funds as "stage money" surred a storm in Congress, has been scheduled for today—involving either his restoration to active duty or his retirement.

The White House announced last night that President Roosevelt had granted the former commanding general of the Eighth Army Corps Area a hearing and will confer with Hagood aboard his South-bound special train en route to a Florida fishing cruise.

Political observers here attached special significance to this meeting because of repeated reports that Hagood might answer the discipline imposed on him by entering politics in South Carolina. A report that he might possibly oppose Senator Byrnes, stanch Administration man, brought from Byrnes a statement that he considered this highly unlikely. Byrnes was one of the general's most active defenders.

Board Revokes 2 Auto Permits; 23 Suspended

Convictions for Speeding Bring Cancellations of Driving Licenses.

Driving permits of two motorists were revoked, and 23 other drivers lost their licenses for temporary periods yesterday at a meeting of the Board of Revocations.

Those who lost their permits are Joseph Francavilla, of 518 Tenth street northwest, convicted of speeding at a 50-mile an hour pace, and Gerhard Reeves, of 3819 Military road northwest, convicted of driving 60 miles an hour.

Bilbo Is Defeated In Judgeship Fight

Senator Bilbo (Democrat), Mississippi, lost his first major battle in the Senate yesterday, when the nomination of Edwin R. Holmes, of Mississippi, to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals was overwhelmingly confirmed.

Bilbo is an old political foe of Holmes, now a Federal District Judge, and of Holmes' father-in-law, the late Senator John Sharp Williams, and of Senator Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, who sponsored the nomination.

In his first Senate speech, Bilbo charged that Holmes was "incompetent," "reckless," "stupid and vindictive," and, in addition, had sent him to jail for 10 days in 1922 for contempt of court, for failing to answer a subpena.

For five hours and more he poured out his charges, after which his motion to send the nomination back to committee was beaten by a 59-to-4 vote. A few seconds later, an oral vote confirmed the nomination.

Lecture Will Benefit Hard of Hearing League

"The Life and Works of Hans Christian Anderson," Danish fairy tale writer, will be the subject of a lecture in behalf of the Washington League for Hard of Hearing, at 8:15 p. m. today by Berryman Ridges, of New York City, world traveler and lecturer.

In addition, Ridges is expected to touch on the works of Baron Ernest von Maydell, famous artist, whose work was influenced by Anderson's stories.

Large Audience Cheers 'District Mayor' When She Rebukes Blanton by Innuendo; Head of D. C. Committee Says House Will Recede.

Restoration by the Senate of the slash in the Washington lump-sum appropriation was urged last night by Chairman Norton, House District Committee, before the Board of Trade.

The large audience cheered Mrs. Norton when she rebuked Representative Blanton, of Texas, by innuendo for using his influence as House District Appropriations subcommittee chairman to accomplish the cut.

Mrs. Norton also described the local health and hospital situation as "disgraceful," ridiculed the Guyer bill to make Washington dry, praised the bill to legalize racing here, and indorsed other civic improvements.

The so-called "Mayor of Washington" told the businessmen they have a "great responsibility" to demand Senate restoration of the $5,700,000 Federal contribution to the District, cut to $2,700,000 in the House.

She predicted the House would recede from its original position and agree to the figure approved by the President and the Budget Bureau should the Senate restore the lump-sum reduction.

"Soft Spot" Draws Laugh.

Laughter ran through the audience as Mrs. Norton, without mentioning Blanton by name, related how she had sought unsuccessfully to discover his "soft spot" and obtain his co-operation in behalf of Washington.

"I've been told he has a soft spot," she said," and if you'll find out what it is for me I'll work on it."

Mrs. Norton emphasized the seriousness of the health problem here.

"It is all very distressing," she said. "I don't know of any city in the country with poorer hospitals than those of Washington. The staff members of these hospitals, however, should be congratulated for what they have done under the circumstances.

"I sincerely hope the day will come when we will be able to point with pride to the hospitals of Washington.

"Your tuberculosis hospital was a disgrace to the Capital City. The new hospital is not going to be nearly so large as it should be to fill the need.

"After a recent visit through your hospitals I came away heartsick.

"When we are well we can get along somehow, but it is tough to find oneself without money when sick. There is nothing you could do that would be of greater value than to arouse the people by bringing to their attention knowledge of the deplorable health conditions existing in Washington.

"I am amazed that Dr. George Ruhland has remained here as health officer under such discouraging conditons. He is a fine man to put up with it all."

Washington residents, Mrs. Norton said, should realize the existing "strange system of government" here ought to be remedied. She pointed to the lack of power possessed by the District Commissioners and by the District committee of Congress.

"The solution," she added, "would be for the people of Washington to demand a representative in the House and a representative in the Senate to see that the city is provided for by Congress.

"Seems Ridiculous."

"Just think of it! A city of 500,000 people and you can't vote for President or have a voice in your own affairs. It all seems ridiculous."

She promised to seek national representation for the District by appearing before the resolutions committee at the coming Democratic national convention.

Mrs. Norton pledged her support for additional school funds, a subway system, a large auditorium and other advantages.

The Board of Trade's award for architectural merit in design was presented to the firm of W. C. and A. N. Miller for planning the home of Dr. Howard F. Kane at 4941 Glenbrook road northwest.

Dr. Kane's home was chosen as the most meritorious from an architectural standpoint constructed in Washington and vicinity between January 1, 1933, and January 1, 1936.

The Miller firm was given the award at the suggeston of the board's municipal arts committee in its effort to encourage better construction and architecture here.

D. C. Bill Hearings May Begin Monday

Hearings on the District appropriations bill before the Senate sub-committee will not begin before Monday, if then, Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said yesterday.

Because the agricultural subcommittee on appropriations has occupied the only hearing room available, the District hearings have had to be delayed.

Unless other obstacles arise, however, the hearings will begin Monday, when the hearing room will be available. The District Commissioners will be the first witnesses.

'Filed' Becomes 'Failed' In Typographical Error

In The Post of Sunday, March 15, it was stated that H. Clay Plummer, of Gaithersburg, Md., who has "failed" as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Representative from the Sixth Maryland District, was named as defendant in a damage suit.

The story, as originally prepared, declared that Plummer, "who has filed" as candidate, was being sued. Through a typographical error "filed" became "failed." The Post regrets the error.

W. W. Manville Awarded Rensselaer Fellowship

William W. Manville, 1022 N street northwest, was awarded a fellowship at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute by the board of trustees, it was learned yesterday. The fellowship covers tuition in the graduate school and $800 a year.

Manville, who attended McKinley High School, will graduate from Polytechnic this June as a mechanical engineer and will continue his work in the university graduate school.

G.O.P. Unit to Pick District Delegates

Three delegates from the Republican State Committee to represent the District at the Republican National Convention in Cleveland will be elected May 7 in the club building at Sixteenth street and Dupont Circle northwest.

The chairman of the State committee, Leo A. Rover, former United States attorney, said that regulations were adopted for the primary elections in districts and sub-districts in the city at a meeting Tuesday. Delegates will be selected from these district.

Rover was authorized to appoint a committee on credentials for the forthcoming convention and a committee to draw up a platform for the convention.

Pharmacist Finds Wife Hanged in Bathroom

Clarence W. Tabler, 55, of 1121 New Hampshire avenue northwest, pharmacist for the People's Drug Stores, returned home from work last night to find his wife, Viola, hanging from the bathroom door by a strap around her neck.

Tabler hurriedly cut her down and summoned the Emergency ambulance. An interne pronounced her dead. According to police the woman had been in ill health for three years.

McAdoo in Hospital; Condition Not Serious

Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, of California, was a patient in Garfield Hospital last night.

His physicians refused to state the nature of his ailment, but it is understood the former Secretary of the Treasury went to the institution for general examination and treatment. His condition, it is understood, is not serious.

Mrs. Connelly Ordered Held After Inquest

Wife Accused of Slaying Park Policeman After Drinking Party.

Daughter 18, Tells Coroner's Jury of Mother's Suicide Threat.

Mrs. Alice Josephine Connelly, 38, was ordered held for the grand jury yesterday by a coroner's jury, after an inquest into the fatal shooting of her husband, Park Policeman John F. Connelly.

According to the police, Mrs. Connelly shot her 41-year-old husband in the chest with his own .38-caliber police revolver, early Wednesday morning, following a drinking party to celebrate St. Patrick's Day. The shooting occurred in the Connelly home, 2220 Eighteenth street northwest.

Sobbing convulsively, Mrs. Connelly slumped in her chair beside a police matron at the District Morgue yesterday, while her 18-year-old daughter, Frances, told the jury how her mother had threatened to cut her own throat with a butcher knife, and later shot her father while he lay in bed.

Policeman George McConnell, of the Third Precinct, was the first witness to testify. He said that when he arrived at the Connelly apartment the living room was in disorder and Connelly was sitting in a chair, with blood flowing from a wound in his chest. His wife was kneeling at his feet, hugging his knees, McConnell testified.

Hysterical State.

Mrs. Connelly, in an hysterical state, cried out when she saw the policeman:

"I shot him. I suppose I'll have to go to the electric chair."

McConnell stated that when he saw Connelly the pistol was dangling from his hand, as he sat bent over in a chair. The policeman said he detected no odor of alcohol about the wife.

Detective Sergt. Clyde N. Strange, of the homicide squad, read to the jury a statement signed by Mrs. Connelly, taken shortly after the shooting.

Mrs. Connelly said, Strange testified, that her husband had taken a day off from work and had been drinking during the day. She said they went to a restaurant, where they had a few drinks.

They returned home about 12:30 a. m., Sergt. Strange stated, and Connelly slept for a little while, and then jumped up, cursed his wife and pursued her around the apartment.

The woman said she asked her daughter where her husband's gun was, so that it would be ready when he left for work in the morning. Strange quoted the woman as saying she pulled the trigger when she thought her husband was going to pursue her again.

The Connelly's daughter, Frances, testified that her mother and father returned home about 12:40. She told the jury her mother was very drunk, and could not talk coherently. Her father, she said, had been drinking and threw himself on the bed.

Frances told the jury her mother came into the bathroom with a butcher knife. "She placed it against her neck and said she was going to do away with herself. I didn't pay much attention to her, except to take the knife away," Frances related.

The girl said she left the house to accompany Miss Ruth Knight, a friend who had returned with her parents, to the street car. When she was coming up the steps, Frances declared, she heard a shot. She ran into the room and saw that her father was wounded. Her mother had the gun pointed toward herself, and she ran from the house, Frances stated.

In response to questioning by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, Frances said her mother had been beaten by Connelly several times. She stated her father had shot at Mrs. Connelly about two years ago.

"Another time he broke my mother's ribs when they were fighting," Frances testified.

Mrs. Connelly was denied bond, and taken to District Jail, where she will remain until trial.

Mrs. Maddock to Face Slaying Charge April 6

Trial of Lillian Maddock on a charge of manslaughter in the slaying of Edward V. Killeen, reputed Washington gambler, was set for April 6 by Circuit Court Judge Charles W. Woodward yesterday.

Killeen was shot to death in his suburban home last November. Mrs. Maddock, at liberty under $5,000 bond, contends she fired in self-defense.

Dorothy Ramspeck, 16, to Play Lead Role in High School Film

James R. Pendergrast, 18, Cast Opposite Representative's Daughter in 'It Happened in Washington,' to Be Made Here.

Sixteen-year-old Dorothy Ramspeck, daughter of Georgia's Representative, and 18-year-old James R. Pendergrast, both students of Western High School, have been selected for the leading roles in the all-local film, "It Happened in Washington," which The Post and Loew's Fox Theater are producing.

The two students won their roles from some 2,000 applicants who sought places in this Washington high school motion picture.

Five-foot three, Miss Ramspeck, who has been plays "all of her life," will play the feminine lead, and, according to Director Leonard DeMenna, she possesses personality, talent and a natural acting ability. Her father, Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia's Fifth District, is chairman of the House Civil Service Committee. The Ramspecks live at Woodley Park Towers.

James R. Pendergrast, of 4404 Greenwich Parkway, who will play the leading male role, is a native of San Antonio, Tex., and has been cast in many Western High School productions.

Supporting Roles.

Billy Byrd West, 16, of Trinity Preparatory School, has been selected for a supporting role, as have Edgard Love, 17-year-old McKinley High School student, and Mary Wildor Richards, 16, of Woodrow Wilson Junior High School. Miss Richards, of 2837 Chesapeake street northwest, will fill the soubrette role, while Edgar Love, living at 105 Rhode Island avenue, will be the villain.

With these five principal roles cast, and other supporting and "bit" players to be announced today, filming will commence definitely Saturday morning. Principals will rehearse at 5 o'clock this afternoon in the Franklin room of the Ambassador Hotel. Other players, of which there will be 200, will rehearse their parts in the same room at 9 this evening. The casting director announces that about 20 boys and girls, between 5 and 8 years old, are needed for one of the sequences.

Filmed on Campus.

First "shots" are to be filmed Saturday morning, on the campus of George Washington University, Twenty-first and G streets northwest. Thereafter the camermen and technicians will move elsewhere to film other scenes, so that the film may be completed by Monday afternoon.

The story of "It Happened in Washington" is a humorous drama of high school life, highlights of which nclude a fraternity initiation and a "prom." In addition to offering a dramatic opportunity to students who appear before the camera, the picture may open Hollywood's gates to those who may posess screen potentialities.

For further details, and names of those cast for other roles, read The Washington Post.

Dean Ruediger Is Appointed George Washington Provost

Author of 'Principles of Education' Has Taught 700 Washington School Teachers; New Executive Committee Also Appointed.

Dr. William Carl Ruediger, professor of education at George Washington University, and since 1912 dean of its school of education, has been appointed provost of the university, it was announced yesterday by President Cloyd H. Marvin, following action by the board of trustees.

Widely known as an educator, Dr. Ruediger has been a member of the university faculty since 1907. He is the author of numerous works in the field of education, among the best known being his "Principles of Education" and "Teaching Proceedures."

Dr. Ruediger graduated from the University of Wisconsin, receiving the degree of master of philosophy in 1903, and holds the degree of doctor of philosophy from Columbia University. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Delta Kappa, a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, a member of the National Education Association, and other educational bodies. At various times he has been a visiting professor at Cornell University, the University of Southern California, the University of Virginia, the University of West Virginia and Dartmouth.

During Provost Ruediger's service as dean of the school of education, some 1,200 persons have been graduated from the school, and have taken his classes. Numbered among his former students are more than 700 District of Columbia public school teachers. In 1931-32, at the time of the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the school of education, alumni of the school presented the university a portrait of Provost Ruediger, painted by Felix Schwarz, Washington artist.

In announcing Dr. Ruediger's appointment as provost, President Marvin also made known the appointment of an executive committee for the school of education, composed of Prof. William Cullen French, Associate Prof. Mitchell Dreese, and Assistant Prof. John B. Whitelaw, chairman.

In addition to assuming the office of provost, Dr. Ruediger will continue his teaching.

Berry Unit Urges Trade Usage Bans

By the Associated Press.

Open prices throughout industry, and legislation to ban 11 "unfair" trade practices, were recommended yesterday by George L. Berry's industrial council.

The trade practices which the council recommended banning were:

Employment of workers at less than prevailing wages, or for longer than prevailing hours, sales below cost for the purpose of misleading the public or injuring a competitor, loss "leader" transactions, circulation of false or misleading information, secret or open rebates, defamation of a competitor, payment of unearned allowances and giving special services, inducing breach of contract, misbranding, price discriminations which bear no reasonable relation to savings in selling, manufacturing or transportation costs, and promoting sales by selling, buying or exchanging other commodities below market price.

Safeguards Are Ordered On Death Lift

Buildings Head Advises Owner to Use Grill at Hatchway.

City Elevator Regulation Change Is Likely to Follow Fatality.

Despite reports of inspectors that the automatic elevator at 7611 Georgia avenue, in which 13-year-old Harvey Crowell was crushed to death ten days ago, complied with District regulations, Col. John W. Oehmann, building inspector, has ordered additional safeguards installed.

This was revealed in a report submitted yesterday to Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, which threw open to question not only adequacy of existing regulations, but their interpretation by the elevator inspectors who approved installed and subsequent operation of the elevator.

The reports were made by J. M. Brown, chief elevator inspector; P. H. Signor, elevator inspector; E. E. Owens, assistant elevator inspector, and J. A. Black, elevator inspector. They were handed to Col. Sultan with written indorsements by Col. Oehmann and Capt. Hugh P. Oram, director of inspection.

"If the first paragraph (regulations describing automatic and semi-automatic elevators) is correctly construed as applying to all types of passenger elevators except full (the word full was underlined) automatic, this installation complied wtih the regulations as to hoistway clearances, and the accident shows the need for a revision of the regulations," Capt. Oram commented.

4-Inch Space Allowed.

The regulations permit a 4-inch space between the hoistway side of the landing door and the hoistway edge of the landing threshold, but is not specific in naming the types of elevators to which this applies.

In their reports, the inspectors insist the 7611 Georgia elevator was semi-automatic because the doors must be opened by hand. Neither Capt. Oram nor Col. Oehmann, specifically approved the reports of the inspectors, nor did they discuss the applicable regulations in any details. Col. Oehmann, however, recommended modifications of existing regulations and said:

"As the only possible cause of this regrettable accident is primarily due to the space between the hatchway door and the door of the car itself, it is felt that this is too great a space to be allowed, and pending a modification of the regulations with a view to prohibiting any space greater than that now allowed between the hoistway sides of the landing door opposite the car opening and the hoistway edge of the landing threshold (i. e., 4 inches) an order has been served on the owner of this building to provide a basket grill on the inside of the hatchway door which will prevent closing same while any one is standing in the door opening."

Amaryllis Show Guests Leave at Flood Warning

Mrs. Wallace Receives First Lady, Mrs. James Roosevelt, Others, at Greenhouse Preview; Notice of High Water Comes at Close of Reception.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Mrs. Henry C. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, and her guests left the Amaryllis Show at noon yesterday when word came that water was expected to flood the greenhouses of the Department of Agriculture within an hour. Mrs. Wallace received Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. James Roosevelt and many other distinguished guests at a preview of the Amaryllis Show between the hours of 10 and 12. The warning of high water came just at the close of the reception.

Those who braved the rain to attend the private flower showing were greeted by long rows of blossoms in red, rose, flame color, cream or white striped and edged with red. One of the new varieties of amaryllis was the Sprekelia Formosissimo, which was labeled, at Mrs. Wallace's request, for the benefit of those who desired to know its name. Smaller than the others, and different in shape, it had long, narrow petals, drooping from the center of the flower.

Mrs. Roosevelt and the President's mother were delighted at the beauty of the display, and spent some time viewing it, stopping occasionally to chat for a few moments with other visitors as they walked through the long aisles.

Herr Hans Luther, the Ambassador of Germany, looked about with some concern and remarked smilingly to Mrs. Wallace: "I am the only man here; I am a bit frightened."

Among the others who came later were the Minister of Sweden, accompanied by his wife, Mme. Bostrom, and the Minitser of Uruguay, Mr. Jose Richling.

One of the most interested visitors was little Miss Mary Felicia Feis there with her mother, Mrs. Herbert Feis, wife of the economic advisor to the State Department. Little Mary Felicia wore a rose-colored hat and coat that matched some of the flowers, and her interest was centered on the plants on the very lowest shelves and the pebbles on the ground below. She was greeted by two young friends, just a few years older, the Misses Nancy and Janet Trowbridge, daughters of Mr. Sherman Trowbridge, who were also among the visitors.

Among the Guests.

Among the prominent guests were Mme. Troyanovsky, wife of the Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics; Mme. Saito, wife of the Ambassador of Japan; Mrs. Pierce Butler, wife of Mr. Justice Butler; Mrs. Owen Roberts, wife of Mr. Justice Roberts; Mme. Peter, wife of the Minister of Switzerland; Senora de Alfaro, wife of the Minister of Ecuador; Mme. Rajamaitro, wife of the Minister of Siam; Miss Mabel Boardman, of the Red Cross, and her sister, Mrs. Frederick Keep; Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, wife of the Representative from Maine; Mrs. Henry C. Luckey, wife of the Representative from Nebraska; Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, wife of the recently-appointed Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and Mrs. James Le Cron, daughter of Gardner Coles, a newspaper man from Des Moines, Iowa.

Mrs. Lee Phillips had with her Mrs. M. Earl Cummings, of San Francisco, who is in Washington for the marriage of her son, Mr. F Ramsdell Cummings, and Miss Jane Gwynn Maitland, which will take place March 28 at the Sulgrave Club.

Mrs. Carol Miller, sister of Senator Joseph Guffey, was greeted by Mrs. Roosevelt, and explained to her across to flowers that she had abandoned her trip to Pittsburgh because of the flood.

The Amaryllis Show is now open to the public and will remain on view for a week.

By the Poe Sisters.

Former United States Minister to Paraguay Post Wheeler and Mrs. Wheeler, now in Hollywood, Calif., will arrive in Washington early in April to be the guests of Mrs. Ollie James, widow of Senator James, of Kentucky, in her apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street.

"The Post Wheelers," as they are affectionately called by their many friends, are in Hollywood in connection with the projected screening of several of Mrs. Wheeler's popular novels. Mrs. Wheeler, known in the literary world by her maiden name, Hallie Ermine Rives, is a member of the distinguished Rives family of Virginia.

The Post Wheelers have lived in every corner of the world during Mr. Wheeler's long diplomatic career. He has served in our embassies in Russia, Japan, London and Rome, and has been United States Minister to Albania as well as to Paraguay.

One of Mrs. Wheeler's most fascinating books, "The Kingdom of Slender Swords," was written while her husband was stationed in Japan.

When Post Wheeler was sent to Russia, Mrs. Wheeler gathered material for a novel dealing with that country. At present she is writing another book with a Russian motif. Among Mrs. Wheeler's best known novels are "Satan Sanderson" and "The Valiants of Virginia."

Mrs. James and her guests will have much to talk over. They arrive at a time when the world is seething with wars and rumors of war. When the World War broke out, Mrs. James had left Rome with the Wheelers en route to Japan. For a time news of her was unobtainable. All Washington, led by the anxious Senator James, joined in the cry of "Where is Mrs. Ollie James?"

She reached Munich safely after many difficulties. The American Ambassador put her on the local German train bound for the Russian border, but it was switched aside and Mrs. James spent 24 hours in war-excited Berlin. Finally she reached Copenhagen, Denmark, neutral territory. Meanwhile Senator James and the entire Department of State searched for his wife because of a rumor that the German train on which she had left Munich had been blown up. After a month in Denmark, Mrs. James went to England and from there sailed aboard the Olympic for the United State.

Mrs. James Gordon, of Madison, Ky., is visiting Mrs. James at present and will remain for most of the spring. After their Washington visit the Post Wheelers will go to England to occupy their home on the Thames.

Last night Mrs. William E. Borah, wife of the Senator from Idaho and potential Republican candidate, tuned in her radio on Youngstown, Ohio, to hear her husband speak and to learn if he had arrived safely after a roundabout journey to the Ohio town via New York on account of flood conditions.

Mrs. Borah laughingly declared she was resigned to the vicissitudes of life as a statesman's wife. Public life has been familiar to her from childhood, for her father, the late William John McConnell, was first Senator and then Governor of Idaho. As a matter of fact, Mrs. Borah first met her husband when he was making a speech in behalf of her father.

At the adjournment of Congress Mrs. Borah will accompany the Senator to Idaho.

White Ball Set For Tomorrow

Tomorrow evening the white ball at Sulgrave Club, given for the benefit of St. Nicholas Russsian Orthodox Church, will be one of the most brilliant given in the Capital this season.

Mr. Boris Timchenko, chairman, and Princess Ourusoff, with their committees, have worked out plans which include several entertainment features. Mona de Montoliu, famous Russian ballerina, of New York, will appear in several dance numbers. One is the "Dance of Spring."

Additional patronesses for the ball include Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Mrs. Horace Lee Washington, Miss Mary Sheridan and Mrs. J. J. Mack.

Mr. Richard Sanger, chairman of Mr. Timchenko's floor committee, will be assisted by Prince Leonide Ourusoff, Mr. George Beliakovitch, Mr. Jack Stafford, Prince Dimitri Wolkonsky, his brother, Prince Peter Wolkonsky; Mr. Vladimir Grinioff and the two sons of Capt. and Mme. Mishtowt, George and Basil.

The white ball will open with a polonaise at 11 o'clock. Twelve girls will participate.

Latvia Minister Holds Luncheon At the Legation

Walter Duranty, on Lecture Tour in U. S., Is Among Honored Guests.

The Minister of Latvia, Mr. Alfred Bilmanis, entertained yesterday at luncheon at the legation on Massachusetts avenue. The minister, who paints portraits and landscapes when time allows, is a collector of objets d'art. Among his possessions are several miniatures by the French painter, David. He also owns an armchair in which, it is reported, Napoleon sat and watched Moscow burn during his invasion of that country. Mr. Bilmanis purchased it from a Russian aristocrat shortly after the war.

Among the guests was Mr. Walter Duranty, well-known newspaper correspondent and author of the best seller, "I Write as I Please." He knew Mr. Bilmanis when the latter was attached to the Latvian Legation in Moscow.

Mr. Duranty is in this country on a lecture tour until April, when he plants to return to Russia. His new book, which, incidentally, will be his first novel, will be published sometime in May.

Mr. Duranty left Washington yesterday for Baltimore, but plans to return to the Capital toward the end of the month.

Alumnae Hosts At Conference

Members of the Washington Chapter of the Trinity College Alumnae Association will entertain the delegates and other members of the association who will meet here in a two-day conference today and tomorrow.

Delegates to the meeting will be greeted by the officers of the District of Columbia Chapter: Miss Helen B. Carroll, president; Miss Marion Schwartz, vice president; Mrs. Edward Carl, secretary, and Miss Alma Whitty, treasurer. Also acting as hostesses to the visiting alumnae will be Miss Margaret Normand, Miss Margaret Wallace, Miss Bernadette Sheehan, Mrs. Lawrence Grogan and Mrs. Francis X. Callahan.

Miss Gertrude Bogan will head the registration and credential committee. She will be assisted by Mrs. James M. Maloney, Mrs. Frank Burke, Miss Mary Guerin, Mrs. Raymond Ruppert and Miss Catherine Lee.

All arrangements for the national convention of Trinity Alumnae have been made by a committee headed by Mrs. James Early, chairman.

Color Tablets Quickly Solve Spring Dyeing

They Offer an Easy and Sure Way to Meet the Dictates of Dame Fashion.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

SINCE DAME FASHION has decreed color for spring, then color it's going to be. Manufacturers of dyes say their sales have shown a steady increase during the last month. It looks as though many a sombre costume is going to blossom forth in bright shades.

Those of you who are interested in dyeing some last year's frock in the easiest, surest, quickest way, do try those little color tablets that do such an expert job. You simply melt two of them in a glass of boiling water, and then add as much of this solution as you deem necessary to attain the desired color to a basin of warm water. Now you submerge the garment. If a darker shade is wanted, you add more collar. By using combinations of different tint tablets you may obtain just about any color you can conjure.

The same concern which makes these tablets also makes a product that is excellent for removing color and for lightening shades.

For a Bridge Prize.

CONSPICUOUSLY placed on the counter by the main aisle in an F street store are bunches and bunches of midget bananas. At least, you might think they were bananas without further investigation. However, one bite would be proof enough that these bananas are soap—the most attractive soap you ever saw (or tasted).

This bunch of half-dozen bananas are sprawled on some green, green paper grass inside a vivid yellow box.

Perfect for a bridge prize!

'Reincarnated' Girl Mecca of Pilgrims

DELHI, India (AP).—The claims of an 8-year-old girl, Shanta Devi, that she has been reincarnated, has brought more than 100,000 pilgrims to her father's house.

The child is said by friends to have given "startling evidence" in support of her belief that she was, in a past life, the wife of a cloth merchant of Muttra, United Provinces.

Ever since she began to talk she has given her parents a description of her "past life" and she recently insisted on going to Muttra to see her "husband" and her "son."

Taken to Muttra she fell at the feet of her "husband" and embraced her "son," but failed to recognize her "husband's" new wife.

MARY HAWORTH Says:

It Is an Article of Every Woman's Faith in Man That He Will Never Do Anything to Bring Scandal on Her Head; She Seldom Forgives Him When He Does.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: On January 1, 1935, I met a girl on a southbound train and it was love at first sight. We were madly in love with each other and we were about a thousand miles apart. We corresponded daily for ten months and the letters were very affectionate. She met another man and forgot me and I quit my job and came to Washington and told him to leave her alone. For some reason or other my behavior has been scandalous as it is my first time in love and she does not care for me as I lost my head and talked about confidential matters to other people.

Mary Haworth

• • • •

She is 33 and has a very good position but helps her family. I am 27 and have no dependents. I know her folks and respect them. I am madly in love with her and her early Christian training is what makes her so desirable to me. I worship the ground she walks on and even though I have many other girl friends, I do not care for them. In love I am a fool. In other matters, very deliberate. What do you suggest? I am very anxious to make up. I must. Please publish at once. I am leaving for a vacation to forget. GEORGE.

Here Is Man Whose Suit Seems Hopeless.

DEAR GEORGE: Pull yourself together. In one breath you ask advice on how to regain your lost love, saying it must be done. In the next breath you say you are leaving immediately on a vacation to forget. Obviously, such contradictory statements don't make sense. If you plan to cling stubbornly to some program designed to reinstate yourself in her esteem, that's one thing. If you believe the only thing to do under the circumstances is to try to forget her, that's something entirely different. Both courses of action can't be incorporated in the same program.

• • • •

However, my honest opinion is that you will HAVE to forget the girl; and that it is always better to recognize and deal with a truth than to evade it. I believe you have little or no chance of reinstating yourself in her good graces. For one thing, it was rather to be expected that one or the other of you would eventually outgrow an infatuation rooted in such shallow soil as a brief holiday encounter, and nurtured only on an exchange of correspondence. For another thing, you have committed against her the grievous social sin of discussing her one-time interest in you with others. And it is entirely probable you have earned her lasting distrust by conduct which betrays lack of balance and self-control. I refer to your throwing up your job and rushing to Washington to bulldoze her latest admirer and buttonhole her family and friends into listening to your tale of woe.

• • • •

Such stormy tactics may read very well in summer fiction but they don't show up to good advantage against the sterner background of every-day living. It is an article of every woman's faith in man that he will never do anything to make her talked about. And the man who sins against this article of faith may well expect to find himself in the outer darkness of her lasting disfavor.

• • • •

In order to help you regain control of yourself, I shall tell you what I believe to be the truth about this grand passion of yours. I believe you aren't actually in love with this girl. I believe you are in love with your own idealized conception of woman, and have confused this girl with that carefully built-up image which exists nowhere outside your fancy. I believe your brief encounter with this girl and the long unbroken separation afterward provided excellent opportunity for building up a magnificent delusion about her—probably in no way related to the reality of her character and personality—and about your feeling for her.

Happiness Follows in Wake of Self-Control.

ONCE AGAIN I see the necessity for quoting the late Dr. W. Beran Wolfe's definition of love—the sanest I have ever read—"love is the result of years of co-operation; of mutual enjoyment and mutual suffering . . . It is usually believed that love belongs in a special category of human emotions and feelings, but, as a matter of fact, it is no more than a special form of the social feeling, the communal consciousness on which all human relations are based. Love is friendship, plus the element of heterosexual co-operation. Love equals friendship plus sex . . ."

• • • •

Swept off your feet by a sex urge which has this girl as its object, I believe you fail to see what the woman sees: namely, that the one-sided emotion is unsubstantiated by the necessary first premise of mutual understanding friendship and respect. I am sure if you respected this girl as an individual in her own right, clearly entitled to make her own decisions in matters of love and friendship; and if you understood the mechanics of friendship, you would never have made the mistake of high-handedly interfering with her other social relationships. If you felt friendship for her, then her happiness wherever found, would be in some saving measure your happiness. As it is, however, you wish to possess her whether or no; with or without her full and free consent; regardless of the fact she has attempted to break off with you.

• • • •

Denied what you want, you are indulging, figuratively speaking, in a childish fit of kicking and screaming. Stop it. The only road out of your present heartache is the road toward intelligent self-control and self-direction. For no man can reasonably expect to master the circumstances of his life and exert a gentle persuasion over the lives and actions of others, until he has first learned how to control himself. M. H.

TWO ON SAFARI

—By GEORGE AGNEW CHAMBERLAIN—

Ballard Mallory, American explorer in search of young Hon. Laurence Morland, lost in the African jungle, is accompanied by an enigmatic English girl, Josephine Cascoden. As the journey begins, she receives a cable that distresses her and in the shop of Ibn-ben-Dur, the name "Morland" causes her momentarily to lose her calm. Mallory hears that Morland has "gone native." He demands that Josephine tell him what Morland means to her. She does not answer. The journey begins again, deep into Africa.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Blood and Anger.

THEY WORKED hard that day and by evening Josephine looked like a stable boy who had been kicked and rolled in the dust. Under the small felt hat she wore when shooting, her hair was plastered to a grimy forehead. Her cheeks were smudged and her few garments wringing wet with plain sweat. She gulped her tea, feeling that even were it boiling it could not harm the burning cavity of her throat and body.

Ordering an extra tin of water, she stayed in the bath a long time, but at dinner she was still so tired she could scarcely eat.

"Wait a minute," said Ballard, "I've got what will fix you."

He went to one of the large canvas bags hung where the breeze by condensation would chill the water within them. Plunging in his hand he drew out a bottle of champagne and opened it on the way back to the table.

"Oh!" breathed Josephine after the first sip. "What made you think of this tonight?"

"I didn't. It's always there; you can have it whenever you like."

Under the stimulation of the wine she managed to eat a little but rose from the table as soon as her first cigarette was finished. "I think I'll turn in."

"Oh, no, please!" he cried, springing to his feet. "Look around a bit, Jo. Walk with me."

A Serious Talk.

He snatched off his tweed jacket, threw it over her shoulders and held it in place by an arm around her waist. Thus they walked to her tent. He raised the crossed bobbinet curtains, but when she had entered he followed her in. Sensing his presence she switched on the battery lamp and turned to look at him.

"We've got to have a talk and it has to be tonight," he explained.

"So it seems," she said, meeting his gaze with level eyes.

"Jo," he said earnestly, "please don't be like this. I've got to get near you—near enough to have you hear what I'm going to say."

"How can I help hearing?"

"That's not it—not what I mean—and you know it. You needn't be afraid. Give me your hand; let me touch you."

Seizing it, he turned it over and gripped her fingers, not as a suppliant, but like a tossed boat coming to anchor.

"You're a good sport, Joe; this is what I needed. I've got something to tell you and I've been putting it off."

"The longer you put off saying a thing the harder it gets," she said in her natural low voice.

"I know that, but the chance never seemed to come. I had to make it, and now it's here, I don't know how to begin."

"What's it about? Make a start—any old start," she encouraged him.

"Laurence Morland."

"Oh!"

Tropical Influence.

Once he had taken the plunge, words came easily. "Africa does queer things to a man; it either makes or breaks him. I don't mean it's a breeding place for towering successes, but that when the grade isn't up, it's bound to go down—a lot further down than anywhere else. Sometimes it's the solitude that does it. That's why a lone missionary is absolutely taboo and why the British never let a resident commissioner stay out more than 18 months at a stretch. But sometimes it's something else—something a lot worse."

"What?"

"A sort of farewell to all the shackles of behavior—a headlong plunge out of decency. Here's my question, Joe. If you found Morland and done just that, wouldn't it change your feeling toward him?"

"No," she answered so promptly that his eyes shot to her face in doubting interrogation.

"It wouldn't make any difference?" he insisted.

"It couldn't. It would hurt me terribly, of course, but I would feel toward him as I do now. Begin at the top," she suggested lightly.

Anger stained his cheeks a dark red. "Black women or black drink, then both together. Illusion of omnipotence. The screaming voice, the good-by to control, the sjambok in an ignorant hand. Spurting blood and the dead servant. Astonishment, dismay, terror. The eye too bleary to bring down game, but sharp enough to shoot down the first mutineer. Followers, blood drunk, howling for food. The sense of bridges burnt, of in-for-a-penny, in-for-pound—a sense as contagious as smallpox. The first inglorious raid. Then the last descent, the frenzy to kill the defenseless—the jaded appetite for butchery that can get a thrill only out of the slaughter of a child."

Josephine's fingers twitched violently and her face turned deathly white; then, astonishingly, she laughed.

"You can laugh!" he gasped.

"Because I don't believe you," she answered.

"But it's an old story—a formula!" he insisted. "It's been written in blood across the face of Africa a dozen times!"

"I don't believe it," she repeated, almost inaudibly.

"Then I'd be a fool," he murmured, "to try to say the rest."

"How can you tell? It might help you, even if it can't change me."

Refuses to Leave.

The words urged him on as gently as the faint pressure of her fingers had led him to retain his hold. "It's this," he continued. "Suppose Morland were dead?"

"But you assured me he isn't," she said quickly, half raising her head.

"I know, but suppose he were. Can you imagine ever loving me as you love him?"

Her head sank back. "No," she answered deliberately. "It would be impossible."

"Never?"

"Never."

He released her fingers definitely and sat with his shoulders slouched and his hands hanging between his knees, his eyes on the floor.

"Then that ends it."

"Ends what?"

"Everything between you and me, for there has been something between us; I don't know what, but there's been something. It's ended. Tomorrow I'm going to send you to the coast."

"I won't go."

"Don't be silly. If I tell Ali to put you on board a steamer for Delagoa Bay you can be sure you'll go, even if he has to have you sewed into Matogada's machilla. You'll go, all right."

She came half erect with a movement so smooth it seemed slow, yet was not.

"I assure you I won't go," she reiterated in a whisper.

He dismissed the words with a gesture of his dangling hand. "Feeling the way you do about Morland," he murmured half absently; "there's no choice, either for you or for me; I must get you out of the way. You'll start tomorrow."

Had he been watching her eyes, he might have been forewarned of what was coming. They had finished with measuring him and were burning with the fire of a settled resolve. On the up-ended box that served for a dressing table lay her scissors. She extended a steady hand, took them up and held them like a dagger. The movement drew his languid attention, but before he could dream what she was about she had driven the points deep into her left wrist. The final action was so quick there seemed to be no interval between its inception and the spurting of her blood.

Tomorrow—Death Sentence.

Children Should Be Taught Early To Use Streets

Mothers Urged to Impress Them to Be Careful to Avoid Dangers.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"MY CHILD refuses to stay at my side when we are walking, but runs ahead and crosses streets, often at the risk of his life. He is only 4, and keeps me in a fever of anxiety whenever we are out together."

A child of 4 is at the age when he is eager to assert his independence. He feels humiliated at being on leading strings, and will display his ability to care for himself where it makes the greatest show. The only answer to such a situation is to teach him how to take care of himself as adults do.

From the time a child can toddle, his mother must begin to prepare for the moment when he insists on leaving her side and facing the world alone. In walking with him, she must be careful herself never to break traffic rules, and must explain to the child what the rules are and why they must be obeyed. He must learn to distinguish between red and green lights and to know their meaning; to watch for the policeman's signal; to look both ways and down any side street before crossing the road; never to pass a garage or firehouse entrance without precautions, and under no circumstances to cross a street if an approaching car is in sight.

After a year or so of this training, the mother can give the child more freedom. He can be permitted to run ahead of her if he never steps off the curb, and he can cross the less crowded thoroughfares without taking her hand as long as he stays beside her.

If he sees her obeying rules, he probably will obey them also, for he wants to do the same things grown-ups do.

A Sailor That Gives Dash

Sailor Chapeau 'Old Stand-by' During Spring

Numbers This Season Are Breton Style; Many Are Devoid of Decoration.

IN CONTRAST to the horde of be-flowered, be-ribboned and be-veiled hats that have challenged our millinery fancies this spring is ye olde stand-by—the conservative sailor.

It's the hat that makes a well-dressed woman seem better dressed than ever. It's the hat to complement a suit or dress. According to many—it's the hat of hats.

Numbers of this season's smart sailors are Breton style with turned up brim such as the one shown in the accompanying picture. Many of them are devoid of any trim save for a small grosgrain or cire ribbon band. Others boast a striking quill trim that's every inch in fashion.

Among the popular materials used for the spring sailors are Panama straws, twill bakou, ballibuntal, stitched straws and shiny laizies. Some of the hats combine felt crowns with straw brims.

So far the most popular color is navy blue, although as the season advances bright reds, greens, chartreuses, purples and yellows are fast appearing.

Cooking Expert Gives 3 Ways To Cook Lamb

Traditional English Dinner to Mark End of Lent in Many Homes.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

WITH EASTER less than a month away, the mind of the homemaker turns from Lenten fare to the more liberal diet of the great festival. Of course, the traditional dish for Easter dinner is roast lamb with mint sauce. Not only is this true of English-speaking countries, but in practically every country where the meaning of Easter is known, the use of lamb for the principal meal of the feastday is a universal practice

There is considerable variety in the method of preparing the Easter dish. Likewise, there is a wide possible choice of the sauce to go with the dish, although mint sauce has a large following. However, some homemakers prefer to serve one or other of the following sauces with their roast lamb: Currant mint sauce, cold orange sauce, horse radish sauce, or currant jelly sauce. Usually the lamb is in the form of a leg of lamb, although a saddle of lamb or what is known as a crown of lamb can be used if desired.

The Boston Cooking School Cook Book gives attractive recipes for the roast saddle of lamb and the roast crown of lamb which may be of assistance to those planning to serve either for Easter dinner.

Roast Saddle of Lamb.

Select a loin weighing about 6 pounds. Wipe with damp cloth, sprinkle with salt and pepper and rub well with flour. Then place it on rack in open pan, skin side down and cut side up. Roast in a hot oven (450 to 480 degrees Fahrenheit), for 30 minutes, reduce heat to 300 degrees Fahrenheit and cook 2 to 2½ hours longer. Do not put water in pan. Basting is usually unnecessary. If fat covering is very thick, lay several strips of bacon on top and reduce heat after the first 30 minutes. Serve with currant jelly sauce or currant mint sauce.

Roast Crown of Lamb.

Order crown of lamb prepared at market. Place cubes of bread and cubes of fat salt pork on alternate bones. If desired, remove center from crown, put through food chopper, season with salt, pepper and poultry seasoning; moisten with hot water and put back into center of crown. Cover with oiled paper. Put in hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit). After 30 minutes, reduce heat to moderate (350 degrees Fahrenheit) and roast 45 minutes longer.

In serving a crown of lamb, remove paper, bread and pork from the bones and put a chop frill, if desired, on each bone. The center may be filled with either mashed potatoes, chestnut puree, green peas, Brussels sprouts or water cress.

Later on in Easter week, when there is a supply of the cold lamb still on hand, win the applause of the family by serving them from a delicious casserole of rice and lamb made after the following recipe:

Casserole of Rice and Lamb.

Two cups finely chopped, cooked lamb, two cups steamed rice, salt, pepper, cayenne, celery salt, onion juice, juice of lemon, one-fourth cup cracker crumbs, one egg slightly beaten and hot water or stock to moisten.

Line the slightly greased mold with rice. Then season the meat to taste, add other ingredients and fill center of mold. Cover with rice. Then cover the rice with buttered paper and steam for 45 minutes. Serve with tomato sauce.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

What Is a Deficiency Disease?

MOST of us are inclined to look upon ill health as the result of some injury or infection—the piling up of toxins which overwhelm the system with bacterial poisons. This is true for the most part. On the other hand we recognize that the body works in perfect balance. On one side of the scales is the thing called life and on the other are the materials which maintain it—calcium, phosphorus, oxygen, nitrogen, carbon, etc. Of course, we understand that the body is not nourished by any one single element acting alone. Carbon, hydrogen and oxygen are combined to form a great group of foodstuffs called carbohydrates, while proteins contain the needed nitrogen.

If any one of the vital elements is missing the power to carry on will drop and the body will find itself unable to function. This has led to the conception that some diseases are due to the lack of certain substances, most of which are probably derived from food. These are called deficiency diseases and are just as real and as health-destroying as pneumonia, heart disease or diphtheria. As a rule, they develop slowly and are much longer in exhibiting their effects than are acute infections of bacterial origin.

Dietetic Failure.

One of the early and most striking examples of a food deficiency was that observed by Eijkmann, a Dutch investigator, who was medical officer to a prison in Java. Both among the natives and the civil population beriberi, a form of neuritis followed by paralysis, was common. On one occasion he noted that the fowls raised on the prison farm showed many of the paralytic symptoms which he had observed in his patients.

The fact that these birds were fed largely on refuse rice suggested the possibility that there might be a dietetic failure at the bottom of the human disease, inasmuch as the feeding of unpolished, whole-grain rice was promptly followed by recovery of ailing members of the prison flock.

It was not until some years later, however, that it was generally conceded by medical science that polyneuritis in fowls was the same as beriberi in man and that the cause was the same. It was found that some component that was essential to health had been removed from the rice in the process of husking and milling.

We now recognize among the many deficiency diseases rickets, scurvy, certain disorders of the eyes, pellagra, arthritis, possibly dental decay and various skin conditions. All of these and perhaps more may be laid at the door of insufficient or poorly absorbed food elements (vitamins). Some authorities go so far as to indicate that pernicious anemia or other disorders of the blood may be ascribed to improper digestion of protein or poor functioning of the liver due in turn to the lack of some activating compound.

Resistance Lowered.

We do not need to be told that life cannot be sustained without food. This applies to all living things. However, few of us need give much concern to what we eat. Instinct, appetite and hunger guide most of us wisely. We may desire greatly some particular article, and 99 times out of 100 it is because we need it.

Intelligence and the advance of medical science go hand in hand. The more we know about deficiency diseases the better are we able to prevent illness. While scurvy in severe form is rarely seen anywhere in the world today, yet there are no doubt tens of thousands of cases of mild types of this disease. Even so slight a symptom as a sore tongue or a sore mouth that may exist for only a day may point the way to a minor food deficiency.

Why should we be alert to deficiency diseases? Because each in its own way lowers body resistance. With a slightly weakened constitution, infections may gain a foothold and inaugurate a severe illness; a situation that could not have occurred had not some food failure preceded it.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

HE'S VERY MODEST about being one of the best lawyers in town, but he's all puffed up over what a grand tinkerer he is at home. And his lady fair doesn't mind at all. In fact, she's discovered that a little not-so-subtle flattery as to his prowess with hammer and saw will keep him going at shelves, cupboards and other useful pursuits as long as she needs him

Right now he's contributing his share to the rejuvenation of their living room. The walls and woodwork are being painted putty color and the broadloom carpet will be ashes of roses. The sofa she's having re-covered in jade and two easy chairs will be sand color. A wing chair is having a chintz cover in a mellowed but colorful floral on a deep ivory ground . . . this will also be used for the draperies; she's having Venetian blinds in putty color with jade tapes. On one wall there are two windows with a wall space between. She's having him put in book shelves to the ceiling between the windows and at either side of the windows all the way to the adjoining walls.

The shelves also will go under the windows, too, and make a window seat beneath the sills. The shelves proper will be painted putty color to match the walls and the insides of the shelves will be painted jade. Besides books, they will use bright bits of pottery, brass and silver on the shelves.

Send a stamp for Miss Boykin's bulletin "Planning Your Bookshelves."

Beans With Corn.

That old reliable dish, baked beans, can be made new by adding a can of corn 30 to 40 minutes before removing the beans from the oven, suggests Leila Hyams, movie actress.

On the Floors of the Supper Clubs

Heigh-Ho Club To Star Illiana For Two Weeks

'Bolento' to Be Presented by Rita, Renato in Return Engagement.

By Chanticleer.

Illiana is one of those young artists who wows the patrons of a sophisticated after-dark rendezvous such as Pete Macias'. Miss Illiana comes to Washington with a record of smart night and supper club engagements, Continental successes and superlative notices. And it's astonishingly easy for the public to expect more than any one girl can provide.

Since leaving the Cavaux Caucasian, which is tops in Paris, Miss Illiana has played successfully in such leading amusement centers as New York's Savoy Grill, Central Park Casino, and the best of Los Angeles' ritzy spots, for the biggest names in Hollywood. From the Benjamin Franklin, in Philadelphia, comes a standing offer to return for an unlimited engagement, as soon as her calendar permits.

One of the chief reasons the calendar will not permit any return engagements anywhere for some time to come is a booking in the immediate future at Radio City's Rainbow Room.

Illiana packs a thrill in her singing. That's what the critics have said from one end of the country to the other. She's here for a two-week stay only at the Heigh-Ho. It's your opportunity to be thrilled, too.

Rita and Renato are back at the Club Habana for an encore engagement. Their pride and joy is a creation of their own, called "Bolento." The Habana's ace vocalist, Bert Granoff, escorted a young lady to the Habana the other evening and while he was singing, another y. l. phoned. Ralph, the head waiter, explained Bert was singing—and the girl on the other end asked to listen. But, alas, when the song was ended, it was Bert's guest who got to the phone first. No coherent account has been given yet of what took place when the two girls talked the song over . . . Ursula Martin, bubble dancer, and Jean Savage, toe and tap specialist, remain this week at the Dude Ranch—with Ralph Garron's music for the guests' dancing pleasure.

Margarito Cueto, gifted prima donna now appearing at the Madrillon, has been awaiting summons to the Metropolitan Opera House for an audition. Tuesday a telegram came—and Juanita, the Madrillon's dancing star, found her almost in tears. The telegram read: Call Metropolitan 4736. Margarita was nearly insane trying to figure what date the Metropolitan possibly could have had in mind.

Talent for the La Paree's Sunday night Skyride party will include Al Costello, sports writer, and Jane Whitney, songstress, with Buddy Rogers and orchestra. Only two more amateur contests remain at the La Paree. The next one is Monday night. Apply 'tonce for an audition . . . Gordon St. Chad is back at the Ambassador Hi-Hat after a siege of illness. Incidentally, the Paradise Islanders report that "Alone" still is the most popular ditty with the public today.

Matt Windsor, host at the Club Volga Boatman, really was born in Russia. And he hasn't been in this country as long as most people would believe. While in New York he was an organist at Loew's State Theater and conducted a symphony for a time. He really knows his music . . . Some of the patrons at the Lotus have felt the hair raise a bit as "Felix the Cat" cavorts over the floor. Felix and his two assistants are so life-like that even though it unquestionably cannot be a cat, the "thing" looks and acts real! The Dancing Debbies are for them as likes gals in a show.

Helen Hamilton opened her new Russian Troika cocktail room yesterday. Just a feeling that everything else was wet by this time, anyway! One old gentleman remarked that the only casualties at the opening were the drowning of many, many sorrows. The new lounge is in the Troika's foyer, on the street floor. Drop in, won't yez? . . . They're thinking of holding Lucille Wray over for another week at the Maryland Club Gardens. Yessir, she's that appealing to the customers. Another hoofer joined the floor show this week: Walter Doe, who does his taps in white tie and tails. Jimmy Harris and orchestra for your dancing.

And don't forget the big circus comes to the Shoreham ballroom next week with Will Hill, animal trainer, and his two baby elephants; who will do everything from a "black bottom" to an old-fashioned shimmy dance. And they do say that the bears in this circus join the regular road company of Barnum & Bailey & Ringling, later in the season.

Summer Velvets Again in Favor

Old-Fashioned Fabrics Also Returning.

Summer velvet, the new fabric that met with so much success last season is again taking a dramatic place in the fabric picture. With spun glass, organdie, mousseline de soie, and old-fashioned fabrics such as dotted swiss, point desprit, muslins and embroidered linens, this is to be again a crisp, fresh, feminine summer.

Silk mousselines, which are barred or striped, or dotted with velvet, are attracting much attention. Flower motifs, conventional designs in the refined pastel color range of the Empire and Victorian periods, stand out in rich and luxurious contrast to the plain background upon which they are posed.

Made over taffeta or chiffon petticoats, summer velvets are the last word in fresh crisp elegance. Black and white, the classic colors, are beautifully represented in their range. The all-white designs are particularly lovely for brides and the pastels in flower colors make charming bridesmaids gowns.

Long Scarf Features Opera Singer's Dress

Gladys Swarthout Designed Shirt, Monogram in Collar.

New York (AP).—Gladys Swarthout, opera singer who sets clothes and coiffure styles, has a new concert gown of pale gray-blue metalasse, threaded with gold.

The unusual thing about it is a long bright green silk scarf that encircles the waist, loops up to the neck and then trails down the back.

Miss Swarthout chose a black man-tailored shirt with a cut-out monogram on its collar to go with her new dark blue spring suit.

She had the suit made by her husband's tailor, and ordered a matching divided skirt which she plans to wear in town sometimes.

Dizzy, Cards Smoke Pipe Of Peace

Hurler Signs Pledge of Loyalty and Makes up With Davis.

Is Expected to Agree to Salary Terms Today at Conference.

By the Associated Press.

BRADENTON, Fla., March 19.—The St. Louis Cardinal management greeted Jerome H. Dean, ace pitcher, like a long-lost son today and "Ole Diz" was visibly touched—to the extent of signing a pledge of loyalty and obedience.

Such mundane matters as salary terms—Dizzy wants $40,000 a year and the Cardinals have offered $18,500—obviously were out of place at the fellowship gathering at a hotel here and Vice President Branch Rickey delicately suggested that a discussion of terms be put off until tomorrow.

As Rickey explained, there was more than a question of pay involved—the club wanted to be sure Dizzy would be a good Cardinal and pitch when he was told to any catcher selecte dby Manager Frankie Frisch.

Davis Not Angry.

While "Ole Diz," who hasn't minced words in telling the world just what he would demand before he throws a single ball for the Cards this season, was in the middle of protesting his love for the team, the bosses and all the players, the subject of Catcher Virgil Davis was brought up.

Davis, reported to have been angry because of remarks attributed to Dean, was No. 1 on the list of those quoted as saying they wanted to punch Dizzy on the nose.

Gallantly Dean arose to the occasion. He suggested that Davis be called into the conference. In came the bulky catcher, smiling. Dizzy met him with a grin. They shook hands and announced everything was hunky-dory.

Then the voluble Dean said he wanted "to put it in writing." To Rickey he dictated:

Out to Win Pennant.

"Give me a ball and a glove and put Davis behind the plate and I'll show you I'll pitch to him. We're out to win the pennant."

At the Cardinal camp here it was explained all the furore about the catcher wanting to poke Dizzy was "a lot of talk anyway. Davis is not that type."

Rickey raised the point of team loyalty in a letter to Dean on January 23. He told the star hurler there could be no discussion of salary until it was settled.

When terms are talked tomorrow, observers here are willing to wager Dizzy will sign a contract for about $20,000.

The pitcher was said to have set $40,000 at his price when, during a conference, Rickey jokingly told him:

"Babe Ruth used to hold out for about $80,000. You ought to try for at least half of that."

Off to Play Golf.

With Dizzy in the fold, it was believed here the Cardinals' holdout problems would be solved. Observers thought brother Paul Dean, the second ranking Card pitcher, would come to terms quickly.

Although "Ole Diz" has been reported itching to pitch, he suppressed his desire still longer today and went off to play golf after the peace pow-wow was ended.

Negotiations were said to have started last Saturday when Rickey came here and sent Dean a note telling him to call any time he felt like it. Rickey's telephone rang last night, and today's conference resulted.

There was a general suspicion here that Mrs. Dean had a lot to do in bringing her husband and Rickey together.

Golf Tournament Won by Mrs. Lake

By the Associated Press.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 19—Mrs. Marion Turpie Lake, New York, former Southern champion, defeated Miss Frances Hadfield, Milwaukee and St. Petersburg, several times Wisconsin State champion, 1 up, in the final match of the first annual St. Petersburg women's invitation tournament here today.

The match was decided on the home green. Mrs. Lake chipped close to the hole, dropped her putt for a par 3, and Miss Hadfield missed her putt after chipping short.

Mrs. Lake had an 81, and Miss Hadfield an 83.

To reach the final Mrs. Lake yesterday upset Miss Marion Miley, Lexington, Ky., the medalist, 2 and 1. Miss Hadfield scored an equally surprising victory over Miss Jean Bauer, Providence, R. I., 2 and 1.

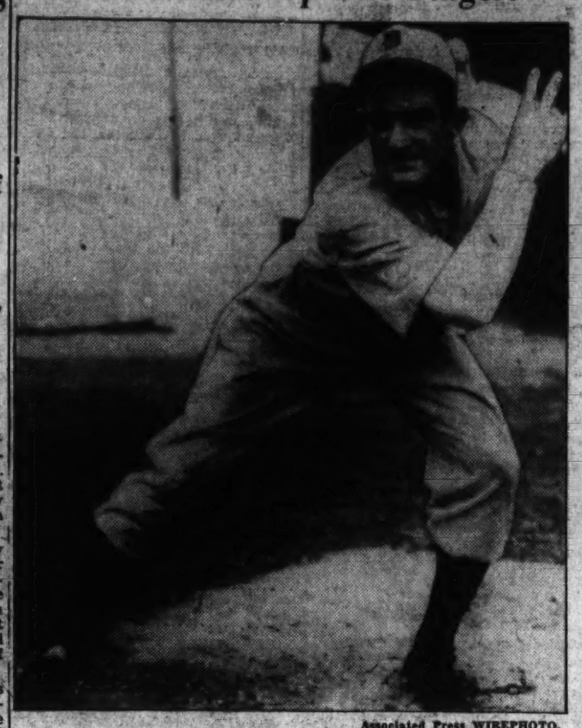
Auker Holds Up Two Fingers



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

But, it's not a signal. Elden Auker, pitching star of the Detroit Tigers, has just tossed one over the plate in his own inimitable submarine fashion and the two-finger gesture is part of his habitual follow through.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Orlando, Fla., March 19.

THERE was Bill Cissell out there playing shortstop for the Baltimore Orioles this afternoon, and it was not difficult to recall him as the most expensive piece of baseball bric-a-brac who ever came into the big leagues.

POVICH.

The late Charles A. Comiskey paid $126,000 for Cissell when he was a star in the Coast League seven years ago and the guy never did justify that kind of a price. The White Sox kept him in the line-up for a couple of years in an effort to make their investment look good, but it didn't require much persuasion for the Sox to trade him to Detroit in one of those multi-player deals in which Cissell figured like the thirteenth bun in a baker's dozen.

At Detroit, Manager Bucky Harris never did reckon Cissell as a regular and eagerly traded him to the Red Sox. But a few months later Harris regretted the deal when he learned that he was going to assume the management of the Red Sox and that Cissell was his outstanding shortstop. Cissell always could hit, but his fielding left much to be desired and there was no place for him on the Boston team when Owner Yawkey brought Joe Cronin over to the club from Washington as its manager and shortstop.

The late Mr. Comiskey had great luck with baseball's first $100,000 beauty from the minors, Willis Kamm, who made good instanter at third base, and he could be forgiven, perhaps, for separating himself from the $126,000 that Cissell cost. But the White Sox owner was still intent, at that time, on rebuilding the club that the Black Sox of 1919 had wrecked and counted Cissell's purchase as a twin attempt to strengthen his team and regain the patronage of the Chicago public, which had been weaned away by the Cubs.

Before Comiskey bought Kamm for 100 grand, Connie Mack, flushed with the possibilities of his young team of a decade ago, held the American League record for a single minor league purchase when he brought Outfielder Paul Strand up from the Coast League for $70,000. The same year he brought to the team a young outfielder from Milwaukee named Al Simmons and that spring in the A's training camp the vagaries of baseball were strikingly interested.

Strand, the big-shot minor leaguer, was a terrific flop. He couldn't hit even the big league pitching in the spring games and was a shocking disappointment to Mack. Simmons, who cost the aged leader of the A's only a third of the sum he paid for Strand, was, on the other hand, an immediate sensation, despite his foot-in-the-bucket style of batting which violated every principle of accepted big league form.

Back in 1923, John McGraw recommended to Owner Stoneham, of the Giants, the purchase of Jimmy O'Connell from the Coast League at a price tag of $75,000. Brought East and inserted in the Giants' line-up, O'Connell proved a big leaguer from the outset and McGraw was congratulating himself all over the premises until the waning weeks of the 1924 pennant race when O'Connell's big league career came to a sudden and untimely close.

On the testimony of Heinie Sand, third baseman of the Phillies, who declared that O'Connell had asked him "not to bear down" because the game meant nothing to the Phillies while the Giants were in the thick of the pennant race, Judge Landis tossed O'Connell and Coach Cozy Dolan out of baseball. The Giants eventually won the pennant, but were forced to play Washington in the 1924 World Series without the services of their brilliant young centerfielder.

Clark Griffith, baseball-wise owner of the Nats, has batted 1.000 in both of his expensive purchases of minor league talent, but only twice has he deemed it worth while or expedient to dabble in the upper-case figures when buying rookies.

His first expensive purchase, the $50,000 he paid for Earl McNeely in the waning weeks of the 1924 pennant race, bore him handsome dividends. Although McNeely starred only two years, the Sacramento flash was a potent factor in the winning of the pennants in 1924 and 1925 with their resultant profits to the Washington club treasury. He was more than a mild sensation in 1924, when he joined the club in July, and he maintained a batting average of .330 throughout the pennant drive.

Griffith's only other costly purchase was Joe Kuhel, bought from Kansas City, on the recommendation of Scout Joe Engel for a $65,000 figure—$50,000 in cash and $15,000 in players. Despite his slumps in 1934 and 1935 when he failed to bat .300 and his fielding also fell off, Kuhel proved his worth in 1933. With Joe Cronin, aspiring to lead the club to the pennant, Kuhel lent a powerful hand with a .327 batting figure that made him the outstanding sixth-place hitter in the league if not in the entire history of baseball.

Orioles Hand Nats Initial Loss, 3-0

Blast Peticolas to Win; Washington Outhits Foe, 6 to 4.

Lanahan Redeems Self, Giving Only 2 Blows in 4 Innings.

By Shirley Povich.

Sports Editor of The Post.

KISSIMMEE, Fla., March 19.—The tender little four-game winning streak that the Washington Club had been nursing expired this afternoon in the depressing atmosphere of a minor league camp.

The Baltimore Orioles, a team of back-sliding big leaguers and ambitious youths, plastered a 3-0 defeat on the Nats, their first beating in an exhibition game this season.

The blame for it all can be placed directly at the feet of young Frank Peticolas, whose three-inning turn on the mound for Washington was a weird performance that is already tantamount to a ticket back to the minor leagues or mayhaps the sandlots.

Nats Get Six Hits.

But the supposedly mighty batting attack of the Washington club was no great help either. Against three pitchers the Nats collected only six hits—all singles. At that, they outhit the Orioles who, despite Petticolas, were held to four hits.

Dick Lanahan, redeeming himself for a sad performance against the Albany Club earlier in the week, pitched four tolerable innings and yielded only one other hit after the first man to face him, Bill Jeffries, formerly of the White Sox, singled.

Greeted With Single.

Lanahan left the game with the score deadlocked at 0 to 0 after four innings, but the Orioles were not long in rectifying this state of affairs after the giant Peticolas wandered into the box.

John Berly, the second Baltimore pitcher, greeted Peticolas with a single and then Jeffries laid down a safe bunt that the young Washington pitcher threw slightly less than a mile over First Baseman Joe Kuhel's head. Then varying his tactics, he walked Mayo to fill the bases and walked Bill Cissell, another former White Sox, to force the first run over the plate.

A double play at this point failed to keep another Baltimore run from scoring but Peticolas issued his third walk of the inning before it was over.

The Orioles didn't need a hit to score their third run. Peticolas, still in the box, walked Jefferies, the first man to face him in the seventh, and then he walked Mayo. Then he uncorked a wild pitch that

Louis to Fight Schmeling at Stadium

Bout Expected to Attract Second Million-Dollar Gate Since Crash.

NEW YORK, March 19.—Joe Louis and Max Schmeling will fight their 15-round heavyweight bout here in June, probably in the Yankee Stadium, and almost certainly before the second $1,000,000 "house" since the depression knocked the props from under the boxing industry.

Promoter Mike Jacobs today ended speculation over the possibility of staging the bout either in Cleveland or Philadelphia, where the 1936 Republican and Democratic national conventions, respectively, will be held.

After an all-night conference with Brig. Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, Jacobs said Phelan had insisted on fulfillment of a promise he (Jacobs) made several months ago to put on the fight in New York.

Site Unannounced.

Although the site and date of the fight will not be announced for several days, it probably will be held the third or fourth week in June. The Yankees will be on the road from June 16 to 29.

Col. Jacob Ruppert's recent announcement that the stadium's seating capacity for boxing would be increased to around 100,000 points to the Yankee park as the almost certain selection for the fight. Jacobs holds options for boxing, both at the stadium and the Polo Grounds, but the latter arena can handle not more than 80,000.

Schmeling will sail from Hamburg on April 15. Louis already has selected La Fayetteville, N. Y., for preliminary training, and will report there late in April.

Nats Play Phillies, On Three-Day Trip

By a Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 19.—Their four-game winning streak interrupted by a defeat at the hands of the Baltimore Orioles at Kissimee today, the Nats entrain tomorrow for a three-day exhibition game trip.

At Winter Haven tomorrow, Washington meets the Phillies. At Tampa on Saturday, they encounter the Cincinnati Reds and at Daytona Beach on Sunday they play their Chattanooga farm team.

Manager Bucky Harris will divide tomorrow's pitching assignment among Jimmy De Shong, Monte Weaver and Joe Bokina, each of whom will work three innings.

Western Team Wins In Catholic Tourney

Chicago, March 19 (AP).—After trailing for three periods, Campion High, Praire du Chien, Wis., rallied today in the final session to win a thriller from St. Michael, of Union City, N. J., 27 to 23, to go to the second round of the National Catholic Prep Basketball Tournament.

The Easterners led by 20 to 19 at the end of the third quarter, but faded as Nieman, Tobiaski and Hendricks scored in the final. Joe Glennon led the losers with 10 points.

Bloom Challenges Walter Johnson to Throw Dollar Now

By the Associated Press.

REPRESENTATIVE SOL BLOOM, of New York, yesterday challenged Walter Johnson, former pitcher, to try and throw a silver dollar across the Rappahannock River now.

"With the present high water," he said, "the river should be about the size it was when George Washington was supposed to have pitched the dollar across, and not the puny little stream it was when Walter 'duplicated' the legend."

Johnson tossed the coin across the river at Fredericksburg, Va., last February 22. The stream was then 272 feet wide.

Culley Beaten By M'Diarmid

HAMILTON, Bermuda, March 19.—Jack McDiarmid the transplanted Texan from Chicago, pulled off the biggest surprise of the Bermuda tennis championships today when he defeated Henry Culley, of Santa Barbara, Calif., fourteenth ranking United States player, in a second-round match. The scores were 6—4, 6—8, 6—4.

McDiarmid was within a point of winning the match in straight sets, but Culley's accurate placing of both forehand and backhand shots enabled him to win four straight games. The match lasted more than an hour and a half.

Led by McDiarmid and Bryan ("Bitsy") Grant, the men's singles was reduced to eight quarter-finalists, while quarter-final matches in women's singles and the doubles tourneys were completed as a summery day enabled the players to make up for time lost because of yesterday's rain.

Grant, although he lost one set to F. Lawrence, of Los Angeles, did not exert himself to win, 6—3, 5—7, 6—2. Karle Schroeder, of Sweden, defeated E. C. McKnight, of Springfield, Mass., 7—5, 6—1.

Nichy Will Battle Lewis on April 15

Billy Nichy, who meets Al Delaney at Turner's Arena next Monday night, will participate in a flood relief benefit card in Pittsburgh on April 15 against Light-Heavyweight Champion John Henry Lewis, it was announced last night.

The show will be staged under the matchmaking auspices of Jack Laken, who has been guiding the destiny of Nichy, if Billy shows impressively against Delaney.

A resident of Pittsburgh, Nichy probably would have been unable to fill his engagement with Delaney had he not already been on the scene of action before the recent Nation-wide floods started. Yesterday he was advised that his home in Pittsburgh had been abandoned because of high waters and his relatives had moved to a safer point until the waters receded.

Baseball Loop Meets.

The National City "B" League will organize for the season Monday night at a meeting to be held at 8 o'clock at the Atlas Sport Shop. It is planned to again hold an eight-team league. Teams wishing entrance should send representative.

Picard Shoots 69 to Lead Tourney

Hershey Pro Is 5 Strokes Ahead; Laffoon and Cox Drop Back.

By the Associated Press.

CHARLESTON, S. C., March 19. Shattering par by two strokes, Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., today added a 69 to his 67 of yesterday to take a formidable lead in the fourth annual $3,000 tournament of gardens here.

While Picard, who for many years was pro at the Charleston Country Club here, continued to play sub-par golf, Ky Laffoon, of Chicago, who was tied with him at the end of yesterday's 18 holes, lost control today and soared to a 76.

In Tie for Second.

Five strokes behind the leader and tied for second place with totals of 141 were two other Chicagoans, Dick Metz and Frank Walsh, who, with Torchy Toda, the invading pro from Kobe, Japan, posted 69's today. Toda's total was 147.

Following Metz and Walsh by one stroke were the veteran Walter Hagen, of Detroit, with 71-71—142, and Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., with 72-70—142. Herman Barron, of White Plains, added a 72 to his 71, to go into a tie with Laffoon at 143.

Wiffy Cox, of Washington, D. C., who ranked third at the end of the first day of competiiton, slipped badly today, shooting a 79 for an aggregate of 149 that dropped him into a tie for twenty-fourth place.

Tony Scarpati, Hurt In Bout, Still in Coma

New York, March 19 (U.P.).—Tony Scarpati, Brooklyn welterweight, who was injured Tuesday night in a bout with Lou Ambers, of Herkimer, N. Y., was in "very poor" condition today.

Scarpati still was in the coma into which he lapsed after being battered to the canvas in the seventh round.

Bridle Paths, Inundated, Closed

Seven Baseball Fields Dug Up; Boat Clubs Suffer Heavily.

Workouts Are Canceled at Benning Track, Hit by Water's Fury.

By Bill McCormick.

THE muddy flood waters of the Potomac yesterday left their mark on local sports. Horses were rushed from stables near the waterfront to points of safety, golf courses were submerged, sandlot baseball diamonds were torn up and, all in all, the advent of the coming summer sports season was retarded beyond accurate estimate.

As the angry Potomac began to flood the Riverside Driving Academy in the 2700 block of F street northwest, 26 riding horses were removed to the old Riding and Hunt Club at Twenty-second and P streets northwest. From the Potomac Riding School, 34 equines were removed to the same point of vantage. Marty Gallagher's stable, in the 2500 block of H street, was untouched by the high waters and it was not necessary to remove his horses.

All Speedway bridle paths were closed and most of them were under 2 or 3 feet of water. It is hoped by equestrians that the paths will be ready for use by Sunday, always a busy day in the riding business.

Golf Courses Inundated.

The East Potomac, West Potomac and Anacostia public golf courses all were partially inundated. West Potomac, with its hard greens and lack of sand traps, probably will be ready for play much quicker than any of the rest. East Potomac is dotted with lakes and how long the flood will delay the opening scheduled for tomorrow is problematical.

Winfree Johnson, of the National Public Parks and Welfare Board, stated last night: "It is impossible at this time to estimate the amount of damage done by the flood, although we do not think it will be so very much. Work on restoring the damaged properties will be begun as soon as conditions permit and we do not believe Washington's outdoor sports program will be unduly retarded."

Park authorities stated that high winds on the heels of receding waters would hasten the conditioning of the courses. They pointed out that while sunshine and clear weather dry the surface, a high wind hastens the drying of the soil for several feet below the surface. It is not believed that the courses' grass greens have suffered, but repairs to the sand traps and tees probably will be in order.

Several baseball diamonds on the Monument lot were dug up in erecting emergency protection against the flood. Repairs to them will keep them from being put in service next month as had been planned, probably delaying their opening until about the first of May. The Monument tennis courts were slightly flooded and muddied, but the concrete courts will be

News From Major Leagues' Spring Training Camps

By the Associated Press.

ARCADIA, Fla., March 19.—Thirty-seven hits—10 doubles, 1 triple, 4 home runs—were packed into a wild slugging match the St. Louis Browns won from St. Paul of the American Association, 22 to 12, in an exhibition here today.

The Browns got 21 of the safeties. Harlan Clift, third baseman, led the attack with a double, triple and home run. Mazzera and Bejma also socked circuit smashes, and Rocco hit one for the Saints.

Pasadena, Calif., March 19.—Manager Jimmy Dykes, putting his Chicago White Sox through a routine workout here today, said he would pitch Whitehead, Kennedy, Stratton and Tietje in games Saturday and Sunday at San Bernardino against Los Angeles. The Sox pilot is counting on those four, plus Ted Lyons, to take regular turns on the hill when the season opens.

New Orleans, March 19 (AP).—Manager Steve O'Neill, of the Cleveland Indians, announced after today's workout that Willis Hudlin, the lone Tribe pitcher to see no competitive action this year, would start against Bill Lee as the Indians play the Chicago Cubs tomorrow.

Hudlin, dean of the Cleveland mound corps, turned in 15 victories each of the last two years.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 19.—Lou Gehrig hit his first home run of the exhibition season and Joe DiMaggio connected with four singles as the New York Yankees defeated the Cincinnati Reds, 13 to 8, today. Lew Riggs and Alex Kampouris also hit homers for the Reds.

Houston, Tex., March 19.—The Chicago Cubs shoving across three runs in a ninth-inning rally beat the Houston Buffs, 5 to 4, here today.

The Buffs scored in the second, sixth and eighth innings and held a 4-2 edge when the Cubs came to bat in the ninth. Then Demaree walked, took third on Lillard's double and scored with Lillard on a double by English. English took third on Gill's pinch single and scored the winning run on Galan's long fly.

Defuniak Springs, Fla., March 19.—The New York Giants today drubbed the Vols of the Southern Association, 19-8, in a game played before 2,500 persons. It was a dedication game for the new Harbeson Field. Two of the Nashville pitchers issued 14 passes and hit 4 batters.

Lakeland, Fla., March 19.—The Brooklyn Dodgers pounded out 14 hits off three hurlers, including Elden Auker, to defeat the world champion Detroit Tigers, 10 to 6, in an exhibition game today. One of Detroit's nine hits off George Earnshaw and Tom Baker was a home run by Al Simmons.

Fort Myers, Fla., March 19 (AP).—A single by Pinch-Hitter Wally Moses with the bases full in the ninth completed a 5-run rally and gave the Philadelphia Athletics a 9-to-8 victory over the Boston Red Sox today. Jimmy Foxx walked four times in five trips to the plate.

Columbiana, Hirsch Filly, Takes Tropical Mile Feature Race

$3.50 Choice Wins Purse Handily

Lady Higloss Is Second, Length and One-Half Behind Leader.

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., March 19.—W. J. Hirsch's filly Columbiana, second to the Kentucky Derby favorite Brevity at Hialeah in her last appearance, ran as her short odds indicated to win the Pomona purse of 1 mile, chief magnet on the eight-race card presented here this afternoon.

The bay daughter of Petee Wrack-Firetop, paying $3.50 for a $2 investment, covered the 8 furlongs in 1:37 2-5 under a mere 103 pounds and scored handily by a length and a half over Miss A. Doris' Lady Higloss. The Brentwood Stable's Wild Turkey was an easy third, four additional lengths away. The race, for fillies and mares exclusively, attracted six to the post. The winner is an eligible to the Derby Consolation, chief stake of the current meeting.

MacWhite Sees Program.

Among those to witness the Hirsch filly's performance were Michael MacWhite, Irish Free State Minister to the United States, and Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, recently returned from Santa Anita, where his Discovery proved so disappointing in the big Coast handicap.

Lady Higloss and Coequel, the two expected to provide the strongest contention for the favorite, fought it out for the leadership while George Seabo restrained Columbiana behind the pair within winning range. Lady Higloss disposed of Coequel, leaving the far side as Columbiana began her charge. Collaring the leader after the turn for home, Columbiana gradually drew away while her rival held on well to beat the others.

28 Are Named For Bowie's Inaugural

TWENTY-EIGHT horses have been nominated for the Inaugural Handicap, the feature of Bowie's opening day program on April 1. The list includes representative of 21 interests with Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, as usual, leading with five horses named. The young millionaire will pick his starter or starters from a group that includes Good Harvest, Bachelor Dinner, Purple Knight, Dogmata and Dreel. Each of these horses was a winner in Maryland last year.

The Shandon Farm, prominent in nearby competition last fall, will depend upon Bright Light and Official. John Hay Whitney can send Singing Wood, one-timer star, postward if he sees fit while other prominent nominees are Sailor Beware, Green Stable; New Deal, Araho Stable; Billy Bee, Bomar Stable; Bright and Early, Robert Robertson and Star Porter, Ral Parr.

The Pennsylvania Railroad yesterday asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to acquire 6.4 miles of the abandoned right of way of the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Railway between Odenton and Bowie. The company intends to pay $30,000 rent for the track which will enable the Pennsy to operate trains from Union Station direct to the track.

Nominations of the Inaugural follow:

WEATHER, CLEAR. TRACK FAST.

FIRST RACE—Six furlongs; claiming. Purse, $700. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 2:19. Off at 2:21. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Winner, Mrs. L. J. Schaefer's b. g. (5), by Masked Marvel II—Leap Year. Trained by L. J. Schaefer. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:12.

WICROSE	(J. Renick)	104	6	4	4¹	6¹	8	8	12.65

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHIRAC, $30.90, $8.70, $3.20; DIXIE PRINCESS, $2.60, $2.20; SLAVE, $2.40.

CHIRAC, having more speed than usual, went into a clear lead in the opening furlong, was kept under strong urging and drew out smartly in the last quarter mile. DIXIE PRINCESS, rushed into a forward position, made a determined effort when reaching the turn, but weakened badly after reaching the homestretch. SLAVE worked his way up on the outside after being outrun early, but could not threaten the first two in the closing drive.

SECOND RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $700. For 2-year-old fillies. Went to post at 2:51. Off at 2:57½. Start good from gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Winner, William J. Hirsch's dk. ch. f. (2), by Happy Argo—Modification. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:47 3-5.

DERBY TOWN	(Steffen)	112	11	10	11	11	11	89.65

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CONSERVATIVE, $5.30, $3.50, $2.50; SAVAGE BEAUTY, $8.10, $4.30; MAYRO, $2.60.

CONSERVATIVE, a quick beginner and away nicely, opened up a long lead immediately after the start, saved ground all the way, but had to be kept under pressure during the stretch run when she began tiring. SAVAGE BEAUTY, hustled hard all the way and prominent from the beginning, held on courageously to outstay MAYRO. Latter overcame interference after the break and closed stoutly when clear.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs; claiming. Purse, $700. For 3-year-olds. Went to post at 3:27. Off at 3:27½. Start poor. Won driving; place same. Winner, Y. W. Mann's ch. f. (3), by Ormont—Nelchen. Trained by David A. Shaw. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:12 4-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
MIN ORMONT	(I. Hanford)	106	6	5	5¹	4¹½	2¹	1½	$24.55

PEACE MOVE	(Coule)	110	3	7	8²	8²	8²	9	36.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MIN ORMONT, $51.10, $31.40, $14.50; JACK SNIPE, $11.20, $7.70; ROYAL VIXEN, $5.80.

MIN ORMONT, racing on the outside of the leaders, moved up stoutly when approaching the homestretch to engage the pacemakers, rallied strongly when vigorously urged and was up inside the final sixteenth. JACK SNIPE was hurried into a short lead early, drew clear nearing the homestretch, saved ground, but weakened right at the end. ROYAL VIXEN was a strong factor all the way and held on gamely in the final drive.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs; claiming. Purse, $700. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 3:58. Off at 4:02½. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, J. U. Gratton's ch. g. (4), by Macaw—Maskelinda. Trained by William Irvine. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:12.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
SPIXI	(Schraudenbach)	115	7	5	4¹	3½	3²	1²⁰	$1.60
EPIBEAU	(Jackson)	108	5	2	2½	2¹½	2¹	2¹	6.30
LITTLE DINAH	(H. Whitney)	110	1	1	1¹	1¹	1¹	3¹	4.95
PHILDIA	(Litzenberger)	110	4	3	3¹	4¹	4½	4⁴	4.95
CHINESE EMPRESS	(Wimmer)	108	2	7	6⁵	6¹	6	5	19.55
ZAY	(Wholey)	108	3	6	7	7	5¹⁰	Pulled up	9.05
WEE TUNE	(Malley)	110	6	4	5½	5¹	Fell		8.30

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPIXI, $5.20, $3.50, $2.60; EPIBEAU, $5.70, $3.80; LITTLE DINAH, $3.80.

SPIXI, in the thick of contention and on the outside of the leaders, responded nicely to entrance the pacemakers at the stretch turn, gained a short lead when settled into the homestretch and merely lasted to outstay EPIBEAU. Latter forced a rapid pace while following LITTLE DINAH and continued stubbornly until the close. LITTLE DINAH was hard ridden to maintain a short lead in the first five furlongs, then continued willingly under a severe drive.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs; allowances. Mangrove Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds. Went to post at 4:33. Off at 4:36. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, Cornelius V. Whitney's br. c. (3), by Dis Donc—Miss Whisk. Trained by John A. Healy. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:12.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
MICROBE	(I. Hanford)	105	4	7	7	6¹	3¹	1¹³	$8.30
SACHEM	(J. Renick)	110	1	5	5³	5¹	4½	2¹	10.40
GO HOME	(Litzenberger)	110	3	3	2½	1¹	1½	3¹	2.05
SHOT UP	(Wright)	110	5	6	6½	7	5²	4⁵	1.95
STE. LOUISE	(Jackson)	108	6	2	1¹	2½	2¹	5½	4.10
SANDY BOY	(Dabson)	110	7	1	4²	4⁵	6²	6¹	47.95
CHANCER	(Malley)	110	2	4	3¹²	3¹²	7	7	25.10

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MICROBE, $18.60, $7.60, $5.10; SACHEM, $10.10, $5.10; GO HOME, $3.40.

MICROBE, dwelt slightly when the start came, settled in his stride quickly and was taken to the outside when bettering his position. He entered contention nearing the homestretch, wore the leaders down inside the final furlong and barely lasted to outstay SACHEM, while the latter, on the inside at the end. SACHEM moved up fast after a half mile, slipped through on the inside and was going strong at the end. GO HOME had a lot taken out of him racing STE. LOUISE into submission and he weakened in the last quarter mile.

SIXTH RACE—One mile; allowances. Pomona Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 5:08. Off at 5:12½. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, Hinchcliffe Stable's ch. c. by Par Exce—Firetop, owned by owner. Value to winner, $725; second, $175; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 1:37 2-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight
COLUMBIANA	(Seabo)	101	1	1	1¹	1¹	1¹	2¹	1¹	$0.75
LADY HIGLOSS	(Wall)	108	5	2	2¹½	1³	1¹	1¹	2¹	3.55
WILD TURKEY	(I. Hanford)	103	3	6	6	5³	5⁴	3¹½	3⁴	14.80
BELOW ZERO	(Stafford)	108	4	4	4⁴	4⁴	4⁴	4¹⁰	5³	28.90
COEQUEL	(Kastner)	110	6	3	3²	2¹	3³	4¹	5¹	3.80
PARSLEY	(Fallon)	96	2	5	5¹½	6	6	6	6	51.95

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COLUMBIANA, $3.50, $2.30, $2.20; LADY HIGLOSS, $3.00, $2.40; WILD TURKEY, $2.80.

COLUMBIANA, rushed to the first turn to obtain a forward position, was eased off the pace and steadied for six furlongs, moved up stoutly when shaken up and wore LADY HIGLOSS down gradually under a drive through the stretch run. LADY HIGLOSS moved clear midway of the backstretch, went along nicely until challenged, but could not stay with the winner when collared. WILD TURKEY gained steadily in the last half mile and closed gamely.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles; claiming. Purse, $700. For 3-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 5:45. Off at 5:46. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Winner, G. L. Weiss' ch. g. (7), by Spanish Prince II—Kitten. Trained by Lyman A. Brusie. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:51.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight
EL PUMA	(Kastner)	107	4	5	2¹	1½	1½	1²	1³	$1.40
BIG GAWK	(Arcaro)	115	3	2	3²	3¹½	3²	2³	2¹½	3.35
EASIEST WAY	(Pollard)	119	2	1	4³	4¹	4¹	4³	3⁴	4.45
POLO BAR	(Westrope)	116	1	3	5	5	5	5	4½	7.30
CREDULOUS	(I. Hanford)	108	5	4	1³	2²	2¹½	3¹	5	4.95

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EL PUMA, $4.80, $2.70, $2.20; BIG GAWK, $3.40, $2.40; EASIEST WAY, $2.50.

EL PUMA moved into a slight lead when reaching the backstretch, shook off stiff opposition from CREDULOUS and came away stoutly in the last five-sixteenths. BIG GAWK, steadied back of the leaders for the first seven furlongs, responded gamely when called on, but was no match for the winner. EASIEST WAY was unable to threaten the first two in the final drive, but was easily best of the others.

EIGHTH RACE—Coralway course; claiming. Purse, $700. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 6:19. Off at 6:20. Start poor. Won driving; place same. Winner, F. Eaton's b. f. (4), by Prince Pal—Nyasa. Trained by W. A. Smith. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 2:03.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PALASA, $10.60, $5.30, $4.70; CELIBA, $3.70, $2.80; PARITY, $3.60.

PALASA, going in startling improved fashion and away very slowly, began improving his position steadily after going seven furlongs, swung around the leaders when reaching contention and drew out rapidly when overtaking the pacemakers inside the last sixteenth. CELIBA made strong efforts after engaging PARITY in the last five furlongs and held on strongly under punishment. PARITY had good speed while setting the pace, rallied when forced to a hard drive and continued well in the closing drive.

Pixlee to Direct G. W. in Spring Grid Drills Opening Monday

Maps a Hard Six-Weeks Schedule

Finding Tuffy Leeman's Successor Is Chief Problem.

FLOOD or no flood, George Washington's football team will begin spring practice Monday on the Monument Grounds, with the kind permission of the Department of Public Parks and Buildings, Head Coach Jim Pixlee announced last night. The Colonials will use a small field near Fifteenth street just west of the Bureau of Engraving, an area not affected by the rampant Potomac.

Pixlee asserted in an emphatic manner that he would assume full responsibility for the squad and be in complete command of the work. He has mapped out a six weeks' schedule that will leave the lads fully prepared for the more strenuous work next September. Bill Reinhart will assist him, but Pixlee emphasized the assist angle, and further asserted that no more additions to the coaching staff would be made until later in the year.

George Washington's big problem, of course, is replacing "Tuffy" Leemans, who virtually was the team's entire offense of the past two seasons. Little hope is held for unearthing a lad even approaching Leemans' ability. Certainly the two-man staff will not dig up one who can do everything Leemans did as well as he did it. They intend to do the next best thing and try to weld a smooth, close-knit backfield of specialty artists which will go far toward offsetting "Tuffy's" loss.

Bruce Mahan, who was retarded by a broken finger and later an injured knee last year, is the outstanding candidate for Leemans' vacant position. He is a triple-threater and showed to good advantage when he did play. Joe Kaufman, the highly touted freshman star of 1934, who fizzled last autumn, also will receive plenty of attention, principally because of his work against Rice and Davis-Elkins last season.

Captain-elect Frank Kavalier, Herb Reeves, "Nig" Tihila and Lou Carroll are the other outstanding backfield candidates who will receive special attention. Kavalier is destined to remain a halfback, where he was shifted last season, after breaking in as a fullback. Ray Hanken, who played a bang-up game at fullback before being shifted to end, has caught Pixlee's fancy and probably will be kept at the wing, where his coach predicts a brilliant future for him.

Resettlement 23-13 Victor in League

Resettlement Administration's fast basketball team once more took the Bureau of Investigation into camp in the quarter-finals of the Government League at the Y. M. C. A. The count was 23 to 13. The G-Men totaled only four field goals.

The finals of the first annual District A. A. U. squash championships will be held tomorrow on the Central Y. M. C. A. courts at 2:30 p. m. Hugh Lynch, of the Edgemoor Club, and James G. Gibson, of the Racquet Club, will meet to decide the winner of third honors.

Departmental League Will Have Five Teams

The Departmental Baseball League, expanding its membership from four to five teams, has organized for the coming season. Three new teams grace the league roster, although Government Printing Office and Public Works Administration, champion and runner-up, respectively, are back in the fold.

Tow Outpoints Slake.

Chicago, March 19 (AP).—Bob Tow, Alexandria, Va., heavyweight, outpointed Eddie Slake, of South Bend, Ind., in a tame, no-knockdown, six-round bout here tonight. Tow managed to stagger his opponent with a series of rights to the head in the fifth, best round of the match. Tow weighed 194 to Slake's 192.

Flood Takes Toll Of Capital Sports

ready for play a few days after the water has completely receded.

All boat clubs suffered heavily. The Potomac Boat Club was flooded to the ballroom on the second floor. All boats were removed to safety, but damage to the club's floats and piers cannot be estimated until the water has returned to normal. The Washington Canoe Club's float was washed away and the site was otherwise badly damaged. Many canoes were lost from Dempsey's boat house, a public canoe renting establishment. Many large and small pleasure craft were torn from their moorings on the river and whirled toward the sea.

The old Benning race track, where Walter O'Hara proposes to erect a massive plant if the sport is legalized here, suffered heavily, forcing cancellation of all workouts. Portions of the track were deep under water and it is possible that owners now conditioning horses there will be forced to move to some other spot to prepare for the forthcoming Maryland season.

Volley Ball Team To Vie in Tourney

Washington's championship volley ball team, representing the Central Y. M. C. A., will leave tomorrow morning for the Four-State championships, to be held at Camden, N. J. The Capital team will be aiming for the title now held by Philadelphia's Central Y team.

Faulkner Steals Show In Badminton Tourney

Waldron Faulkner stole the spotlight in the final round of the Washington Badminton Club's annual championship tournament conducted at the Y. W. C. A., winning one title and teaming with clubmates to share in two others.

Men's singles—Waldron Faulkner defeated Malcolm Beattie, 15-2, 15-11. Men's doubles—(Semifinals) Faulkner and Trowbridge defeated Harry Howlett and Jack Purinton, 15-9, 13-13 (5-1). Finals—Faulkner and Sherman defeated Beattie and Holmead Callan, 12-15 13-13 (5-3), 15-10.

Women's singles—Mrs. Goodwin Graham defeated Miss Mary Ryan, 11-7, 11-1. Women's doubles—Mrs. Everett Ernon and Mrs. Graham defeated Mrs. Howard Ford and Miss Mary Ryan, 15-13, 15-2.

Mixed doubles—(Semifinals) Miss Eleanor Pinckel and George Roe defeated Mrs. W. R. Willoughby and Beattie, 15-6, 15-11. (Finals)—Mrs. Graham and Faulkner defeated Miss Pinckel and Roe, 15-3, 15-4.

Dusek Repeats Victory Over Vic Christy

Wins After 43½ Minutes With Flying Tackle; 2,500 Boo Him.

By George Considine.

WELL, he did it again last night at the Turner Arcana before nearly 2,500 rassle-goers. Ernie (Wild Steer) Dusek smeared Handsome Vic Christy in the highly publicized "return match of the century" with a flying tackle after 43½ minutes of titanic tussling.

For a fairly accurate account of the brawl, one has but to turn back to last Friday's Post. The only changes in this morning's paper are the difference in time consumed, the manner in which the match was brought to a close, and the referee.

Dusek came out of his corner at quite a brisk gait and immediately banged poor Vic to the mat with a looping right over the heart. Pouncing upon Vic, Ernie clamped on his favorite strangle, but Referee Bennah Bortnick broke it when the customers covered the rostrum with peanuts and cigar butts.

Dusek Draws Boos.

After taking what looked like a terrible beating for 10 minutes, Christy rose majestically and proceeded to pound Dusek to a pulp, to the edification of the fans. It was perfectly all right for Christy to vent his wrath, but whenever Dusek so much as mussed up the handsome one's tresses, he was booed to the echo.

Several times during the rather lengthy session Dusek would bounce off the ropes, miss his flying tackle and hurtle headlong into the laps of the ringsiders. When he returned, he would run into many flying fists, drop to his knees and almost, but not quite, give up the ghost.

On one occasion Ernie managed to clap on that Indian death-lock, made famous by Chief Little Wolf. Now, everybody knows full well that it is a hold that is physically unbreakable. But the valiant Vic strained a point and broke it anyway.

Finally Drops Back.

Dusek finally dropped back on the ropes for a flying tackle. But Christy leaped high into the smoke-filled ozone, allowing Ernie to pass on unobstructed. When Ernie tried it again, Vic was slow taking off and, as a result, the Dusek cranium buried itself in the Christy tummy. And that was that.

Semi-finally, Dean Detton, former University of Utah wrestling captain, forced senile Scotty McDougall to give up in 27½ minutes. Previous to that decisive leg-lock, the bout was a clean exhibition of orthodox grips with each man winning numerous rounds of applause.

What is believed to be a record for fast action was established by Ivan Managoff, who required only 3½ minutes to smack down villainous Tom Jenkins.

In the opener, Joe Dusek and Jim Comfield nearly fouled each other into oblivion before the former won on a body slam in 23½ minutes

Anacostia Eagles Bow To Marvin Methodists

Marvin Methodists defeated Anacostia Eagles, 26 to 22, at Hine Junior High School, in the first game of the best two-out-of-three for the Section B championship of the Southeast Community Center Basketball League last night. The game was hard fought and nip and tuck up to the last minute of play. Davis, with 10 points, and Blythe and Woodin with 8 and 9, respectively, were the high scorers.

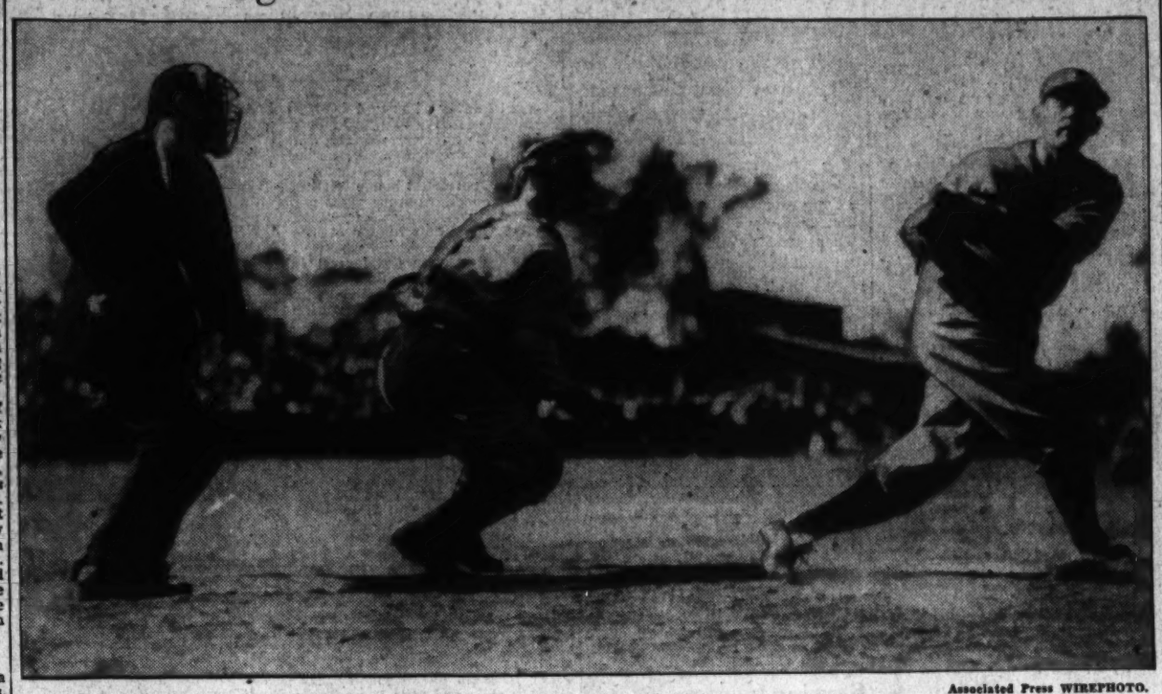
Gehringer Shows Series Form in Exhibition Game



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Charlie Gehringer, Detroit second baseman, connects with the ball in an exhibition game between the Tigers and Washington Nats, but the Nats won, 6 to 5. Cliff Bolton is behind the plate while Umpire Ormsby is looking 'em over.

Nats Are Handed First Defeat, 3-0

bounced off Cliff Bolton's glove and Jeffries scampered home from second base.

Three former big leaguers Cliff Melton, former Yankee, John Berly, former Pirate, and Frank Pearce, former Phil, were the gents who held the Nats in check although it required some laughable base-running by Joe Kuhel and Sammy Holbrook, mostly Holbrook, to prevent the Nats from scoring in the third against the long left-handed Melton.

The 400 fans disgorged by the Florida countryside laughed right out loud as Kuhel and Holbrook became entangled in a five-minute rundown after both were trapped off base. Kuhel had started the inning with a single to right and Holbrook had walked when Catcher Roy Spencer, a former Nat, caught Kuhel off second base with a snap throw.

Then ensued a hilarious sequence. Kuhel bolted for third and Holbrook dashed to second. With the entire Baltimore infield figuring in the rundown, including the pitcher and catcher, both Kuhel and Holbrook found themselves on second base. Whereupon Kuhel dashed for third again, and Holbrook ran the bases in reverse toward first; the upshot of it was that Kuhel was tagged out near second and Holbrook, who was stumbling back to first, also was tagged to complete the weirdest play in the game's history.

Out Fishin' . . . . .

By Jack Hawley.

YOU will have to go a little further and reconcile the light tackle use and the losses due to improper equipment."

The statement made is one that I hoped would be asked and I am only too glad to enlarge on the subject. Capt. Stewart Miller, author of an excellent book on Florida fishing, states it thusly: "When stopped by a heavy line with strong tension the fish immediately become panic-stricken and dash off into frenzied short runs that frequently terminate in a torn-out hook, or a whipped fish."

In either event, the sport is lost. Have you ever noticed women fishing, usually with light tackle, because of its convenience and light weight, something that wont tire them out, because they tell brother anglers, "Your rod is too heavy to handle, besides, we can handle our fish with this rod if it takes all day." They usually land their fish, and in more than one big fish tournament they have won prizes.

It is not a natural impulse for a woman to fight her fish. With the majority, it is either fear, excitement, lack of strength, desire for fair play, that enables the fish to make runs, break water, etc., without becoming panic-stricken in his efforts to regain freedom. This is real sport, the reward of scientific combat. Imagine how ridiculous and clumsy looking a trout fisherman would appear, trying to play a 10-inch trout on a surf-casting rod.

The writer has just made a survey of local sporting goods stores in answer to many inquiries regarding the cost of complete equipment for fresh and salt water use.

Good grade split bamboo fly casting rod, 8 feet 6 inches or 9 feet length; reel, enamel line, six flies, metal fly box, two leaders, 6-foot length; willow creel; $8.

The $10 group selection is the same as the $6 outfit excepting the rod, which is first quality, and best quality level line.

The $20 group in one store was all any angler could ask for regardless of sizeable bankroll; Heddon first quality fly rod, length as above; Pflueger first quality reel, Ashaway level line, six flies, two tapered leaders, 6 to 7 feet 6 inches length; leader box, creel reinforced with leather.

For fresh or salt water bait casting the writer selected a happy medium ranging from $6.50 to $12.50. Split bamboo rod, Shakespeare level winding reel; silk line; 2 Heddon Creek Chub or other suitable plugs; floating minnow bucket, leader wire. Six hooks are included in all above selections. Salt water tackle only: For croaker, trout (weak fish) spot or still fishing of any kind the following will answer your needs: Basswood rod; 150 yds. Cuttyhunk line; 6, 3-ply gut hooks; 2, 4-oz. sinkers. Price $4.50. The second group consists of 2 piece bamboo rod; 150 yds. Cuttyhunk line, test optional up to 36 lbs.; Star drag Ocean City reel, capacity 250 yds.; 6 wire snelled hooks;; 2 Pflueger record spoons, No. 5; 6 swivels and 2 trolling sinkers. Cost complete $9.75. Group three is tops for any salt water sportsman; one-piece split bamboo rod with screw lock reel seat; choice of Montague, Kingfisher, Horrocks Ibbotson or other make of rods in this price class; choice of Pflueger, Kingfisher or Ocean City reels, capacity 300 yds., all with star drag handles: 200 yds. Cuttyhunk line (braided or twisted) Ashway, test up to 45 pounds; spool of wire leader, 25 yds.; 6 barrel type swivels; 2 Japanese feathers for trolling, choice of sizes; 2 trolling spoons, choice of1 up to No. 5. Six hooks of 6 ply gut, 2 gut sealders for still fishing, with loops; genuine leather belt rod holder; Kennedy cantilever type, compartment fishing box. Price $17.50.

Columbia Firemen To Meet Warrenton

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., March 19.—Columbia Fire Department tossers will close a successful court campaign tomorrow night at Warrenton, Va., where they engage the Warrenton Wizards at 8:30 o'clock.

The smoke-eaters recently climaxed their most successful season by tying St. Mary's Celtics in a four-game series to reign as co-champions of the city. A fifth game was not played when managers of the teams disagreed on eligibility lists.

The Sparrows and Flashes will meet tomorrow at 4:30 p. m. on the armory court in the third of a five-game series for the junior league title. They are deadlocked now, each having won a game. The Sparrows will be without the services of Manager Eddie Nowland, regular center, who is ill.

U. S. Duckpin Event Opens Tonight

Annual Tourney to Start at Hartford; 5 D. C. Teams in Action.

THE National Duckpin tournament at Hartford, Conn., will get under way tomorrow as scheduled.

Swamped by phone calls from local entries, George Isemann, secretary of the congress, after spending four hours in a telegraph office, finally contacted Frank Lewis, manager of the Morgan Recreation drives, and received word that the floods which were raging throughout the Connecticut capital, would in no wise affect the holding of the tournament and that arrangements were still being made to handle a capacity field from every duckpin center in the country.

Mr. Isemann, before leaving for the Nutmeg City by train tonight, contacted the Three A's and found that the highways were safe for motor travel and that the Newcastle Ferry was running on schedule.

Five local teams will make their bid for national honors on the opening day with the Northeast Temple, team champions, playing a huge part in the opening festivities. The others making the trip are the Arcadia (men), and the Mount Rainier and Hyattsville girls teams

Manufactories Cut Big Swath In Idle Ranks

Absorbed More Unemploye Than Any Other Branch of Industry Since '34.

New York, March 19.—Manufacturing has absorbed more unemployed workers during the past two years than any other branch of industrial activity, according to an analysis by the National Industrial Conference Board. Of the total reduction in unemployment between January, 1934, and January, 1936, 80.3 per cent is attributable to improved conditions in manufacturing industries.

Unemployment in nonmanufacturing industries in the first month of 1934 constituted 66.6 per cent of the total estimated unemployment. Two years later it had increased to 71.2 per cent of the total. The situation outside of manufacturing, construction, and mining, appears to have become worse rather than better.

Unemployment in manufacturing, according to the board's estimates, declined from 3,597,000 in January, 1934, to 2,824,000 in January, 1936, or approximately 22 per cent. The construction industry absorbed about 255,000 workers, representing a decline of 20 per cent in the number of unemployed in that field. Mining re-employed 26,000, or slightly over 5 per cent of its proportion of unemployed workers.

In the combined fields of trade, and transportation and communication, unemployment increased from 2,743,000 to 2,802,000 during the two-year period. These two groups accounted for 25.4 per cent of the total volume of unemployment in January, 1934, and 28.5 per cent in January, 1936.

1934 Rated Next Best For Mail Order House

Chicago, March 19 (AP).—Montgomery Ward & Co.'s sixty-fourth annual report disclosed 1935 earnings increased 47 per cent over 1934 to the best level in the mail order house's history with the exception of 1928. Net sales were the largest on Ward's long record.

The net profit for the year ended January 31 was $13,527,310 compared with $9,161,054 the previous year, and $17,703,835 in 1928, the only year in which the 1935 record has been exceeded. This was equivalent to $2.65 on each share of outstanding common stock compared with $1.72 in 1935. Net sales totaled $293,042,357 compared with $249,805,271 in 1935.

Brokers' Loans Drop $79,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

Loans on securities to brokers and dealers held by weekly reporting member banks in New York City were reported yesterday by the Federal Reserve Board to have totaled $1,010,000,000 for the week ending Wednesday, a decrease of $79,000,000 for the week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $663,000,000.

Wheat Goes Higher At Chicago Market

Gain Results as Canada Improves Exports.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 19.—Indications of substantial improvement of Canadian export business led to higher prices today for wheat.

It was estimated 1,000,000 bushels of wheat had been bought in Canada today for shipment overseas. Tending further to lift values was a strong close at Liverpool, as well as persistent unfavorable weather for domestic crops of winter wheat southwest.

Wheat closed firm at nearly the day's top level, ⅛@⅞ above yesterday's finish, May, 98⅝@¾; July, 89¼; corn ⅛ off to ⅛ up; May, 60¼@60¾; oats unchanged to ¼ lower and provisions unchanged to a rise of 17 cents.

Bank Reserve Takes Big Dip At Tax Time

Income Payments With the Treasury Finance Cuts It to $5,144,000,000

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Banks' condition statement disclosed yesterday that Treasury finance and income tax payments clipped total reserve balances of member banks by $642,000,000

The total of $5,144,000,000 of reserve balances, however was still estimated to be about $2,390,000,000 in excess of legal requirements, compared with an excess of about $3,010,000,000 the week before.

The inflow of gold was nominal, additions of $3,000,000 increasing total stocks to $10,173,000,000. The statement said:

"On March 18 total Reserve bank credit amounted to $2,485,000,000, an increase of $12,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with an increase of $768,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks, offset in part by decreases of $642,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and $22,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts and an increase of $3,000,000 in monetary gold stock. Member bank reserve balances on March 18 were estimated to be $2,390,000,000 in excess of legal requirements."

Brewing Industry Continues Expansion

New York, March 19.—The brewing industry is currently in the best position it has enjoyed since the repeal of prohibition, according to the Standard Statistics Co. Last year was probably the first of approximately normal operations for the beer producers. Sales for the year totaled 44,909,243 barrels, 13 per cent ahead of 1934, and prospects are for further improvement in 1936, with around 50,000,000 barrels indicated as a likely figure.

This compares with a preprohibition average of around 62,000,000 barrels annually, and population increases since, have added to the potential market by about 40 per cent.

Maturities for April Put at $40,071,768

New York, March 19.—Corporate bond maturities during April will total $40,071,768, according to the Standard Statistics Co., of New York. The number of bonds and notes making up the total is 110, of which 7 amount to $1,000,000 or more. March maturities amounted to $95,890,800 and the 116 issues and portions of issues falling due in May total $48,043,400.

Drug Sales Better.

New York, March 19.—McKesson & Robbins, Inc., drug manufacturer and distributor, reports net sales of $11,605,621 for January, 1936, compared with $10,532,634 for the corresponding month of 1935, an increase of $1,072,987, or 10.19 per cent.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent

Stocks Advance Slowly as Flood Dangers Increase; U. S. Bonds Weak.

On a turnover of around 2,000,000 shares the stock market moved higher and prices were fairly well maintained through a season of profit taking in the last hour of trading. Government bonds felt less energetic on expenditure plans and weird taxation schemes. May wheat closed ¾ of a cent higher at 98⅝ cents a bushel.

Stock gains were the largest in the motors, chemicals and farm implements. Oils were active with Standard maintaining its position as pacesetter. Standard reached 70 for the first time since 1930. Barnsdall was helped by an extra dividend. Colonial-Beacon was a star performer at the odd lot post and climbed more than 5 points (30 per cent), while Phillips reached a new high level.

General Motors duplicated its best price since 1929 for a rise of nearly 2 points and then ran into profit taking. Chrysler hardened 2 points. Yellow Truck continued to push forward. In the chemical group Columbian Carbon extended its gain since last week to 15 points. Allied spurted 4 points on a few sales. Motor accessories rose 1 to 2 points. Case, Deere, Oliver and Harvester rose more than 3 points each. Montgomery Ward was strong, as were the other mail orders. Some of the airplanes stiffened on reports of better business over flooded areas. Steels, metals and rails were firm.

Flood Losses.

Flood and fire losses in the devastated areas of upper New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland and West Virginia certainly are having something to do with the current dullness in the stock market, but they are not bringing any noticeable liquidation of securities. The country's business will be adversely affected this week and possibly for several weeks to come because of dislocations caused by the floods, and some individual company losses probably will be large.

Railroad car loadings, electricity production, the steel industry's operating rate and certain other business indices which will appear next week promise to show effects of the inundation and fires, but those indices are market factors only when they reflect general economic conditions and not localized acts of God. As an offset to heavy company losses, through property damage and shutdown, other concerns will have increased orders. A good deal of rebuilding will have to be done and repairs made, which should stimulate sections of the building supply industry.

Meanwhile insurance company losses are believed to be well distributed, and their payment is unlikely to bring large sales of investments. As for relief expenditures, the money that will have to go into the flooded areas will not be enough to count for much against the huge total for the Nation to cover unemployment, real or fancied. If the markets can gulp down an appropriation of $1,500,000,000 for so-called relief in the next fiscal year, it ought to stand a comparatively trifling addition to cover flood needs.

Efforts abroad to find ways for slacking the rising war passions contributed to the firmer tone in markets, but brought little exchange in foreign currency quotations. Dealings were slack, both on commercial and speculative account. While a war scare tends to upset quotations, the passing of the disturbance can do nothing spectacular to harden currencies that are unmoored to gold or that are clinging to a metal base in rather uncertain fashion.

Many feel that the franc cannot stay on gold long after the coming elections, while others feel that, given peace, the currency can be held on gold indefinitely. Sterling and dollars are virtually stabilized now and once a determination were expressed on this side to put Government finances into semblance of order, a return to gold here and in Great Britain could be promptly arranged.

Italian Finance.

The better tone in Italian bonds seems to reflect the idea that the League of Nations may lift economic sanctions against Italy. It is doubtful whether that would make much difference with Italy's fortunes in Africa, since the real sinew of war—petroleum—has not been covered by sanctions. However, the end of the embargo to Italian exports placed by a group of nations would tend to lengthen Italy's time in which to prosecute the war and to fend off complete financial collapse. Since last autumn no figures have been available on Italian finances, but at that time the gold supply was meager and melting rapidly, currency inflation was sweeping the country and forced government loans were in effect.

Effect of Sanctions.

Sanctions have operated to hold down Italian exports, which has meant that a larger proportion of Italian imports have had to be paid for in gold, as foreign credits naturally have been difficult to obtain. Just how much gold is left in Italian hands can only be surmised, but it scarcely can be a large amount, for all the internal contributions of jewelry and the like. If other nations begin to buy more Italian goods, in so far as foreign currencies are acquired for Italian account, the strain on gold will slacken. Even so, with a financial crisis looming in one direction and the African rain clouds in another, the end of at least one war seems to be in sight.

War Prospect.

Unquestionably a solution of the Italian war problem would help to bring about a composition of the German trouble. Free of African complications and at peace with the League of Nations, Italy doubtless could take a diffreent stand with regard to Germany than otherwise might be the case. Certainly a group of nations without actual conflicts on hand is more likely to find a way for avoiding war than would be true if some members already were fighting. As it looks from this side the prospect of a European war is growing dimmer.

Bank Dividends.

While there may be disagreement with the Comptroller of the Currency's interpretation of the statute relating to National bank dividends, in which he construes "may" to mean "must," undoubtedly the requirement that National banks must declare dividends not oftener than every six months has removed some uncertainty from the minds of bank stockholders. Three National banks have declared regular payments not only for April 1, but also for July 1. Therefore doubt as to maintenance of present rates of dividend is removed for a period of six months. Recent firmness in the bank stock market reflects not only this factor, but also maintenance of regular rates of dividend by all the State banks and trust companies. The latter do not have to act semi-annually on dividends.

Ticker Ticks.

National Supply preferred recrossed the 100 line after an absence of five years. Dividends cumulative, were suspended in 1931 and the arrears are $11.50 a share. The shares will go to the active post tomorrow. The common stock has doubled in value since the close of last year. New oil fields and pipe lines in Louisiana and Texas have been responsible . . . American Radiator and Kelvinator were among the most active performers. Radiator has been backward for several weeks. The market supposed a good deal of plumbing work would be needed in the devastated regions of the Alleghenies . . . Standard Oil (New Jersey) continued to plow ahead. The company is hard at work on plans for a union of subsidiaries to bring savings under the new tax laws. Nearly every day brings a new rumor relative to a stock splitup, distribution of subsidiary stock, or just plain "something" of a bullish nature . . . Rebirth of a bull movement in Radio attracted attention late yesterday and again today. Few ever try hard to find an explanation for anything that Radio stock does in the market.

Bank Clearings For 22 Cities 20 Pct. Higher

Total for Week Closing on Wednesday Tabulated at $7,207,983,000.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 19.—Bank clearings for the week ended yesterday, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., for 22 leading cities in the United States, totaled $7,207,983,000.

This figure was 20.4 per cent above the $5,985,252,000 recorded for the corresponding period last year. At New York City, clearings amounted to $5,133,652,000, or 23.2 per cent in excess of last year's aggregate. The amount for outside centers of $2,074,331,000 rose 14.0 per cent above the $1,819,917,000 for the similar period of 1935.

The aggregate for the week showed an increase of $1,192,481,000, when compared with the figures for the preceding week. A year ago for the corresponding weeks a rise of $360,836,000 was recorded.

Figures at leading cities, showing increases and decreases, as compared with those of a year ago are printed herewith, also daily bank clearings for each month this year.

The Washington Clearing House reports total clearings of $20,737,296.43 for the week ended Wednesday, which compares with $19,061,402.55 for the previous week, an increase of 8 per cent. Compared with $16,942,982.15 for the corresponding period last year, clearings increased 18.2 per cent.

Recovery Trend Prevails on Curb

Inactive Specialties Lead the March of Prices.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 19.—Rising tendencies predominated in the curb market today with largest gains among the inactive specialties, industrials and oils. Some of the utilities and metals were a trifle backward but the underlying trend was not disturbed.

Aluminum Co. retained market leadership in point of gain, but the turnover was small. The stock rose from 143 to 147 and closed at 164¼ for a net gain of 6¼ points.

Pittsburgh Plate Glass was another strong spot, advancing 5 points to 123 and Gulf Oil and Electric Bond & Share each improved 1. American Cyanamid "B," Niagara Hudson and Great Atlantic & Pacific were among those gaining fractionally.

Issues displaying indifference to the general trend included American Gas, Humble Oil, Lake Shore Mines, Sherwin-Williams and Wright Hargreaves.

Transfers were 610,000 shares compared with 593,000 the day before.

Reginald Chapman Named.

Reginald D. Chapman, it was announced yesterday, has been appointed District customer service manager for International Business Machine Corporation. He joined I. B. M. in 1922 as a repair man in the Cincinnati office.

Continental Can Has Finance Plan

177,679 Shares to Be Offered to Stockholders.

New York, March 19 (AP).—A plan to offer rights to shareholders to subscribe for additional common shares at $60 a share was approved today by directors of Continental Can Co. A total of 177,679 shares will be offered to stockholders in the ratio of one new share for each 15 shares owned.

C. C. Conway, chairman of the corporation, stated that proceeds of the offering are to be used partly for plant expansion and partly for additional working capital incident to an increased volume of business.

The funds to be raised by the stock offering, if all the shares are subscribed, would be $10,660,740. The proposal will be submitted to a special meeting of stockholders which has been called for April 20.

Warrants to subscribe to the additional stock are expected to be mailed to shareholders about May 5 following registration of the new shares with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Equity Corp. Votes Dividend Arrears

New York, March 19.—Directors of the Equity Corporation, investment company, have declared payment of all accumulated dividends on the corporation's $3 convertible preferred stock which were in arrears on March 1, 1936, the last regular dividend payment date.

The payment, which is to be made on April 6 to stockholders of record March 20, will aggregate more than $732,000 derived from profits realized on the sale of securities.

New York, March 19.—Cotton was a little more active today but the price movement was irregular. The close was steady at a net decline of 2 points on March but generally 2 to 9 points higher.

After showing early losses of 3 to 8 points the market rallied on covering and some buying through houses with foreign connections.

Closing quotations were at the best of the day on new crop months.

Exports today 41,550, making 4,872,768 so far this season. Port receipts, 16,254. U. S. port stocks, 2,209,381.

Steel Foundries Head Pleased Over Outlook

New York, March 19 (AP).—George E. Scott, president of American Steel Foundries Co., said today the company's outlook was better than at any time since 1929. Unfilled orders in the first part of March were substantially larger than those booked in the corresponding period last year, he added.

Dow, Jones & Co. says that tentative figures indicate that American Woolen Co. earned a net profit of $800,000 in the first two months this year, in contrast with a loss of approximately the same amount in the same period last year.

$50,000,000 Bills 2.6 Times Subscribed

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announces that the tenders for $50,000,000, or thereabouts, of 273-day Treasury bills, dated March 18, and maturing December 16, which were offered on March 13, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks.

The total amount applied for was $129,255,000, of which $50,025,000 was accepted. The accepted bids ranged in price from 99.950, equivalent to a rate of about 0.066 per cent per annum, to 99.916, equivalent to a rate of about 0.111 per cent per annum, on a bank discount basis.

Retail Advertising.

Chicago, March 19.—With unfavorable weather factors absent, retail advertising during the week ended March 7 exceeded that placed during the corresponding week of 1935 by 3.3 per cent, Advertising Age reported today. For the week ended February 29, the gain was 1.9 per cent.

Maryland Fund Assets.

Jersey City, N. J., March 19.—The Maryland Fund, Inc., a group investment fund operating under the supervision of Administrative and Research Corporation of New York, reports net assets of $6,807,623.21 for the quarter ended February 29. This is a gain of $1,950,863.09 over total assets at the end of the previous quarter.

Rail Employes Promised Help To Hold Jobs

Leaders in Congress Ready to Aid Workers Dropped in Consolidations.

By the Associated Press.

Congressional leaders reported yesterday that legislation to protect employes dismissed or relocated through rail consolidations would be "vigorously pressed" if management and labor failed to agree upon a voluntary plan.

Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, made this statement after conferring with Chairman Rayburn (Democrat), Texas, of a similar House committee. He added he would "much prefer" to see the two sides get together and make unnecessary pushing the Wheeler-Crosser plan to compel railroads to take care of displaced workers.

Earlier, President Roosevelt personally requested management and employes to resume negotiations after being informed a "virtual impasse" had been reached. He was assured fresh attempts would be made to come to an agreement.

Statement by Early.

A White House statement issued by Stephen T. Early, a secretary, also said the President had advised Wheeler and Rayburn not to let the negotiations interfere with consideration of pending compulsory legislation.

Some Senators, meanwhile, said thy hade been informd authoritatively the employers and employes would ultimately come to acceptable terms.

Under the bill introduced March 4, the Interstate Commerce Commission would create a special adjustment board of rail employers, employes and a disinterested party to conduct hearings on consolidation applications. The commission would have veto power over all such plans.

If any plan involved a reduction of employes, the railroads concerned would have to provide "comparable employment" for those displaced.

Compensation Plan Cited.

"If such employment were not available, the roads would be required to pay two-thirds of the discharged person's wages pending the finding of a comparable job, or at the option of the employe:

"A fair and just dismissal compensation which shall equal at least the earnings to be anticipated from one full year of continuing service, or an adequate pension for those who are eligible for retirement under any applicable provision for the payment of such pensions."

If employes were moved to other cities they must be paid "just compensation" for property losses and expenses.

Dominion Railroad To Ask Tax Waiver

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., March 19.—Officials of the Washington & Old Dominion Railroad, a corporation formed to take over the Washington & Old Dominion Railway, now in the hands of the receivers, will appear before the Loudoun County Board of Supervisors Monday to ask exemption from local taxation for five years, subject to payment of the full amount of delinquent taxes, including penalties and interest, amounting to approximately $14,000.

Howard E. Cole, treasurer of Loudoun County, and officers for the new company were in conference with the tax department at Richmond last week in order to learn the power the board has in matters of waiving taxes.

At a special meeting of the Loudoun County supervisors March 2, the new company offered to make a part payment of $6,729.34 in cash, if the board would waive interest and penalties to the sum of $2,217.70 and take a note for the balance of $4,470.30 to be curtailed at the rate of $300 per month.

$1,400 Judgment Reversed by Court

Richmond, Va., March 19 (AP).—A judgment of $1.400 in favor of Edna R. Webb in the corporation court of Newport News was reversed by the State Supreme Court of Appeals today.

Mrs. Webb had been awarded damages for injuries alleged to have been suffered when she slipped on the floor of a store of the W. T. Grant Co. in Newport News. Records of the case indicated that she fell while looking at a counter of merchandise, and that the floor had been treated 12 days previously with a preparation which she said made it slippery.

The appellate court refused an appeal to William T. Easley and others from a decree of the Mecklenburg County Circuit Court in which the defending parties were R. H. Easley and others. The suit was instituted to obtain an injunction preventing the sale of property under a deed of trust.

Emergency Crop Loans Available to Farmers

Princess Anne, Md., March 19 (AP). William Nock, field supervisor of the Salisbury Production Credit Association, has opened offices in the Somerset County courthouse here to receive applications from farmers for emergency crop loans for the Spring planting season.

Loans are limited to not more than $200 to any one person or not less than $10. Nock said loans will be granted on an acre basis according to the actual cost of seed and fertilizer for the crops to be planted. He added that payment of previous loans will be considered in granting applications.

$192,048 Is Allotted For WPA in Virginia

Richmond, Va., March 19 (AP).—Allotments totaling $192,048 for Virginia Works Progress Administration projects were announced here by William A. Smith, State administrator.

Largest item in the list is $7,790 earmarked for a Statewide survey of Negro white collar workers. Other projects call for courthouse renovations, art projects and sewing rooms.

Flood Just Old Story To Bladensburg Folk

Yesterday's flood was an old, old story to residents of Bladensburg.

At 1:15 in the afternoon, when a Post reporter telephoned the Bladensburg Rescue Squad, he was told the water was 5 feet deep.

"What is it usually?" asked the reporter.

"Oh, 10 feet deep," was the reply.

"Ten feet deep!" How can that be?"

"Oh, sure it is," explained the rescue worker. "By usually I mean it's that deep whenever we have a flood."

House Passes Bill to Exempt RFC Holdings

Once-Defeated Measure to Eliminate Tax on Stocks Approved, 218-144.

An obstreperous House, which kicked over the traces three weeks ago and defeated a bill to exempt bank stock held by the RFC from State and local taxation, yesterday yielded to the gentle persuasion of leaders and passed the controversial measure.

The vote was 218 to 144. Just previously, the bill was approved by a 172 to 87 standing vote, but a roll call count was demanded by the opposition, led by Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas.

Bankhead Lines Up Vote.

Most Democrats fell into line and voted for the measure, after Majority Leader Bankhead appealed to members to cast partisanship aside. Bankhead said it would be discriminatory to impose State and local taxes on bank stock held by the RFC, when other Federal property is exempt from such taxes.

"Why should we single out the securities held by this eleemosynary institution and say to the States, 'Tax these,'" said Bankhead.

An effort was made to amend the bill to permit exemptions of bank paper held by the RFC, but to permit taxation of all future holdings. This was defeated, 129 to 27.

Opponents of the measure charged it would deprive State and local authorities of a $400,000,000 taxable source.

Patman, largely instrumental in defeating the bill when it came up three weeks ago, charged it was a "bankers' bonus bill."

"If you vote for this you will have to vote to exempt insurance company, home owners and farmers' securities held by Government agencies, if you want to be consistent," Patman declared.

Sponsored by Jones.

The legislation followed a Supreme Court ruling several weeks ago that stock in a Baltimore bank held by the RFC was subject to State and local taxation. While not an Administration measure in the strict sense, it was sponsored by RFC Chairman Jesse Jones.

Fredericksburg's Flood Fear Passes

Fredericksburg, Va., March 19 (AP). Fears of a dangerous flood here were allayed today as the waters of the Rappahannock River receded slowly from a high mark of 16½ feet above normal, registered at midnight, and reports from the upper Rappahannock section indicated that most of the water had come down the river. Rains in the upper country last night were slight, reports said.

While the flow of water coming over the dam was the highest since 1924, 6½ feet being recorded at midnight, water in the river at the city was lower than in January, during the flood when the ice broke and choked the river just below the city, backing water to a height of 20 feet above normal. Only slight damage was done here by the current flood waters.

Charlottesville G. O. P. Delegates Are Chosen

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville Va., March 19.—Republicans, at a mass meeting yesterday, unanimously adopted resolutions favoring a protective tariff, a classified civil service, and governmental economy.

"We favor," said the resolutions, "relief for persons who through no fault of their own are deprived of means of earning a livelihood, but are opposed to any measure taken by State or national government which will enable persons who are unwilling to work to be supported at the expense of the thrifty and industrious.

Delegates and alternates elected to represent the city at the Eighth District convention at Culpeper, April 2, and at the State convention at Roanoke, April 11, are: Delegates, Claude R. Yardley, J. E. Kinney, C. L. Avery, Mrs. H. C. Thomas, Dr. J. C. Coulter, Walter L. Smith, William B. Murphy and J. H. Miller; alternates, George Bickers, E. H. McPherson, Dr. W. B. Brown, T. I. Geddam, George Richey, F. Roy Early, Robert Taylor and F. A. Morse.

$15,511 Boost Asked In Albemarle Budget

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., March 19.—The proposed budget for Albemarle County, prepared by Henry Haden, county executive, and referred to the board of supervisors for a hearing on April 15, asks for a net increase of $15,511 over the past year.

No increase in taxes is proposed, however, since it is believed that ABC funds which the county expects to receive will take care of the bulk of added expenses. Part will be taken care of by the decreased budget for other departments. Poor relief represents the largest increase requested, with an added expense of $7,495 provided in the proposed budget. An increase of $4.000 is asked for food.

Smaller increases are also asked for the advancement of agriculture and home economics.

Roosevelt Calls On Farmers to Limit Acreage

Appeals for Co-operation With U. S. Soil Conservation Program.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt appealed yesterday to the Nation's farmers to refrain from increasing their acreages of commercial cash crops and to co-operate with the Administration's soil conservation program.

Asserting that if farmers failed to take advantage of the new program, the consequent excessive production of cash crops might result in the "wrecking of their prices and the mining of their soil, he added:

"This is an appeal to all farmers, to co-operate for their own and the national good, to help in preventing excessive production."

Roosevelt took note of a crop report issued this week, indicating that farmers were planning sharp increases in acreages of many crops. He urged farmers not to complete their planting plans until they study the new program.

Meanwhile, AAA officials said they expected to uncover details of the new program late today. Announcement was delayed pending passage of the independent offices appropriation bill, which contained an allotment of $440,000,000 in subsidy payments for soil conservation.

Judicial Limits.

Roosevelt called attention to the fact that "Congress has gone as far as it could, within judicial limitations, to enable farmers to keep the gains they have made in the last three years, and to permit their buying power to continue the powerful upward lift it has given to national recovery.

"I hope that farmers will not complete their plans for this year's crops until they have had opportunity to study the new act, and that all those to whom it offers advantages may co-operate in the program now being launched," he said.

The need for protecting both the soil and farm prices, the President said, today is "even greater than when the act was passed."

The March 1 intentions-to-plant report, issued by the Agriculture Department this week, said reports from 42,000 farmers indicated the following acreage increases for 1936:

Spring wheat, 19 per cent; corn, 6 per cent; rice, 11 per cent; tobacco, 9 per cent, and peanuts, 8 per cent.

Trade Reports.

Mr. Roosevelt said private trade reports indicated an increase of 15 per cent in cotton acreage this year.

"In conformance with the Supreme Court's decision," the President said, "the farmers' production control programs have been stopped, but their chronic surplus problem goes on."

The cotton carry-over remains, he said, but although production control has gone, "farmers are not entirely at the mercy of unbridled competition with their fellow producers, as they were in the years preceding 1933."

"The new farm act," he declared, "provides for financial assistance by the Government to those farmers who, heeding the warnings contained in the intentions-to-plant reports, wish to shift from the production of unneeded surpluses of soil-depleting crops to the production of needed soil-building crops."

Drunks, Set Free, Aid Rescue Work

Wheeling, W. Va., March 19 (AP). Police today pressed into service men jailed for drunkenness to aid emergency rescue work in Wheeling.

Police Sergt. Leslie Harris said "We got WPA workers, people on relief, even the drunks in jail, and all other men we could find, to help in the rescue work.

"I just don't know whether we got everybody out.

"It hit us Sunday. We don't know how to act. We haven't had a disaster here in years.

"That explosion that killed four people was terrible. The house just blew up in bits."

Newspapermen, sleepless after an all-night vigil, sought to sift facts from a wave of conflicting rumors.

Only a few trunk telephone lines were open into the city.

Ship Is Believed Safe After Distress Signal

Norfolk, Va., March 19 (AP).—The steamer Calmer, which reported by radio yesterday she was having trouble in a rough sea off Cape Hatteras, was believed by the Coast Guard today to be proceeding on her way. The cutter Unalga was directed to give any aid necessary. At last reports the ship was again under control. Her cargo of steel rails and sheets shifted during the storm, causing apprehension for a time.

Huff Heads Board Of 5-County Home

Waynesboro, Va., March 19 (AP). George T. Huff, Charlottesville councilman, was elected chairman of the the board of the Five-County District Home at a meeting here today. Charles E. Yancey was re-elected secretary.

The District Home shelters the indigent of Augusta, Albemarle, Alleghany, Rockbridge and Bath counties and the City of Charlottesville.

Republicans Issue Call.

Warrenton, Va., March 19 (AP).—Republicans of Fauquier County have been summoned by Chairman John B. Grayson to meet at Warrenton at 1 p. m. March 28 to elect delegates to the district convention at Culpeper and the State meeting at Roanoke. Eight delegates will be chosen to the district assembly to be held at Culpeper April 2.

Lions to Enter Float.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., March 19.—The Winchester Lions Club is the third local organization to announce that it will enter a float in the artistic division of the parade "Trail of the Pink Petals," to be staged on the second day of the Apple Blossom Festival. Work on designing the many floats will start April 1.

Rail Employes Promised Help To Hold Jobs

Leaders in Congress Ready to Aid Workers Dropped in Consolidations.

By the Associated Press.

Congressional leaders reported yesterday that legislation to protect employes dismissed or relocated through rail consolidations would be "vigorously pressed" if management and labor failed to agree upon a voluntary plan.

Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, made this statement after conferring with Chairman Rayburn (Democrat), Texas, of a similar House committee. He added he would "much prefer" to see the two sides get together and make unnecessary pushing the Wheeler-Crosser plan to compel railroads to take care of displaced workers.

Earlier, President Roosevelt personally requested management and employes to resume negotiations after being informed a "virtual impasse" had been reached. He was assured fresh attempts would be made to come to an agreement.

Statement by Early.

A White House statement issued by Stephen T. Early, a secretary, also said the President had advised Wheeler and Rayburn not to let the negotiations interfere with consideration of pending compulsory legislation.

Some Senators, meanwhile, said thy hade been informd authoritatively the employers and employes would ultimately come to acceptable terms.

Under the bill introduced March 4, the Interstate Commerce Commission would create a special adjustment board of rail employers, employes and a disinterested party to conduct hearings on consolidation applications. The commission would have veto power over all such plans.

If any plan involved a reduction of employes, the railroads concerned would have to provide "comparable employment" for those displaced.

Compensation Plan Cited.

"If such employment were not available, the roads would be required to pay two-thirds of the discharged person's wages pending the finding of a comparable job, or at the option of the employe:

"A fair and just dismissal compensation which shall equal at least the earnings to be anticipated from one full year of continuing service, or an adequate pension for those who are eligible for retirement under any applicable provision for the payment of such pensions."

If employes were moved to other cities they must be paid "just compensation" for property losses and expenses.

Dominion Railroad To Ask Tax Waiver

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., March 19.—Officials of the Washington & Old Dominion Railroad, a corporation formed to take over the Washington & Old Dominion Railway, now in the hands of the receivers, will appear before the Loudoun County Board of Supervisors Monday to ask exemption from local taxation for five years, subject to payment of the full amount of delinquent taxes, including penalties and interest, amounting to approximately $14,000.

Howard E. Cole, treasurer of Loudoun County, and officers for the new company were in conference with the tax department at Richmond last week in order to learn the power the board has in matters of waiving taxes.

At a special meeting of the Loudoun County supervisors March 2, the new company offered to make a part payment of $6,729.34 in cash, if the board would waive interest and penalties to the sum of $2,217.70 and take a note for the balance of $4,470.30 to be curtailed at the rate of $300 per month.

$1,400 Judgment Reversed by Court

Richmond, Va., March 19 (AP).—A judgment of $1.400 in favor of Edna R. Webb in the corporation court of Newport News was reversed by the State Supreme Court of Appeals today.

Mrs. Webb had been awarded damages for injuries alleged to have been suffered when she slipped on the floor of a store of the W. T. Grant Co. in Newport News. Records of the case indicated that she fell while looking at a counter of merchandise, and that the floor had been treated 12 days previously with a preparation which she said made it slippery.

The appellate court refused an appeal to William T. Easley and others from a decree of the Mecklenburg County Circuit Court in which the defending parties were R. H. Easley and others. The suit was instituted to obtain an injunction preventing the sale of property under a deed of trust.

Emergency Crop Loans Available to Farmers

Princess Anne, Md., March 19 (AP). William Nock, field supervisor of the Salisbury Production Credit Association, has opened offices in the Somerset County courthouse here to receive applications from farmers for emergency crop loans for the Spring planting season.

Loans are limited to not more than $200 to any one person or not less than $10. Nock said loans will be granted on an acre basis according to the actual cost of seed and fertilizer for the crops to be planted. He added that payment of previous loans will be considered in granting applications.

$192,048 Is Allotted For WPA in Virginia

Richmond, Va., March 19 (AP).—Allotments totaling $192,048 for Virginia Works Progress Administration projects were announced here by William A. Smith, State administrator.

Largest item in the list is $7,790 earmarked for a Statewide survey of Negro white collar workers. Other projects call for courthouse renovations, art projects and sewing rooms.

Flood Just Old Story To Bladensburg Folk

Yesterday's flood was an old, old story to residents of Bladensburg.

At 1:15 in the afternoon, when a Post reporter telephoned the Bladensburg Rescue Squad, he was told the water was 5 feet deep.

"What is it usually?" asked the reporter.

"Oh, 10 feet deep," was the reply.

"Ten feet deep!" How can that be?"

"Oh, sure it is," explained the rescue worker. "By usually I mean it's that deep whenever we have a flood."

House Passes Bill to Exempt RFC Holdings

Once-Defeated Measure to Eliminate Tax on Stocks Approved, 218-144.

An obstreperous House, which kicked over the traces three weeks ago and defeated a bill to exempt bank stock held by the RFC from State and local taxation, yesterday yielded to the gentle persuasion of leaders and passed the controversial measure.

The vote was 218 to 144. Just previously, the bill was approved by a 172 to 87 standing vote, but a roll call count was demanded by the opposition, led by Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas.

Bankhead Lines Up Vote.

Most Democrats fell into line and voted for the measure, after Majority Leader Bankhead appealed to members to cast partisanship aside Bankhead said it would be discriminatory to impose State and local taxes on bank stock held by the RFC, when other Federal property is exempt from such taxes.

"Why should we single out the securities held by this eleemosynary institution and say to the States, 'Tax these,'" said Bankhead.

An effort was made to amend the bill to permit exemptions of bank paper held by the RFC, but to permit taxation of all future holdings. This was defeated, 129 to 27.

Opponents of the measure charged it would deprive State and local authorities of a $400,000,000 taxable source.

Patman, largely instrumental in defeating the bill when it came up three weeks ago, charged it was a "bankers' bonus bill."

"If you vote for this you will have to vote to exempt insurance company, home owners and farmers' securities held by Government agencies, if you want to be consistent," Patman declared.

Sponsored by Jones.

The legislation followed a Supreme Court ruling several weeks ago that stock in a Baltimore bank held by the RFC was subject to State and local taxation. While not an Administration measure in the strict sense, it was sponsored by RFC Chairman Jesse Jones.

Fredericksburg's Flood Fear Passes

Fredericksburg, Va., March 19 (AP). Fears of a dangerous flood here were allayed today as the waters of the Rappahannock River receded slowly from a high mark of 16½ feet above normal, registered at midnight, and reports from the upper Rappahannock section indicated that most of the water had come down the river. Rains in the upper country last night were slight, reports said.

While the flow of water coming over the dam was the highest since 1924, 6½ feet being recorded at midnight, water in the river at the city was lower than in January, during the flood when the ice broke and choked the river just below the city, backing water to a height of 20 feet above normal. Only slight damage was done here by the current flood waters.

Charlottesville G. O. P. Delegates Are Chosen

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville Va., March 19.—Republicans, at a mass meeting yesterday, unanimously adopted resolutions favoring a protective tariff, a classified civil service, and governmental economy.

"We favor," said the resolutions, "relief for persons who through no fault of their own are deprived of means of earning a livelihood, but are opposed to any measure taken by State or national government which will enable persons who are unwilling to work to be supported at the expense of the thrifty and industrious.

Delegates and alternates elected to represent the city at the Eighth District convention at Culpeper, April 2, and at the State convention at Roanoke, April 11, are: Delegates, Claude R. Yardley, J. E. Kinney, C. L. Avery, Mrs. H. C. Thomas, Dr. J. C. Coulter, Walter L. Smith, William B. Murphy and J. H. Miller; alternates, George Bickers, E. H. McPherson, Dr. W. B. Brown, T. I. Geddam. George Richey, F. Roy Early, Robert Taylor and F. A. Morse.

$15,511 Boost Asked In Albemarle Budget

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., March 19.—The proposed budget for Albemarle County, prepared by Henry Haden, county executive, and referred to the board of supervisors for a hearing on April 15, asks for a net increase of $15,511 over the past year.

No increase in taxes is proposed, however, since it is believed that ABC funds which the county expects to receive will take care of the bulk of added expenses. Part will be taken care of by the decreased budget for other departments. Poor relief represents the largest increase requested, with an added expense of $7,495 provided in the proposed budget. An increase of $4.000 is asked for food.

Smaller increases are also asked for the advancement of agriculture and home economics.

Roosevelt Calls On Farmers to Limit Acreage

Appeals for Co-operation With U. S. Soil Conservation Program.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt appealed yesterday to the Nation's farmers to refrain from increasing their acreages of commercial cash crops and to co-operate with the Administration's soil conservation program.

Asserting that if farmers failed to take advantage of the new program, the consequent excessive production of cash crops might result in the "wrecking of their prices and the mining of their soil, he added:

"This is an appeal to all farmers, to co-operate for their own and the national good, to help in preventing excessive production."

Roosevelt took note of a crop report issued this week, indicating that farmers were planning sharp increases in acreages of many crops. He urged farmers not to complete their planting plans until they study the new program.

Meanwhile, AAA officials said they expected to uncover details of the new program late today. Announcement was delayed pending passage of the independent offices appropriation bill, which contained an allotment of $440,000,000 in subsidy payments for soil conservation.

Judicial Limits.

Roosevelt called attention to the fact that "Congress has gone as far as it could, within judicial limitations, to enable farmers to keep the gains they have made in the last three years, and to permit their buying power to continue the powerful upward lift it has given to national recovery.

"I hope that farmers will not complete their plans for this year's crops until they have had opportunity to study the new act, and that all those to whom it offers advantages may co-operate in the program now being launched," he said.

The need for protecting both the soil and farm prices, the President said, today is "even greater than when the act was passed."

The March 1 intentions-to-plant report, issued by the Agriculture Department this week, said reports from 42,000 farmers indicated the following acreage increases for 1936:

Spring wheat, 19 per cent; corn, 6 per cent; rice, 11 per cent; tobacco, 9 per cent, and peanuts, 8 per cent.

Trade Reports.

Mr. Roosevelt said private trade reports indicated an increase of 15 per cent in cotton acreage this year.

"In conformance with the Supreme Court's decision," the President said, "the farmers' production control programs have been stopped, but their chronic surplus problem goes on."

The cotton carry-over remains, he said, but although production control has gone, "farmers are not entirely at the mercy of unbridled competition with their fellow producers, as they were in the years preceding 1933."

"The new farm act," he declared, "provides for financial assistance by the Government to those farmers who, heeding the warnings contained in the intentions-to-plant reports, wish to shift from the production of unneeded surpluses of soil-depleting crops to the production of needed soil-building crops."

Drunks, Set Free, Aid Rescue Work

Wheeling, W. Va., March 19 (AP). Police today pressed into service men jailed for drunkenness to aid emergency rescue work in Wheeling.

Police Sergt. Leslie Harris said "We got WPA workers, people on relief, even the drunks in jail, and all other men we could find, to help in the rescue work.

"I just don't know whether we got everybody out.

"It hit us Sunday. We don't know how to act. We haven't had a disaster here in years.

"That explosion that killed four people was terrible. The house just blew up in bits."

Newspapermen, sleepless after an all-night vigil, sought to sift facts from a wave of conflicting rumors.

Ship Is Believed Safe After Distress Signal

Norfolk, Va., March 19 (AP).—The steamer Calmer, which reported by radio yesterday she was having trouble in a rough sea off Cape Hatteras, was believed by the Coast Guard today to be proceeding on her way. The cutter Unalga was directed to give any aid necessary. At last reports the ship was again under control. Her cargo of steel rails and sheets shifted during the storm, causing apprehension for a time.

Huff Heads Board Of 5-County Home

Waynesboro, Va., March 19 (AP). George T. Huff, Charlottesville councilman, was elected chairman of the the board of the Five-County District Home at a meeting here today. Charles E. Yancey was re-elected secretary.

The District Home shelters the indigent of Augusta, Albemarle, Alleghany, Rockbridge and Bath counties and the City of Charlottesville.

Republicans Issue Call.

Warrenton, Va., March 19 (AP).—Republicans of Fauquier County have been summoned by Chairman John B. Grayson to meet at Warrenton at 1 p. m. March 28 to elect delegates to the district convention at Culpeper and the State meeting at Roanoke. Eight delegates will be chosen to the district assembly to be held at Culpeper April 2.

Lions to Enter Float.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., March 19.—The Winchester Lions Club is the third local organization to announce that it will enter a float in the artistic division of the parade "Trail of the Pink Petals," to be staged on the second day of the second day of the Apple Blossom Festival. Work on designing the many floats will start April 1.

Arlington Assured Of Water Supply

An adequate supply of water was assured Arlington County yesterday in event its main lines beneath Chain Bridge, from which the water temporarily was shut off, should be damaged by the flooding Potomac.

Shortly after 1 p. m. the supply was cut off at the District's Dalecarlia reservoir, but officials said it would be turned on again as soon as danger to the bridge is lessened. County Manager Roy S. Braden, meanwhile, ordered the county's emergency connections turned on. The most important of these is with the Government-owned Fort Myer supply line at the intersection of Pershing drive and North Barton street.

This connection, finished only a few weeks ago, will supply two thirds of the county and the remaining third can be supplied for a period of four or five days with water from the county's reserve tanks.

Culbertson on Bridge

In today's hand East and West made only one bid each, other than the final penalty double. Yet, at a comparatively early stage in the play, declarer was able to determine, within a reasonable doubt, the exact distribution of the remaining cards.

South, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

♥ J 8 7
♦ K 10 7 4 3
♣ J 5 4

WEST
♠ Q 9 6
♥ K Q 6 3
♦ Q

EAST
♥ A 10 5 4
♦ J 8 2

SOUTH
♠ A K J 10 8 4
♦ A 9 6 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	2 clubs	Pass	3 clubs
3 spades	Double [final bid]

West's double was a trifle too close despite his honor strength and his partner's raise. He was, no doubt, influenced by the fact that he knew South to be a liberal bidder and the hope that this was one of the times when he had his "neck stretched."

The club king was the opening lead, followed by the ace. South ruffed and led three top trumps, West winning the third round and shifting to the heart king. The next play was a low heart, East's ace winning, and a third round was led. South ruffed and now did his "counting."

West was marked with five clubs, both from his overcall and from East's raise, that in the absence of the ace, king, and jack must have been based on four cards.

West had shown three spades, East two. Now for the hearts and diamonds. East certainly would have chosen to bid two hearts rather than three clubs if he had held five or six to the ace. Therefore, he could hold only four, since West also would have bid hearts with five or more. Thus West was placed with a singleton diamond.

Confidently, South led a small diamond to the king and finessed for the jack on the return. In this way his doubled contract was fulfilled.

Wilentz Visits Condon; Silent On 'Social Call'

Refuses to Reveal if 'Jafsie' Will Talk With Hoffman on Hauptmann Case.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 19.—Attorney General David T. Wilentz, of New Jersey, visited Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon at his Bronx home today, but emerged non-committal on whether Condon would confer with Gov. Harold Hoffman, of New Jersey, on the Hauptmann case.

Condon was a leading prosecution witness in the trial of Bruno Hauptmann for the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby. He recently returned from a cruise to Panama.

Gov. Hoffman, who gave Hauptmann one reprieve from death in the electric chair, has said he wants to talk with Condon about various phases of the case and Condon's testimony at the trial.

Wilentz said his visit to Condon was a "social call."

Hour's Conversation.

When he emerged with the smiling "Jafsie," after an hour's conversation, he was asked if Condon had agreed to confer with the Governor.

"That's up to him to say," Wilentz answered.

The same query brought from Condon "No comment," which was his answer to all questions when he came ashore last Tuesday.

Wilentz disclosed he had visited the Condon home twice before, "in the early stages of the case." He did not amplify on the statement.

During Wilentz's trip here, it was learned the State had been aware of the claims of Abraham Samuelson that he had cut the wood for the ladder, left behind by the Lindbergh baby kidnaper, on Bruno Hauptmann's order.

Disclosed Today.

Samuelson told Gov. Hoffman two months ago, the Governor disclosed today, that two men other than Hauptmann called at his cabinet-making shop for the ladder, and that when he examined it after the kidnaping he found two of the pieces of wood then in it "never came from his shop."

State police investigated Samuelson's story thoroughly, and compared the wood, it was said, and dismissed Samuelson's story as unfounded.

The Governor commented at Trenton that if the cabinet maker's story were true, it would upset the testimony the wood came from Hauptmann's attic, and that the kidnaping was a one-man job.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

FLOOD highlights among the Government employes:

One of the most exciting spots in Washington yesterday was the corner of Constitution avenue and Seventeenth street, where Tidal Basin crept up to the doorsteps of the Navy Building. Work went on, but not on "as usual," in the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, which is located on the first floor along the Seventeenth street side. These offices were used by flood fighters and engineers as a dry-land corridor from the Constitution avenue side to the south. Tractors, trucks and hundreds of workers swarmed along the hastily thrown up dikes just outside the big windows on three sides of the Navy and Munitions Building.

BAKER.

Employes of National Archives, whose building occupies the lowest point in the Triangle, were not concerned yesterday as the entire staff works above ground level.

Taking a lesson from the flooded basement during the fire at the new Postoffice Department Building a few weeks ago, Postoffice and Home Owners Loan Corporation officials quickly ordered removal of stocks and supplies at the first warning of flood danger Wednesday night.

Labor Department ordered 34 cars removed from its underground garage and the entrance on Fourteenth street was sandbagged. Labor keeps no supplies in its basement, the major portion of which is occupied by the garage, cafeteria and machinery.

The Agriculture Administration Building and its huge annex, the South Building, although being nearest the Tidal Basin and river, were not affected as they are located on comparatively high ground. The Agriculture employes were inconvenienced as were their neighbors, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing employes just to the west as street car traffic on south Fourteenth street was halted early yesterday. Buses were substituted and shuttled from Pennsylvania avenue to Water street.

The Census Bureau, which occupies the south end of Commerce Building, moved its stocks to safety from the basement. Precautions were taken in other sections of the Commerce basement—even in the Bureau of Fisheries and the aquarium. Many valuable instruments of the Coast and Geodetic Survey were moved to upper floors.

Parking space, always at a premium, was virtually nonexistent yesterday afternoon along the southern fringe of the triangle area. Many employes were late to work yesterday morning and still more late in getting home last night.

Switchboard operators in this area reported an avalanche of calls from relatives and friends of employes, inquiring as to the flood prospects around their respective buildings.

Winners in the Agriculture Recreational and Athletic Association's duplicate pair games were J. L. Wilson and Mrs. M. Hogkins (C); Mrs. and Mrs. Walter E. Hughes, V. B. Bonney and Dan Dahle, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Stone (C). The next games will be held March 28 at 1603 K street northwest, according to Miss Ethel E. Terry (P), secretary.

Interior Supper Dance.

Tonight employes of purchasing office, Interior, will gather at the Russian Troika at 9:30 for a supper dance. Under chairmanship of Mrs. Mildred S. Hofer (F), the following are arranging the affair: Miss Eleanor Carr, Mrs. Marian McCeney, Miss Mary Chamness, Silas Starry, Norman Under, Ralph Hale, Albert E. Reising and Jose Montoya. Commander Mark H. Burnham will be master of ceremonies.

Cyril Costello, General Accounting Office, is in charge of the entertainment for the Rhode Island State Society meeting at 9 p. m. today at 1527 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C appears after your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor today only between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Buddy Rogers and his California Cavaliers and other acts; screen, Irvin S. Cobb in "Everybody's Old Man"); or to P, Loew's Palace (Charlie Chaplin in "Modern Times"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (Bing Crosby, Ethel Merman and Charles Ruggles in "Anything Goes").

Dr. Alexander Wetmore, assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, will speak tomorrow night on "Birds of the District of Columbia" at the biweekly meeting of the Biological Society of Washington at the Cosmos Club. His talk will be illustrated with slides.

Opens Galleries in South.

Holger Cahill, director of the WPA Federal art project, announces that 14 demonstration art galleries have recently been opened up in the South. In addition to exhibitions changed every two weeks, the galleries have on their program the cataloguing of the art resources of the community, free public art lectures and classes, and other art educational services. They are located as follows:

Big Stone Gap., Va.; Asheville and Winston-Salem, N. C.; Oklahoma City and Tulsa, Okla.; St. Petersburg, Fla.; Nashville, Chattanooga and Knoxville, Tenn.; Florence and Columbia, S. C., and Mobile and Birmingham, Ala.

Game Supply Drop Blamed On Huntsmen

Weather Also Is Factor, Conservationist Tells Maryland Club.

By the Associated Press.

Westminster, Md., March 19.—Conservation and propagation of the wild life of Maryland were encouraged by State Game Warden E. Lee Lecompte tonight at the Forest and Stream Club dinner here.

The decrease in the game supply, Lecompte said, was due to the increase in the numbers of hunters, the large number of "raw recruits," disregard for the ethics of sportsmanship, the building of good roads, bringing hunters "within easy gunshot of all wild life," and the improvement in firearms.

He also pointed out that the severe weather of the past three years has tended to reduce the supply. He mentioned in particular the floods of August, 1933, the cold winters of 1934 and 1935 and the intervening "very wet summer" with heavy rainstorms in September.

Criticizing the majority of farmers who "graze a considerable portion of their lands, which destroys cover necessary for wild life," he asserted game management can be carried on by at least 90 per cent of the agriculturalists of the State.

The warden praised the interest displayed by the public in erecting thousands of feeding stations. Otherwise, he added, "I am sure we would have had very little broodstock left of any species of game for propagation purposes."

Swallows and Sparrows Open War on New Front

Tacoma, Wash., March 19 (AP).—War between swallows and sparrows broke out on a hitherto unreported front today—at Day Island, Tacoma suburb.

At almost exactly the same hour swallows chose to oust sparrows from the eaves of Mission San Juan Capistrano in California, an army of the violet-green species of swallows swooped down on Day Island, putting sparrows to flight and setting up summer homes.

Walter Chappell, Tocoma cigar dealer, said the influx of swallows here follows the San Juan Capistrano invasion almost to the hour every year, as does the departure on or about October 23.

4 Dead, 100 Ill, Prison Battle Flu Epidemic

Canon City, Colo., March 19 (AP).—Colorado prison physicians battled an influenza and pneumonia epidemic tonight which has taken the lives of four prisoners and sent 100 others to the 60-bed hospital. Two died today. The prison has been under quarantine for ten days.

Some convicts were reported ill in their cells. Deputy Warden Vincent Donahu also was ill.

Glacier Age Bones Uncovered in West

Los Angeles, March 19 (AP).—Bits of bone today gave to scientists evidence that man might have roamed southern California in the glacial epoch—nearly 25,000 years ago.

Prehistoric remains of an imperial elephant, largest of all land mammals, and what appeared to be a human being were unearthed by WPA workers, digging a storm drain.

Close together were fragments of tusks, two teeth and parts of a large vertebrae. Nearby were smaller bones, including a skull.

Dr. A. O. Bowden, of the University of Southern California, said he would attempt to identify positively these smaller bones as the remains of early man.

Order to Deport 'Woman In Red' Upheld by Court

Chicago, March 19 (AP).—The deportation order against Mrs. Anna Sage, the "woman in red" of the Dillinger slaying, was upheld today by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

The ruling had the effect of affirming the Immigration Bureau's dictate that she be deported to Rumania as an undesirable alien, unless the Supreme Court grants a review of the case.

In her fight against the order, Mrs. Sage, publicized as the wearer of the red dress which aided Federal agents to "spot" Dillinger the night he was slain as he left a theater, contended she had been promised immunity from deportation for her services.

Quebec Town Flooded; Hundreds Flee Homes

St. Hyacinthe, Quebec, March 19 (AP).—Rising waters of the Yamaska River today forced hundreds of St. Hyacinthe families from their homes as floods swept over the lower section of the city.

Factories were closed when electricity was turned off. Police patrolled the city in rowboats.

Three miles of river above St. Hyacinthe were blocked by ice, and it was feared bridges would be washed away.

The Hyacinthe-Montreal highway was closed. Since last night, 20 automobiles had been marooned near St. Damase and their occupants were rescued in rowboats.

France to Ask Bonds To Bolster Finances

Paris, March 19 (AP).—The French government was authoritatively reported tonight to be planning to ask Parliament for the right to issue additonal treasury bonds worth 5,000,000,000 francs ($330,000,000) to bolster finances.

It was said that the bill would be introduced in the Chamber of Deputies tomorrow. It would raise the limit on treasury bonds from 15,000,000,000 to 20,000,000,000 francs.

Deputies said that the government's needs for funds was aggravated by withdrawals from state savings banks during the present Rhineland crisis.

History of Phones Told by D. C. Head

Lloyd B. Wilson, president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., spoke at the weekly luncheon of the junior board of commerce yesterday at the Lee House.

He explained the organization of his company since Alexander Graham Bell first said "Mr. Watson, come here, I want you," up to today's system, under which the United States uses 50 per cent of the world's telephones.

William Stanley, recently retired assistant to the Attorney General, will address the Junior Board of Commerce at their regular luncheon next week at the Lee House.

Authorities, Not Mother, Pick Home for Babies

San Francisco, March 19 (AP).—The future home of the two Jones children, recently given away to strollers in a park, probably will be chosen by juvenile authorities of San Mateo County, it appeared today.

Prospective foster parents pleaded for them, but Juvenile Court Referee Mary Kohler said they would be held in custody temporarily.

Mrs. Linda Jones, 32, told Mrs. Kohler, she gave 2-year-old Marion Edward and his baby sister, Lois, to strollers in a park because she had no money to support them. She and her husband are separated.

Mrs. Einar Simonsen took Lois, aged 2½ months, and Mr. and Mrs. Ivar Nelson took Marion Edward. Protests from Jones placed the case before juvenile authorities.

Albania, Italy Sign Pact.

Tirana, Albania, March 19 (AP).—The official Albanian news agency announced a new economic and financial agreement between Italy and Albania was signed here today. It gives Albania new funds and Italy important oil concessions in this country.

Draft of Naval Treaty To Be Considered Today

London, March 19 (AP).—The naval treaty drafting committee reported tonight that it had completed its work and submitted a completed draft of the pact to the International Naval Conference.

The conference will meet tomorrow for the first time in two weeks, and authoritative quarters said the treaty itself would be signed by the United States, Great Britain and France on March 24.

A GREAT IMPORTED LIQUOR ... A NOBLE TASTE ... A DUTY FREE PRICE

Ask your dealer for RONRICO recipe book in bars—You'll hear "Make mine with RONRICO rum" in every smart bar and taproom. Why? Because RONRICO drinks taste good—they're smooth and mellow and flavorful. You'll recognize the superior quality of RONRICO and like its distinctive taste, the result of a secret distilling formula and the unique qualities of Puerto Rico sugar cane.

in homes—Good hosts are proudly offering RONRICO drinks to their guests. For here's a great liquor by any test, by any comparison . . . a versatile liquor that brings new taste-pleasure to any mixed drink where recipes ordinarily call for rum, whiskey, gin or brandy. And RONRICO'S domestic price, made possible only by duty-free importation from Puerto Rico, a U. S. possession, means a real saving in your entertainment budget.
